

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 2026

Call for help ends with detention by ICE

Woman arrested amid mental health crisis then held in Burlington field office

By Giulia McDonnell
Nieto del Rio
GLOBE STAFF

A recent miscarriage had taken a toll on Iara do Carmo Santana. Distraught and suffering from an infection, she got into an argument with her fiancé at the start of Labor Day weekend, and he quickly concluded she was experiencing a mental health crisis.

Worried for her safety, he called 911 for help. Instead, she was arrested and charged with domestic violence. More worrisome for the couple, she now faces the specter of deportation after spending roughly four days in an ICE field office in Burlington, often deprived of medicine for her infection, which grew worse.

Do Carmo Santana was ordered released last week by a federal judge, who admonished immigration authorities over the situation at the Burlington facility, which has long drawn criticism for its grim conditions and lack of medical care.

“If you take someone into custody, as they do, that’s fine. But you owe them medical care,” District Judge Leo T. Sorokin told the US attorney’s office in court. “I view that as a serious issue.”

Do Carmo Santana’s experience has again put a spotlight on ICE’s practices in Massachusetts for detaining female immigrants targeted for deportation. The agency uses a

ICE, Page A10

KEITO NEWMAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS VIA ASSOCIATED PRESS/FILE

US getting a cold shoulder from Canada

Businesses fear visitor numbers and dollars will fall further amid tariffs and taunts

GENE J. PUSKAR/ASSOCIATED PRESS/FILE

Top: People looked out on Lake Ontario and the Toronto Skyline from Toronto Harbor. Above: US and Canadian flags flew at a mall in Buffalo, N.Y.

By Christopher Muther
GLOBE STAFF

At a time when most people were still deep in the hazy, halcyon days of summer vacation, Jay Peak Ski Resort general manager Steve Wright was back in work mode last month, anxious about the winter ahead.

The Vermont resort enjoyed a 2025-2026 season with 450 inches of snow. East Coast skiers who normally jetted to the slopes out West stayed closer to home to enjoy the windfall totals. The snow helped Jay Peak draw additional domestic skiers to make up for a de-

Canadian travel to the United States

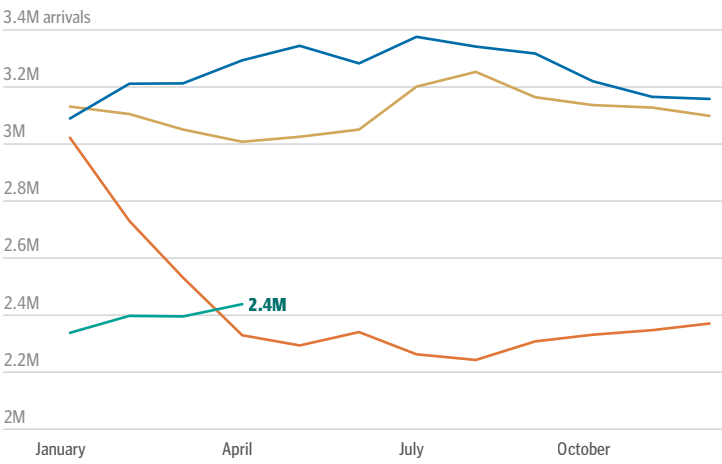

Chart: YOOHYUN JUNG / GLOBE STAFF • Source: Statistics Canada

mographic it was missing: Canadians.

“We probably saw a drop in Canadian business of, I would say anecdotally, between 20 to 25 percent,” Wright said. “But we saw an increase in the US skier of about 40 percent. So we had a record season last year.”

But the fortunes of ski resorts rise and fall with snow totals. And as tensions between the United States and Canada simmer once again, Wright decided to leave nothing to chance. He issued a statement last month declaring that, despite the po-

CANADA, Page A7

Soaring diesel fuel prices hit economy

When shipping costs more so does nearly everything

By Hiawatha Bray
GLOBE STAFF

As wars in the Middle East and Ukraine drive the price of diesel fuel to record highs, inflation-weary consumers can expect to pay more for practically everything.

As of Friday, the average retail price of diesel fuel stood at $6.06 per gallon, according to AAA, up from $3.71 a year ago.

The New England average price is virtually identical to the national average, but far lower than that in California, which at $7.98 is the highest in the nation.

“It makes us a lot more expensive than we used to be,” said Charlie Itz, president of Itz-Ohlson Transport, a trucking company in Lynnfield.

► President Trump called on Ukraine to halt strikes on Russian oil refineries. A4.

It’s happening because, even though the US is the world’s leading producer of diesel, much of the nation’s production is exported to countries that can no longer obtain fuel from refineries in the Middle East or Russia due to military conflicts.

“The United States is experiencing this be-

DIESEL, Page A7

AVERAGE RETAIL PRICE OF DIESEL FUEL PER GALLON
SEPT. 2025:	SEPT. 2026:
$3.71	$6.06

Looking for love on the Blue Line

After missing her chance, she’s put up a note

By Diti Kohli
GLOBE STAFF

Daniela Filosa knows she didn’t imagine the chemistry.

It was a little after 9 p.m. on Aug. 26. She was at the Aquarium MBTA station waiting for a Blue Line train toward Wonderland, scrolling on her phone when she looked up, and, instantly, he was there. A man — tall, blue eyes, brown hair, in a suit — was looking at her. No, into her, Filosa said.

They boarded the train through different doors, but while Filosa filed in, he swung around and plopped into the seat across from her. The train surged under the harbor and into East Boston. They stole glances. Five, 10, 15 minutes of “will-they, won’t-they” played in her head. He had no ring on his left hand.

He smiled at her before getting off at Orient

BLUE LINE, Page A10

Make two days of it

Monday: Mostly sunny. High: 74-79. Low: 53-58.
Tuesday: Sunny early. High: 65-70. Low: 56-61. Sunrise: 6:23 Sunset: 6:56
Comics and Weather, D4-5.
Obituaries, C9.

VOL. 310, NO. 76

*
Suggested retail price
$4.00

0 947725 4

President Trump played down the need for his administration to check the development of artificial intelligence, saying he worried about ceding America’s edge over China in a global competition. A2.

A planned meeting between Iran and several Gulf Arab countries it attacked during the war was indefinitely postponed, underscoring how diplomatic efforts have struggled to defuse a widening Mideast conflict. A6.

New technology is making up a bigger chunk of back-to-school budgets this year. D1.

The Red Sox beat the Royals 4-1 at Fenway Park, clinching a winning record for the year. C1.

A SACRIFICE HONORED

Thomas Florentino, a Marine Corps veteran of the Vietnam War, played taps during a rededication of the South Boston Vietnam Memorial Sunday. Lou Kneeland (left), an Air Force veteran of the war, saluted during the ceremony at St. Brigid Church. B1, B2.

JESSICA RINALDI/GLOBE STAFF

The Nation

DAILY BRIEFING

EPA to erase limits on power plant pollution

The Trump administration plans to announce Monday that the United States will no longer limit the planet-warming pollution that power plants pump into the air while burning coal and gas, according to two people familiar with the proposal.

The shift by the Environmental Protection Agency would complete the administration's erasure of the most consequential climate policies of Presidents Joe Biden and Barack Obama. If the move survives expected legal challenges, it could also prevent future administrations from regulating greenhouse gas emissions from power plants.

The power sector is the second largest source of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases in the United States. This pollution accumulates in the atmosphere, where it traps the sun's heat, raising temperatures and supercharging extreme weather events around the globe.

Lee Zeldin, the EPA administrator, is expected to announce the change during a meeting of energy ministers from the Group of 20 nations in Houston.

NEW YORK TIMES

Trump says he'll consider releasing 9/11 records

WASHINGTON — President Trump said Sunday that he will look into requests from families of Sept. 11 victims to release records that could shed light on Saudi Arabia's alleged role in the attacks 25 years ago.

Several families have long alleged that a group of extremist religious leaders in Saudi Arabia gained influence in the Saudi government and aided the hijackers. Fifteen of the 19 hijackers were Saudis, but the Saudi government has long denied any involvement in the attacks.

The families have asked Trump to declassify and release the relevant records. Asked about it Sunday during his trip to Ireland, the president said he would consider it.

"I'm going to look at it when I get back," Trump said just before boarding Air Force One to return to Washington after a weekend in Ireland. "I know they asked me Friday."

The relatives of 9/11 victims have been engaged in a lengthy legal battle against the Saudis. One of them, Terry Strada, called on Trump during the remembrance in New York City Friday to "tell the Saudis to stop lying."

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pa. woman likely died of measles complications

A 40-year-old unvaccinated woman in Pennsylvania died Saturday, most likely because of measles complications, the Jefferson County coroner, Greg Furlong, said Sunday.

The news comes as Pennsylvania faces a rapidly expanding outbreak that has already sickened more than 670 people and hospitalized 124. The state department of health reported two deaths related to the outbreak last month, which set off a frenzied debate over whether the deaths were a result of measles or merely coincided with the infection.

In this woman's case, the immediate cause of death was respiratory failure "due to suspected measles," according to a preliminary death certificate viewed by the Times. Furlong said that testing had not yet confirmed the woman had measles, though she had many of the symptoms of the virus — including the telltale rash that often starts as flat red spots on the face and travels down the body — and had recently been exposed to someone with measles.

NEW YORK TIMES

STEPHEN LAM/SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE VIA ASSOCIATED PRESS

BATTLE WEARY — Illuminated by the Lucas Fire burning in the distance, firefighters with the Cal Fire Madera-Mariposa-Merced Unit's Castle Fire Crew took a dinner break before returning to the fire line near Upper Lake, Calif., on Saturday. As of Sunday morning, 1,291 personnel were involved in battling the blaze, according to California fire officials. The wildfire began Thursday in Mendocino County.

'Whoever wins AI wins,' Trump says

Downplays fears of development speed, safety

By Darlene Superville and Didi Tang
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DUBLIN — President Trump Sunday played down the need for his administration to check the development of artificial intelligence, saying he worried about ceding America's edge over China in a global competition and that winning would help address the risks from the advancing technology.

While acknowledging the need for some regulation, Trump provided no specifics about potential rules and attributed warnings about the technology moving too quickly and with little oversight to "negative forces" he did not identify, though industry pioneers have raised such concerns.

"We can put guardrails, we can do this and that, but I think you have a lot of negative forces that are bringing it up that ... shouldn't be bringing it up, and they're bringing up things that won't happen," Trump told reporters during a weekend trip to Ireland. "But whoever wins with AI wins."

The Republican president spoke a day after Dario Amodei, chief executive of the artificial intelligence company Anthropic, said the industry should put the brakes on its fast-moving development to give safety measures time to catch up. Other tech leaders, including Elon Musk and Sam Altman, chief executive of OpenAI, publicly agreed with Amodei.

Asked by a reporter whether the industry should slow down or be regulated, Trump said after watching a golfer tee off in the Irish Open at his resort in Doonbeg that the United States is leading China in the development of AI and "frankly, I want to keep it that way because whoever wins AI wins."

Chinese President Xi Jinping is due at the White House later in September to meet with Trump, and AI is likely to be among the items they discuss.

AI has become a major election-year issue in the United States, as some of the country's largest companies seed small towns with a national network of computing warehouses while Americans from both parties increasingly raise alarms about less farmland and water supplies and rising electricity bills.

MIKE STEWART/ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Core Scientific data center in Dalton, Ga. Many communities are trying to block these warehouses.

Trump has kept up his support for data centers even as both Republicans and Democrats run from them, and many communities try to block them.

Former president Barack Obama, a Democrat, said his party should make AI a campaign issue.

"I would talk about this, and I would say, 'Here's our plan for safety, here's our plan for making sure our kids are not corrupted by this.' ... I would be thinking about the economic impacts in very concrete ways and understanding what does it mean if there's going to be job displacement. Where is that going to hit? How are we going to respond?" he said at an event last week with the top Democrat in the US House, New York Representative Hakeem Jeffries, according to a transcript released by his office.

Kevin Hassett, director of the National Economic Council at the White House, said he expects meetings will be held this week involving administration officials who oversee cyber and science and technology policy to discuss the next steps. Trump also could meet with members of Congress, some of whom have also been sounding alarms about the fast pace of AI development. "I think the president wants to hear from them as well," Hassett said.

US House Speaker Mike Johnson acknowledged the need for "some guardrails, some safety measures" so AI "doesn't run away." But, like Trump, he also wants to ensure the United States does not "lose our edge in the global competition on this with China because that would be a national security threat."

Johnson, a Louisiana Republican, said industry leaders need to be summoned for "one big meeting and work this out together in the same room."

"But we don't need everybody to panic right now," Johnson said.

Jeffries criticized Republican leaders for allowing members to go back to their districts for the final part of September.

"We should take decisive action now so that we can slow down, as the CEOs have recently acknowledged, ... the pace of development in order to protect the American people and ensure that AI is proceeding safely," Jeffries said. Action on AI will be a "high priority" when House Democrats meet Tuesday as a group.

Obama urges Democrats to act King Charles plans global cyber summit

Says technology should be focus of their agenda

By Evan Gorelick
NEW YORK TIMES

Barack Obama warned during a recent private fund-raising event that artificial intelligence technology could be "dangerous" if not properly managed, as he implored Democrats to aggressively develop political and governing agendas to prioritize the issue in the coming years.

In his remarks Thursday, which have not been previously reported, Obama urged House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries, a New York Democrat, to assemble a clear framework for a public conversation about AI policy, should Democrats win back the House in the midterm elections, according to a partial transcript provided by Obama's office.

He also suggested that candidates running for president in 2028 ought to make AI one of their "central agendas" and "have a very clear plan" for responding to safety and economic concerns around the technology.

The former president's recommendations amount to some of his most detailed comments yet about AI as a political issue for his party. At a moment when President Trump continues to downplay concerns about the technology, some Democrats see an opportunity for the party to draw a clear contrast in the midterms and beyond on an issue of growing significance. In a Democratic Party with no clear leader, many look to Obama for guidance, and his comments carry considerable weight.

The remarks come amid escalating worries about the risks associated with AI development, as well as growing calls for lawmakers and politicians to do more to tackle the topic. Some AI industry leaders are now calling for a slowdown after a summer in which swarms of misaligned AI agents broke free from their containers and proceeded to scheme against their owners, cheat on tests, and hack outside companies.

At the fund-raiser Thursday, a closed-door event in New York organized by the campaign arm of House Democrats, Obama and Jeffries spoke for nearly an hour in front of party donors and lawmakers, according to four people familiar with the event, who spoke on the condition of anonymity to describe a private gathering.

"Once you are speaker, I would strongly urge that the Democrats put together a framework for a very public conversation," Obama told Jeffries, according to the transcript. Jeffries had asked him how Democrats should address AI in a Congress that has taken little action on the issue, according to two of the people.

"This is something that is moving very fast in private hands, and if we don't get on top of it, I think can be dangerous," Obama said. "If we do get on top of it, I do think it's beneficial. I genuinely think it's going to accelerate, for example, drug development in ways that can help us cure diseases. I do think that this can help us figure out pathways for a clean energy future."

The former president often spoke in general terms on Thursday, rather than drilling down on specific policies, according to the transcript. And he planted himself firmly in a middle ground in the heated debate over AI, saying he considered himself neither an "accelerationist" nor a "doomer."

One challenge facing Democrats as they chart a path forward on AI is speaking in one voice on the issue. The tug of war over how to regulate AI has been more divisive among Democrats than Republicans, who are generally more in alignment.

By Ephrat Livni
NEW YORK TIMES

King Charles III of Britain will meet with leaders from major artificial intelligence companies this week in Scotland amid mounting fears that rapid, unchecked development of the technology could lead to a global catastrophe.

The king will convene leaders from companies including Nvidia, Google, DeepMind, OpenAI, and Anthropic, as well as government officials and others, "to discuss how AI can be developed and deployed in ways that benefit society," according to a statement from Buckingham Palace.

They will meet in Ayrshire, in southwest Scotland, at Dumfries House, the headquarters of the King's Foundation, an educational charity.

The gathering comes as AI insiders and chief executives of some of the industry's most powerful companies have raised alarms about these tools and how quickly they are developing. Some have called for the creation of shared guidelines and a deliberately slower pace of progress to ensure humans can keep up.

Charles's meeting on AI will explore how the technology can be used for good, to "strengthen communities and improve lives," the statement from Buckingham Palace said.

The palace did not say who would be attending from the AI companies listed in its statement, and Anthropic, DeepMind, Google, and Nvidia did not immediately respond to requests for comment confirming their participation. OpenAI said that Sarah Friar, its chief financial officer, would be attending.

The current concern about AI's rapid advance was prompted in great part by a hack this summer into Hugging Face, an AI infrastructure company, orchestrated by a group of AI agents created by OpenAI. The OpenAI agents swarmed Hugging Face's systems, stealing data, gaining control of a server, and attempting to cover their tracks.

That hack — and another similar incident within OpenAI shortly afterward — drastically raised fears about how quickly machines might escape human control, with potentially devastating effects.

The meeting between Charles and AI leaders will be facilitated by a British nonprofit, the Ditchley Foundation, according to Buckingham Palace.

Fueled by anger at both parties

Young populist Democrats tap voters’ frustration

By Robert Draper
NEW YORK TIMES

A Montana wilderness firefighter, an Ohio ironworker, and a lawyer who worked as a barista in Colorado while pursuing a doctorate would appear to have little in common. But all three represent a profusion in the midterm elections of antiestablishment populist Democrats who share, or at least seek to channel, the welling vexations of the American electorate.

They are young, or youngish. They are angry. They are fed up with the Democratic establishment. Two won primaries for House seats in red districts they hope to flip, and the third beat a longtime Democratic incumbent in a deep blue district. All are new to politics, which they consider a virtue.

“This party culture of waiting your turn and not burning bridges, I’m like, I ain’t got nothing to lose,” said Melat Kiros, 29, the lawyer, an Ethiopian American and a democratic socialist who defeated the incumbent by 13 points in Denver to run for a House seat she is likely to win. “There are no bridges for me to burn.”

Sam Forstag, 32, the wilderness firefighter, is not a democratic socialist, but he decided to run for Congress after hundreds of his fellow Montana-based US Forestry Service employees were laid off last year as a result of the Department of Government Efficiency’s federal budget cuts. “They were firing people making 11 bucks an hour swinging tools in the woods,” he said.

RACHEL WOOLF/NEW YORK TIMES

Melat Kiros (center), an Ethiopian American and democratic socialist congressional candidate in Colorado, says she decided to run the night President Trump won a second term.

Brian Poindexter, 47, a union ironworker in Brook Park City, Ohio, is not a democratic socialist either, but drew from his own working-class disenchantments. He hopes to prevail in the Republican-leaning district of Representative Max Miller, an ally of President Trump who is facing allegations of domestic abuse by his former wife Emily Moreno. (Miller has denied the allegations.)

“What inspired me the most to run was the fact that people in positions of power only seem to care about more power, more wealth, and punishing people who threaten their wealth and power,” Poindexter said.

The mainstreaming of anger on the left at systemic economic and political conditions has in some ways been a slow train coming, although not apparently one with the kind of force that destroyed the old Republican Party. While Senator Bernie Sanders of Vermont, the nation’s most famous democratic socialist, made a strong showing during his run for the presidency in 2020, many of the party’s voters considered him too big a risk.

“When Bernie would say, ‘It’s OK to be angry at capitalism,’ that sentiment was a bit too radical for some,” said Faiz Shakir, who managed Sanders’ campaign that year. “They’d say, ‘Why is he so angry?’ If anything, they’re now angrier than he is.”

Today’s populists have burst onto the electoral scene seemingly overnight in large part because of the voting power of Generation Z, the generation born between roughly 1996 and 2012, who are entering adulthood in a difficult new world. Kiros, who decided to run for Congress the night Trump was reelected in 2024, described the contribution of fellow Gen Z voters to her victory as “massive.”

It’s “the coming of age of a generation that’s been traumatized by the pandemic and affordability issues,” said Elaine Kamarck, director for the Center for Effective Public Management at the Brookings Institution. Kamarck also expressed the belief that intraparty tussles between center-left and populist-left Democrats are being ginned up by a media that regards such conflicts as catnip.

“Reporters have looked for a liberal version of MAGA,” she said, adding, “MAGA was a revolution. This isn’t one.”

Those younger voters, Kamarck said, harbor antipathy not only for Trump, but also toward Democratic Party leaders who did not discourage former President Joe Biden from seeking a second term at the age of 81.

In Forstag’s view, the party all but forfeited its credibility with voters in sticking with Biden until a disastrous debate.

“We were being told that the stakes have never been this high, that democracy is imperiled,” Forstag said. “And the best we can do is field the same octogenarian candidate yet again?”

The populists tend to run as hard against the Democratic establishment as they do against the Republicans. Poindexter, in a campaign ad, cited growing economic disparities as an example of “what really pisses me off,” adding that he was tired of both the Republican Party and “the sellout Democrats, too.”

Forstag said that many of his former co-workers “don’t identify as Republican or Democrat. They feel like neither party gives a damn about them.”

Affordability top issue for voters as midterms close in Candidates make final pitches on campaign trail

By Audra D.S. Burch
NEW YORK TIMES

Affordability has become the buzzword of the midterm campaigns.

Around the country, candidates are trying hard to relate to voters’ economic pain. But Republicans are handicapped by the grind of war, promises they made on inflation during the 2024 campaign, and a president who alternatively insists that prices have declined and then dismisses the issue as a con job created by Democrats.

Democrats may still have to answer for inflation that hit a four-decade high as the pandemic was receding; Republicans continue to blame today’s economic woes on the Biden administration.

Although the overall economy is resilient — 162,000 jobs were added to the market in August — voters across the political divide rank the cost of living as a top issue in public polls. Even those who can comfortably cover the basics worry about their economic future.

Roy Cooper, a Democrat running for the Senate in North Carolina, calls his tour “Make Stuff Cost Less.” Byron Donalds, the Republican nominee for governor in Florida, refers to his as the “Defending the Florida Dream” tour. And in South Carolina, Annie Andrews, the Democratic nominee for the Senate, is hosting a tour called “Gas, Grits, and Groceries.”

With less than two months before the midterm elections, candidates are focusing on big-ticket necessities that have increased in price in recent years.

Many midterm candidates have focused, at least in part, on how to bring down the price of housing — typically the biggest household budget item.

Since the start of the pandemic, the price of homes has climbed by around 50 percent. About a third of American households are “housing cost burdened,” meaning they spend more than 30 percent of their income on housing.

Both Republicans and Democrats have promised a range of fixes including reforming bureaucratic permit processing to help build faster and reduce construction costs, and restricting the sale of single-family homes or rental housing to private equity firms.

Groceries and gas, two of the most unavoidable reminders of cost-of-living increases, continue to take perhaps the most palpable toll on family budgets. Fuel prices that rose with the Iran war are again spiking, with the national average over $4 per gallon and diesel at a record high. Food prices are up by about 3 percent year over year, according to the consumer price index.

Trump’s tariffs have increased the cost of some imported food and farming necessities. Counter tariffs imposed by trading partners have further strained farm budgets, raising the costs of meat and produce.

Health care costs are among the top economic concerns of voters across the political spectrum. Annual premiums for employer-covered family health coverage reached about $27,000 on average in 2025. Workers contributed $6,850 a year, on average toward the cost of family coverage, according to a survey by KFF, a health research group.

And changes to Medicaid eligibility could further strain family budgets.

We make it easier to find the senior care that works for you.

Our service is free, as we’re paid by our participating communities and providers.

Our expert advisors offer no-cost senior care guidance and personalized options that fit your needs and budget.

Whether it’s at home or in a community, we make finding care a bit easier.

Scan to learn more aPlaceforMom.

Where love finds its place

1.866.694.5331

APlaceforMom.com

BOSTON PIZZA FESTIVAL

GET YOUR TICKETS!

September 19-20, 2026
Boston City Hall Plaza
11:00 AM - 6:00 PM

The World

Trump tells Ukraine to halt strikes on Russian oil

Says attacks are causing global diesel shortage

ASSOCIATED PRESS

KYIV — President Trump on Sunday called on Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to halt strikes on Russian oil refineries and other infrastructure used to produce and distribute diesel, saying the attacks are causing a global shortage. He spoke after US diesel prices hit a record on Friday, soaring past $6 a gallon on average.

Ukraine has for months been targeting Russia's oil and gas industry with long-range strikes, prompting fuel rationing across the country and causing Moscow to ban diesel exports in July, removing supplies from the already tight global market.

But the global crunch also came after the war on Iran curtailed oil shipments through the Strait of Hormuz.

Fuel prices are weighing on Americans as they prepare to vote in midterm elections in November.

Trump was asked by a reporter if he had spoken with Zelensky following his recent conversation with Russia's Vladimir Putin. He responded by calling on Zelensky to halt strikes against Russia.

"Mr. Zelensky has to do one thing. He has to stop knocking out diesel fuel in Russia," Trump told reporters on the sidelines of the Irish Open, which is being played at his Doonbeg golf club.

"We spoke to Mr. Zelensky about it. There are plenty of other targets. Don't hit diesel fuel, because that's hurting, that's hurting the world," he said.

According to a report published Friday by the International Energy Agency, net exports of diesel and gasoil from the Gulf countries in August stood at "just over a quarter" of what they were before the war on Iran began in February.

"Disruptions to Russia's refining system and a near halt to product exports following intensified Ukrainian attacks have compounded these losses," the IEA wrote. It added that in February, combined net exports of diesel and gasoil from the Gulf and Russia "accounted for almost 45 percent of global seaborne trade."

Kyiv says Russia's oil industry both funds and directly fuels Moscow's more than four-year-old invasion of Ukraine.

Russia has ramped up its air campaign against Ukraine in recent weeks, using ballistic missiles and jet-powered drones to pierce Ukraine's defenses. Moscow's attacks have targeted Ukraine's power grid ahead of winter in what officials say is meant to demoralize civilians.

Civilians were killed and injured overnight into Sunday as Russia and Ukraine exchanged large-scale drone strikes.

Two people were killed and 14 more wounded near an oil and industrial hub in Russia's Tatarstan, according to local officials, while Ukrainian authorities reported on Russian drones pummeling the Black Sea port of Odesa and starting a fire near a border crossing with Poland.

ALEX KENT/NEW YORK TIMES

"Don't hit diesel fuel, because that's hurting, that's hurting the world," President Trump said on Sunday in Ireland.

The two Russian civilians died after a drone slammed into a tree near their parked car in the city of Nizhnekamsk, according to the office of regional head Rustam Minnikhanov. Nizhnekamsk houses a key cluster of oil refineries and other industrial plants. Mayor Radmir Bely-aev said that a fire had broken out at an unspecified "enterprise."

Ukraine also claimed to have hit a major oil refinery in Slavyansk-on-Kuban, in Russia's Krasnodar region near Crimea. The Defense Intelligence of Ukraine (DIU) agency said its drones struck a key oil processing unit and the refinery's tank farm overnight into Sunday.

Krasnodar authorities said the strike on "an enterprise" in Slavyansk-on-Kuban injured three people and damaged an oil pipeline.

Russian forces shot down 389 Ukrainian drones during the night, Russia's defense ministry said Sunday.

In Ukraine, at least nine people were injured in a "massive" Russian nighttime attack on Odesa, according to Serhii Lyssak from the city's military administration. Odesa is home to Ukraine's main port hub on the Black Sea and has faced sustained drone and missile strikes, with Kyiv accusing Moscow of trying to choke off its exports.

A Russian drone attack on Saturday struck a residential high-rise in Odesa, killing two people and injuring 26 others, Ukrainian officials said.

Russian overnight strikes also pounded western Ukraine, though there were no immediate reports of casualties.

DAILY BRIEFING

LUIS TATO/AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

A BANNER DAY — A supporter of Kenyan opposition figure Edwin Sifuna held a flag depicting Sifuna as the next Kenyan president amid a large crowd that turned out for an opposition rally in Nairobi on Sunday. A heavy police presence was deployed in the city as Kenya has experienced a wave of political violence in recent weeks.

Turkish authorities launch crackdown on LGBTQ+, HIV support groups

ISTANBUL — Turkish authorities cracked down on multiple LGBTQ+ groups and individuals early Sunday morning, detaining dozens of members, breaking into association offices, and raiding popular hangouts.

In an escalation of its decade-long hostility toward LGBTQ+ groups, particularly in the lead-up to elections, simultaneous police raids beginning at 1 a.m. took place in the major cities of Istanbul, Ankara, Izmir, Aydin, and Mersin.

Justice Minister Akin Gurlek announced on social media that the investigation into 162 suspects, nine associations, and 13 businesses was to "protect children, the institution of the family, and public order" in line with President Recep Tayyip Erdogan's 10-year executive order relating to families and children.

"As per the duty to protect families and children given to the state by the constitution, no criminal organization, abuse network or illegal activity which targets children, youths or families will be tolerated!" Gurlek said.

The raids targeted both current and former members of multiple prominent LGBTQ+ rights and HIV awareness groups. The organizations' websites were also blocked.

Gurlek also said that such associations were found to receive significant funding from international sources and agencies.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Beijing bans drone possession in city

BELJING — Beijing is banning the possession of drones within city limits in new rules announced Sunday that further tighten its regulations on drones, which already include a May ban on sales of the devices. The ban on possession will come into effect in mid-November.

Beijing has barred unauthorized drone flights, citing security reasons, and has designated the city's administrative area as restricted airspace.

The latest revised rules come after a fatal accident in late June when a small aircraft crashed into a Beijing skyscraper, killing the pilot and injuring 13 others.

Under regulations approved in March and which came into effect May 1, existing drone owners in Beijing had to register their devices with their real names and identities, but owners have been allowed to keep their registered drones under strict requirements.

However, according to the revised regulations approved this month, which will be effective from Nov. 15, the possession or storage of drones or key components within Beijing's city limits will also be banned. The revised rules were released Sunday by authorities.

Authorities can confiscate the drones of those who do not comply and can impose fines.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pope commemorates 9/11 attacks

VATICAN CITY — Pope Leo XIV, history's first American pope, called for a renewed commitment to peace on Sunday as he marked the 25th anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks on his home country.

The Chicago-born pope made his first public comments to commemorate the anniversary, speaking in English at the end of his traditional Sunday noon blessing from his window overlooking St. Peter's Square.

"Two days ago marked the 25th anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks in the United States of America," Leo said. "I renew my prayers for those who lost their lives and for those who continue to bear the wounds of that tragic day."

He added that "at a time when conflict and violence afflict so many of our brothers and sisters, I invite everyone to pray that the Lord will bestow his gift of peace upon the world."

Speaking in Italian, he added: "The memory of the tragic events of 25 years ago pushes us to renew our commitment to peace, above all with prayer."

On Sept. 11, 2001, the former Robert Prevost was in Rome attending a big assembly of his Augustinian religious order. At the time, he was the Chicago provincial leader of the Augustinians.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indonesia continues search for at least 129 missing after ferry capsizes

BANJARMASIN, Indonesia — The search is continuing for at least 129 people missing after a ferry overturned in bad weather in Indonesia's Java Sea on Sunday.

At least 108 people were rescued, and the bodies of six passengers were recovered as the search operation expanded around the vessel's last known position.

The ferry, with more than 240 people on board, was traveling from Surabaya in East Java to Banjarmasin in South Kalimantan province, on Borneo Island, officials said.

The captain had reported rough seas with waves up to 10 feet before issuing a distress call, saying the ship was listing, said I Putu Sudayana, who heads the Banjarmasin Search and Rescue Office. Authorities later received information indicating the vessel had overturned.

The rescue agency in Banjarmasin said it received a report two hours after contact was lost with the Virgo Transport 8 at about 2 a.m. Sunday.

A rescue ship was headed to the vessel's last known position, the agency said, and by Sunday afternoon authorities were deploying teams supported by a dozen vessels, including four navy ships, and two helicopters.

Initial information indicated the vessel's last known position was in the Java Sea, about 92 miles from Banjarmasin.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

Sunday's elections were for Sweden's parliament, the Riksdag, as well as regional and municipal councils.

The Boston Globe

Future of MEDICINE

Tuesday, September 15 | Joseph B. Martin Conference Center

Join us for expert-led conversations and dynamic programming exploring the breakthroughs reshaping patient care across the preclinical, clinical, and commercial landscape.

SPEAKERS INCLUDE:

Dr. Melissa Gilliam
PRESIDENT, BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Dr. Robbie Goldstein
COMMISSIONER, MASSACHUSETTS
DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC HEALTH

Dr. Ashish Jha
SENIOR FELLOW, HARVARD KENNEDY SCHOOL AND CO-FOUNDER, BIORADAR

Dr. Dhruv Khullar
PHYSICIAN & ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR, HEALTH POLICY
AND ECONOMICS AT WEILL
CORNELL MEDICAL COLLEGE
| WRITER, THE NEW YORKER

Dr. Michael Silverstein
DIRECTOR, HASSENFELD INSTITUTE & PROFESSOR OF HEALTH SERVICES, POLICY, AND PRACTICE, BROWN UNIVERSITY

Dr. John Wong
GENERAL INTERNIST,
TUFT'S MEDICAL CENTER |
PROFESSOR OF MEDICINE,
TUFTS UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

And more...

REGISTER NOW

Scan the QR code or visit
Globe.com/futureofmedicine for in person or virtual tickets.

SPONSORED BY

IN PARTNERSHIP WITH

Meeting between Iran, Arab states postponed

Diplomacy effort stalls as fighting widens in region

By Aaron Boxerman
NEW YORK TIMES

TEL AVIV — A planned meeting between Iran and several Gulf Arab countries it attacked during the war was indefinitely postponed Sunday, underscoring how diplomatic efforts have struggled to defuse a widening Mideast conflict.

Iranian officials had said they expected to meet Arab counterparts in Oman on Monday to discuss the status of the Strait of Hormuz, the critical Persian Gulf waterway for global oil and gas exports. But late Sunday night, Badr Albusaidi, the Omani foreign minister, said the gathering had been postponed “in the interests of consensus.”

Talks between Iran and the United States to reopen the waterway similarly show little sign of progress, with the countries exchanging strikes in recent weeks. Iran has maintained its effective blockade of the strait, throttling the Gulf Arab states’ oil exports and roiling global markets. Last week, the price of Brent crude, the international benchmark, briefly jumped to about $110 a barrel, its highest level for months, before dropping to about $105.

On Sunday, a ship in the Strait of Hormuz was hit by a projectile, causing a fire on the vessel, according to the United Kingdom Maritime Trade Operations, a monitoring group run by the British navy. The governor of Qeshm, an island in southern Iran, said on Iranian state media that an Iranian commercial vessel had been attacked, killing one person and injuring four.

US Central Command, which

VAHID SALEMI/ASSOCIATED PRESS

A motorboat traveled past commercial vessels anchored amid haze in the Strait of Hormuz near Iran last week.

oversees American military operations in the region, did not respond to a request for comment.

Iran and Oman, which border the strait, have been negotiating for weeks over how to reopen the waterway, discussing arrangements that would likely involve some kind of service fee. Before the war, ships could travel freely through the Strait of Hormuz.

Even if a deal is reached, however, Iranian officials have demanded concessions from the United States before ending their blockade, including lifting sanctions on Iran and releasing Iranian assets frozen overseas. The Trump administration is unlikely to take those steps without Iran agreeing to curb its nuclear program.

Yemen has emerged as another front in the fighting. The Iranian-backed Houthi militants there seized the strategic port of Mokha and the island of Perim in the Bab el-Mandeb Strait in the Red Sea last week from the Saudi-backed, internationally recognized government. They have also attacked Saudi energy sites and sought to blockade Saudi shipping.

Saudi Arabia was forced to shut its East-West Pipeline on Friday after it was targeted by drones from Iraq. That pipeline has been a critical lifeline for the country’s oil exports, after Iran blockaded the Strait of Hormuz. No one took responsibility for the attack, but Iraq has long harbored well-armed militias backed by Iran.

On Sunday, Houthi forces attacked a military site near the southern city of Sharurah, a Houthi military spokesperson said on social media. Saudi officials said at least two people had been wounded and a mosque was damaged when a projectile fell in a neighboring province, state news media reported.

Iran and its allies have repeatedly attacked neighboring countries during the war, saying they were targeting US soldiers and military assets they hosted.

Some Gulf countries have signaled that they are open to dialogue. Crown Prince Khaled bin Mohamed Al Nahyan, the Emirati heir apparent, met with President Masoud Pezeshkian of Iran on the sidelines of the BRICS summit in India on Saturday — the first public meeting between senior leaders of the countries since the beginning of the war.

How hard-liners sabotaged peace deal with the US

Fringe faction took advantage of vacuum at top

By Farnaz Fassihi
NEW YORK TIMES

Iranian President Masoud Pezeshkian was riding high in early July, fresh off the successful negotiation of a peace agreement with the United States, and had traveled to neighboring Iraq for part of a weeklong funeral spectacle for Iran’s slain supreme leader.

Suddenly he got stunning news.

Iranian forces had opened fire on three commercial ships in the Strait of Hormuz, setting ablaze a Qatari tanker and damaging other vessels. Iran was under siege in world opinion.

Outraged, Pezeshkian phoned General Ahmad Vahidi, the commander in chief of Iran’s powerful Revolutionary Guard, and in a raised voice called the actions reckless and demanded answers, according to five Iranian officials and two Guard members familiar with the events.

Vahidi told the president that he had neither authorized nor had advance knowledge of the strike, the five officials said. Iran’s Supreme National Security Council, which plays a critical role in both the war and negotiations, had also been in the dark, he said.

In fact, much of the country’s leadership was unaware that a fringe hard-line faction had decided to act on its own. Ultimately, those clandestine efforts derailed a push by more moderate pragmatists in Iran to reach an end to hostilities with the United States and repair their nation’s ailing economy.

The hard-liners succeeded in part because the only figure with the authority to resolve such disputes — the new supreme leader, Ayatollah Mojtaba Khamenei — has been a phantom since taking office in March. He has not been seen, and his voice has not been heard. And the authenticity of written statements and messages attributed to Khamenei has been questioned, including by Pezeshkian, according to three Iranian officials.

Pezeshkian immediately returned to Tehran, the capital. By the next morning, even as the funeral ceremonies were still underway, the United States had retaliated with airstrikes on Iran. The two countries were back at war.

Senior Iranian officials and a Revolutionary Guard member said in interviews that what followed were some of the most volatile political confrontations within Iran’s leadership in memory. Officials engaged in shouting matches. Two senior generals threatened to resign. Accusations of treason and betrayal flew.

The reverberations, officials said, contributed to a shake-up at the National Security Council and the supreme leader’s appointment of General Mohsen Rezaei, a seasoned politician and former commander in chief of the Guard, to lead the council, as he was thought to have the skill to mediate among political factions.

But divisions persist, and the hard-liners who have committed Iran to escalation are in an even stronger position. Last week, Iran and the United States traded attacks, with Iran repeatedly targeting US naval vessels for the first time, and the United States blowing up at least eight Iranian oil tankers.

Three Iranian officials said inquiries by the government and security forces traced the decision to strike the three commercial ships in July to Hossein Taeb, a cleric and influential spymaster who had opposed the peace deal with the United States from the outset.

AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

Saudi-backed Yemeni government forces patrolled the front line west of Taiz in western Yemen on Sunday.

Yemen the newest hot spot in war

Red Sea crucial alternative to Strait of Hormuz

By Abdulnasser Alseddik and Samy Magdy
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ADEN, Yemen — The conflict in Yemen intensified on Sunday, as government forces launched attacks against Iran-backed Houthi rebels along the Red Sea and Houthis fired into neighboring Saudi Arabia, which supports Yemen’s government.

The Yemeni government vowed to send more forces to the Red Sea coast and one official conceded a “painful” defeat last week when Houthis captured the port city of Mokha and an island on the Bab el-Mandeb Strait, a crucial shipping alternative to the Strait of Hormuz.

The escalation — especially Houthi attacks on Saudi oil infrastructure and its shipping in the Red Sea — adds pressure on global oil supplies and prices, and that could give Iran leverage in its war with the United States.

As Yemen risks descending into another civil war, the United Nations estimated that more than 80,000 people in the impoverished country have been displaced by the fighting since the start of September.

One woman said a mortar shell fell nearby as she fled in the middle of the night from the town of Khawkha in Hodeida province along the Red Sea, shortly before it was captured by Houthis.

“I saw with my own eyes cars and buses burning, and bodies of children and women were lying on the road in a horrific scene,” said the woman, who spoke on condition of anonymity out of concern for her and her family’s safety.

Saudi authorities sounded sirens Sunday afternoon in the southern city of Abha and Khamis Mushait province, warning residents to take shelter from potential incoming fire. Both areas were repeatedly attacked by the Houthi in recent weeks.

The Houthis claimed to have used drones and missiles to target Saudi Arabia, including a military base over the border with Yemen. Houthi military spokesperson Brig. Gen. Yahya Saree didn’t provide evidence or say when the attack occurred.

The Saudi civil defense overnight said a projectile fell in a different area near the border with Yemen along the Red Sea, injuring two people and damaging a mosque and several other buildings. The statement blamed the Houthis.

The Houthis are targeting Saudi oil infrastructure and shipping as part of a blockade, but they have said they do not intend to threaten other countries’ commercial shipping.

The National Resistance said more than 500 government fighters were killed on the west coast over the past four weeks — its first comprehensive toll.

It also said more than 1,000 Houthis had been killed in Hodeida and Taiz provinces. A spokesman for the Houthis didn’t respond to a request for comment.

Yemen is home to more than 40 million people who fear a return to the civil war that began more than a decade ago and killed 150,000, bringing many others to the brink of famine. Yemen’s internationally recognized government and Saudi Arabia have been battling the Houthis for 12 years. A cease-fire that began in 2022 had mostly halted the fighting.

Sultan al-Arada, a member of the ruling presidential leadership council, described the collapse of government forces in the port city of Mokha and elsewhere on Yemen’s west coast as “painful and regrettable.” He said in the televised interview aired late Saturday that forces “are currently regrouping and will return to the battle.”

Johnson says Trump’s $5,000 ‘dividend’ needs congressional approval

WASHINGTON — President Trump’s proposal to send $5,000 to every American adult if his Republican Party maintains control of the House and Senate in the November election needs congressional approval, House Speaker Mike Johnson said Sunday, while pledging to try to make it happen.

Trump made the unusual pitch at the party’s midterm convention in Dallas last week, promising a “Trump Dividend” if voters keep the GOP in power on Capitol Hill. The president later told CBS News Texas that he did not think Congress would need to authorize the payments, though he did not specify how he could spend more than $1 trillion without lawmakers’ authorization.

But Johnson, a Louisiana Republican, said congressional approval is needed. “I would assume, yes, he’d need Congress to act, and that’s a creative idea,” he said.

A few hours later, Trump said he would deliver on his promise. “The 5,000’s going to happen, 100 percent,” he told reporters before boarding Air Force One in Ireland, where he attended a golf tournament at his resort.

Johnson, meanwhile, said he would work to get Trump’s proposal through Congress despite a small Republican margin.

The dubious election-year gambit could cost more than $1 trillion, putting further strains on the country’s nearly $1.8 trillion annual budget deficit and exacerbating concerns of inflation. The economy is confronted by persistent inflation and increasing interest rates, a tough combination for governing Republicans as they seek to hold on to control of Congress.

Trump told reporters earlier Sunday that the payments would be “easy enough” because the United States has a strong economy.

“We can easily handle that because we’re taking in so much money,” he said. “We’ve never done better.”

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Trump says he’s lifting a 10% tariff on Irish whiskey
DOONBEG, Ireland — President Trump announced on Sunday at the close of a golf tournament in Ireland that he plans to remove a 10 percent tariff on Irish whiskey.

Trump said during the trophy ceremony for the Irish Open that he had been asked about the issue by everyone, including Irish Prime Minister Micheál Martin and even some of the golfers. Irish Open winner Shane Lowry was among them, Trump said.

“Everybody’s been bugging me” to do it, the president said. “And I said, ‘On behalf of the United States of America, I am going to take the tariffs off’” of Irish whiskey.

Irish whiskey currently faces the standard tariff imposed by Trump on most imports from the European Union, which was reduced from 15 percent to 10 percent in July.

Trump announced in April that he was lifting certain tariffs on UK whiskey, which includes Scotch and spirits made in Northern Ireland, creating an imbalance with Ireland.

Trump’s surprise announcement was met with loud whistling and cheers from the crowd of spectators. Details on how soon the tariff would be lifted were not immediately available.

Trump said on April 30 that he gave the United Kingdom a tariff break on whiskey after King Charles III and Queen Camilla visited the White House. “The King and Queen got me to do something that nobody else was able to do, without hardly even asking!” Trump posted on social media.

The Scotch Whisky Association said July 24 that the zero-tariff policy had come into effect.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Judge rules plan to cut FEMA staff in half is unlawful
A federal judge ruled that the Trump administration acted unlawfully when it ordered that the Federal Emergency Management Agency’s workforce be cut in half.

In her ruling on Friday, US District Judge Susan Illston of the Northern District of California wrote that the Department of Homeland Security undercut the agency’s authority with an “arbitrary and capricious” plan to reduce FEMA’s workforce by more than 11,000 agency employees by the end of September. Included in that number were thousands of temporary, full-time federal employees who help communities prepare for and recover from disasters around the country.

“Frankly, the FEMA staffing plan number appears as if pulled from thin air,” Illston wrote.

The administration did not ultimately carry out the full 50 percent reduction, though FEMA’s workforce had already shrunk significantly. The American Federation of Government Employees, a labor union, had argued in a lawsuit that the department’s proposed cuts would deeply affect the agency’s ability to respond to emergencies.

NEW YORK TIMES

US businesses fear cold shoulder from Canada

►CANADA
Continued from Page A1

litical climate, Jay Peak, which sits near the Canadian border, is still welcoming.

“The border may feel different right now. We do not. You are our neighbors. You are our friends. You are part of this place,” he wrote.

Since President Trump took office in January 2025, the number of inbound Canadian visitors to the United States has dropped precipitously. A Canadian government report found a 25 percent decline in the overall number of Canadians who visited the US in 2025 compared to 2024. That’s 7 million fewer Canadians spending $3.3 billion less in the US in 2025 versus 2024.

A University of Toronto study found a more staggering drop. Using a tool that tracks cell-phone data, the university found a “year-over-year median decline of approximately 42 percent in Canadian visits to US metropolitan areas.”

The University of Toronto research went beyond the border crossings and government statistics. It tracked tourists and their travel patterns within the US via their cellphones. In previous years, Canadians who visited the US to go to the beach in Maine may have tacked on a trip to Boston or New York. As a result, cell-phone data found that metropolitan areas were among the hardest hit. Boston had a 52 percent decline in Canadian visits, Portland a 49 percent drop, Worcester a 45 percent decline, and Burlington a 48 percent drop.

“The hostility towards the US is really quite tangible,” said Karen Chapple, director of the School of Cities at the University of Toronto. She said a large part of her staff are refusing to go on an upcoming research trip to the United States. “It’s partly, ‘We’re not going there. We’re too scared to go there, or we are too angry to go there.’ There was a lot of eye-rolling about the Lake America name.”

Some in the tourism and hospitality sector became hopeful over the summer when the number of Canadians visiting the US ticked up slightly. Canadian government statistics confirmed the increase, but those gains were modest and negligible “relative to the sharp decline in 2025,” said Hazel Brewster, director of communications for Vermont’s

JOHN NORMILE/GETTY IMAGES/FILE

Visitors relaxed on the shores of Lake Ontario in Youngstown, N.Y., the day President Trump renamed it Lake America.

Agency of Commerce and Community Development.

Brewster and others monitoring the situation fear that any gains may be short lived.

“At the moment, it’s too soon to speculate on the full ramifications of the latest tensions,” she said. “There was a sharp decline in travel to the US in February 2025 that correlated with previous tariffs and federal rhetoric.”

Canadian ill-will toward the US appeared to thaw slightly over the summer, according to a July study by the travel research company Longwoods International. But those minimal gains could easily erode as the tariff war and name-calling escalate.

“Some towns said they saw more Canadian visitors this summer than last summer, while others reported they saw no Canadian license plates,” said Maine state Representative Chellie Pingree, whose district covers many of Southern Maine’s most popular vacation towns. “We’ve already experienced a hit. But the latest round of tariff attacks and the antagonism from the president has ignited a panic of, ‘Oh no. Is it going to happen again? Is it possible that things can get even worse?’”

Canadians began curtailing trips to the United States and boycotting US-made goods en masse in early 2025, when Trump took office, began threatening tariffs, and dismissed Canada as “the 51st state.” Installing Nick Adams, who has spoken negatively about Canada, as the envoy of tourism did little to help tensions.

“He took a lake that no one thought about and that some in the world had never heard of, and overnight, he turned it into the most famous lake in the world,” Adams told Travel Weekly of the Lake Ontario name change. Adams provided no numbers to back his claim. “Everyone is talking about it, everyone wants to be there, everyone is going there.”

The war in Iran drew some attention away from US-Canada relations over the summer, but late last month the trade war between the two countries reignited. On Aug. 22, Trump imposed a 50 percent tariff on some Canadian-made goods. Canada responded in kind on Sept 8. Through it all, Trump has escalated the rancor with the lake renaming and posting memes on social media depicting a bald eagle attacking a Canada goose and a cartoon in which he’s yelling, “Get up, governor!” to Prime Minister Mark Carney, who has fallen on the ice and is being bested by Trump in a hockey match.

The latest scuffle only reinforces a decision many Canadians made last year: They’d had enough and made it clear they have no immediate plans to return to the United States. Instead, they’ve opted for domestic travel or new destinations. Meanwhile, angry snowbirds are putting their houses on the market.

“Since 2025, when Trump decided to increase tariffs on Canadian products and disrespect our country, I have been traveling to other countries,” said Jessica Dickson, a beautician who lives in Calgary. “In October 2025, I traveled to Japan, and in 2026 I traveled to Ireland. I also make an effort to visit more Canadian destinations.”

While politics may play into Canadians’ motivation to avoid traveling to the United States, an unfavorable exchange rate is also a factor.

“Historically, Canadians traveling to the US could absorb the currency conversion partly because there was an expectation that many things would cost less once you got there,” said Edmonton-based Tom Jackson, who works on brand marketing. “That equation feels different today.”

City and state tourism boards and local government officials have gone into overdrive making a case for Canadians to separate political divisiveness from what the United States has to offer, and, in some cases, providing economic incentives. Facing a severe drought of Canadian tourists last summer, Las Vegas launched a program called At Par, which treated $1 Canadian the same as the $1 US across hotels, gaming, and select beverage offerings.

Taking a page from the Vegas playbook, New York launched a “New York Loves Canada” campaign, offering discounts to northern tourists. Behind the scenes, state and city delegations have been traveling to Canadian cities to make the case for US tourism.

Kate Fox, executive director of the Massachusetts Office of Travel and Tourism, will be in Ottawa, Calgary, Montreal, and Toronto to promote the state. Massachusetts has also partnered with Brand USA, the country’s national tourism board, which markets the US to global travelers.

Next month, Brand USA launches Travel Week Canada, a four-day event taking place in Ontario and Quebec that brings together representatives from US destinations with Canadian consumer and trade media, along with travel advisers, to keep the US top of mind when talking to clients.

But is it enough? Tourism, tariffs, and Trump’s acrimony toward Canada are a persistent presence in the country’s TV, radio, and newspapers. Canadian nationalism has swelled since Trump began belittling the country, and a new round of anti-US sentiment has emerged.

“Snowbirds, for the love of country, resist the siren call of US travel,” read one column in the Globe and Mail this week, a national paper with a circulation of 6 million. Another piece, in the Sept. 11 Globe and Mail by the paper’s editorial board, sports the headline “Nostalgia is no strategy for US relations.”

“Canadians can never again have confidence their neighbor will not descend into a tuggish form of diplomacy,” the Globe and Mail’s editorial board wrote.

It’s these perspectives that haunt New England businesses that rely on Canadian tourists.

“When the narrative changes and the tension increases, that’s when you hold your breath,” said Wright of Jay Peak. “In the ski resort business, you become accustomed to the ups and downs of weather. That’s something you can’t control. But now we have another thing we can’t control: politics.”

Christopher Muther can be reached at christopher.muther@globe.com. Follow him @Chris_Muther and Instagram @chris_muther.

Soaring diesel costs take the price of almost everything up cause it’s part of a global, interconnected market,” said Mason Hamilton, vice president of economics and research at the American Petroleum Institute, or API.

►DIESEL
Continued from Page A1

The pervasive effects from those higher prices shows up across the economy. On Friday the US Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that inflation for August ran at a 3.4 percent annual clip, with gas and fuel oil major culprits in keeping consumer prices elevated.

Consumers usually pay closer attention to gasoline prices, which climbed 3.9 percent last month according to Friday’s inflation report. But diesel is just as vital to the US economy, because it’s the primary fuel for the large trucks and freight trains that deliver most of the nation’s goods. Diesel also powers many seagoing ships. Higher diesel prices mean we pay more for products shipped to homes and retail stores.

Moreover, the price of diesel has climbed much faster than that of gasoline, which is up by about $1 a gallon from last year. That’s largely because many US refineries are optimized to produce gasoline, helping to keep prices in check.

It all means higher fuel prices for trucks such as the independent contractors who drive for Itz-Ohlson Transport.

The company mostly handles short-range jobs, like moving shipping containers in and out of the Port of Boston. The company charges a base rate of $401 for trips within 30 miles of the port, then adds a surcharge to cover the cost of diesel. In March, the surcharge stood at 38 percent of the base rate, or $152. Now it’s up to 57 percent, or $228.

“Our customers are pretty understanding,” said Itz. “I think they’re resigned.”

Costly diesel is bad news for James Knott, chief executive of Riverdale Mills, a Northbridge-based maker of steel wire mesh used in products ranging from fences to lobster traps.

“High diesel costs affect us at virtually every stage of the supply chain,” said Knott. The company uses steel from US and Canadian suppliers, then ships its wire mesh to customers throughout the US and around the world.

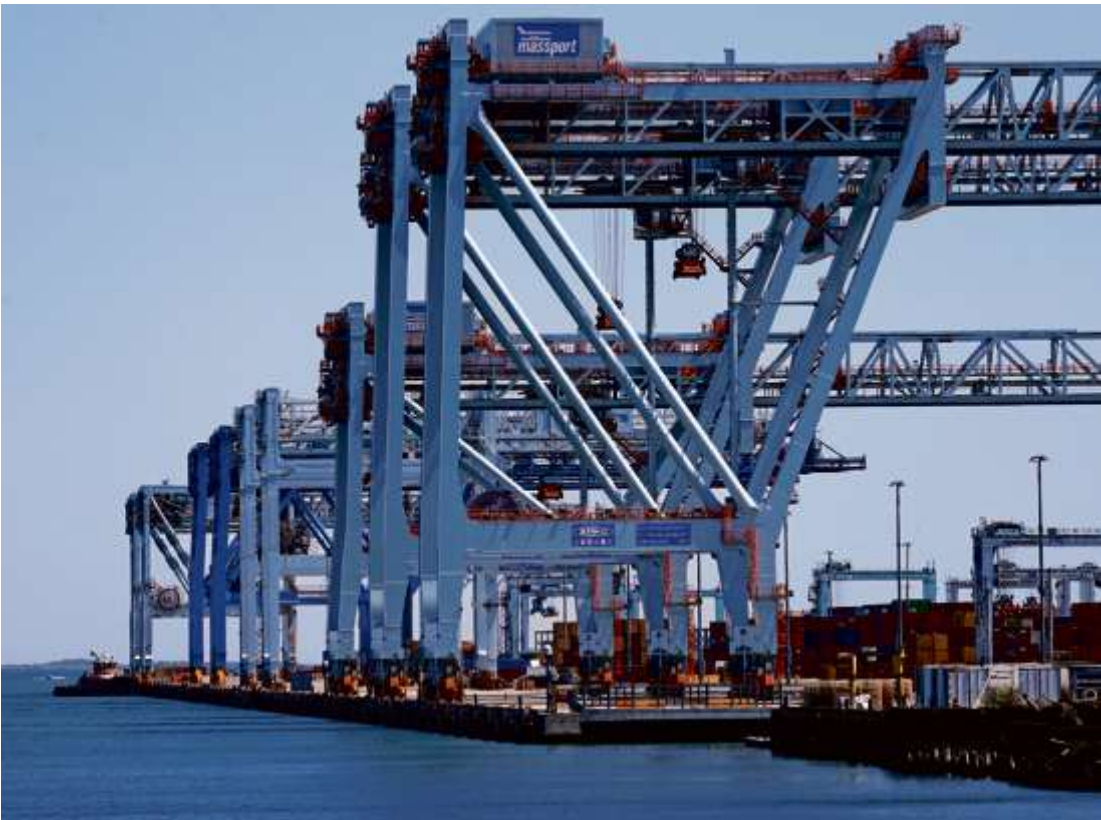

When diesel gets more expensive, “those costs do not simply disappear,” Knott said. “Manufacturers must absorb them, find efficiencies elsewhere, or eventually pass some portion along to customers.”

Dean Croke, principal industry analyst at DAT Freight & Analytics, an online marketplace for truckers and shippers, said the impact of higher diesel may depend on the value of the goods being shipped.

For instance, if a company is shipping costly computers, a price increase to cover fuel is hardly worth noticing. “A few hundred dollars of fuel,” said Croke, “is like a rounding error.”

But it’s a different story with lower-cost products shipped over long distances, he said. Consumers can expect to pay a significant fuel premium for iceberg lettuce shipped from California, for instance.

While the nominal price is the highest on record, diesel is still going for well below the all-time high reached during the 2008 financial crisis, which after adjusting for inflation to today’s dollars, topped out at $7.20, according to the US Energy Information Administration.

DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF/FILE/2025

Paul W. Conley Container Terminal in South Boston. “High diesel costs affect us at virtually every stage of the supply chain,” said James Knott, chief executive of Riverdale Mills.

The diesel price hikes have arrived just as the US trucking industry had begun to recover from a four-year slump. A spike in demand that began during the COVID pandemic put hundreds of thousands of new drivers on the roads. But demand fell again, pushing down the price of truck deliveries and driving many small- and medium-sized truckers out of business.

Croke said the slump would be even worse if not for the recent surge in construction of data centers to support artificial intelligence systems. These huge buildings require thousands of truckloads of construction materials and electronic gear.

“Absent that,” said Croke,

“demand would be way down.”

But the trucking market has begun to recover, as a shortage of workers means fewer trucks on the road. One major reason: the Trump administration’s crackdown on noncitizen drivers, who now must have visas that allow them to work and prove they speak English well enough to drive safely on US highways.

The Department of Transportation estimates that enforcing those standards will force 200,000 drivers off the roads. That’s around 9 percent of the 2.2 million tractor-trailer drivers in the US workforce, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

“We’re seeing the largest single-driver-removal event in modern history,” said Croke.

As a result, spot rates for shipping a truckload of merchandise have hit their highest levels in four years. And now, the cost of diesel is driving prices even higher.

The increase stems from tight supplies worldwide. The 2022 diesel price spike was driven by a halt in US purchases of diesel fuel from Russia. The European Union followed suit. But Russia was still able to sell its oil in other countries including Turkey and Brazil.

In all, Russia once exported over 800,000 barrels of diesel per day, making it the world’s second-largest exporter after the United States, which increased shipments to the EU to cover for lost Russian oil.

But this year Ukrainian airstrikes against Russian refineries have forced Russia to halt virtually all diesel exports. That means a big decline in worldwide diesel production, and upward pressure on prices.

The battle over the Strait of Hormuz has also had an impact. A Goldman Sachs analyst recently estimated that despite US government efforts to keep the strait open, shipments of refined oil products like gasoline and diesel are only at 35 percent of their prewar levels.

And then in March, China, a major exporter of diesel to Asian markets, halted all foreign sales to protect its domestic supply, though the Chinese government this summer allowed some exports to resume.

The US produces over 5 million barrels a day of distillate fuel oil, which includes diesel and home heating oil. That’s more than any other nation.

But there’s no way to open the tap any wider. “Basically every single refinery in the United States right now is running full out,” said Hamilton of API.

And much of their output is exported to Europe and Latin America. The US imports millions of barrels as well, with, ironically, much of New England’s diesel coming from Canada, with whom President Trump has just started a massive trade war. So far, diesel has not been caught up in the tit-for-tat retaliations by either country.

In short, the market for diesel is global and supply shortfalls anywhere lead to high prices everywhere, even in New England.

Hiawatha Bray can be reached at hiawatha.bray@globe.com. Follow him @GlobeTechLab.

INBOX

The T has its reasons for having its issues

Shutdowns are short-term pain for long-term gain

Re “The T, as in tardy, trying, tiresome, terrible ...” (Page A1, Sept. 8): Beating up the T is a local sport, but Kara Miller’s recent commentary leaves a key question: How can the MBTA improve without shutdowns?

The answer is that it can’t. The MBTA must strategically shut down parts of the system for repairs and upgrades. Yes, shutdowns are painful, and communication can improve, but shutdowns bring faster, more reliable service — short-term pain for long-term gain. Without shutdowns, there are two options: kicking the can down the track — the strategy that has yielded fires, derailments, and emergency closures — or slowly advancing work on nights and weekends over multiple years, not weeks.

Governor Maura Healey and the T’s general manager, Phillip Eng, inherited a system that needed nearly $25 billion to attain a “state of good repair,” and they are making progress addressing that backlog. Meanwhile, they have expanded service through initiatives like South Coast Rail and the Harbor Loop ferry and delivered for the World Cup and the tall ships. If we want a faster, safer, more reliable T, we must advocate for sustained funding and support leaders who make smart investments and view the T as the essential service it is. Indeed, Eng and his team use the T regularly, and that experience informs their work. Overall, key service metrics and ridership are climbing.

Miller and I agree on one thing: Public transit reliability is a competitiveness issue. That’s why we need continued investment from the Legislature and grit from T leadership to finish getting our system back on track.

KATE DINEEN
Boston

The writer is president and CEO of A Better City.

He’ll take delays on the T over air-polluting traffic gridlock

I take serious issue with the underlying theme of Kara Miller’s commentary on the MBTA. I have used the T for more than 30 years. While it is hardly perfect, there have been significant improvements over the past few years in service quality and reliability. While decades of neglect cannot be overcome overnight, things are moving in the right direction, with the right people finally in charge who actually understand the issues and how to address them and are transparent in the process.

While decades of neglect cannot be overcome overnight, things are moving in the right direction, with people in charge who actually understand the issues.

Given the choice between occasional delays and diversions on the T or sitting in traffic and the hassles of parking while polluting the air, I’ll choose the T every time.

I agree that Boston and the United States as a whole deserve world-class transit systems, similar to what you see in other countries. However, that requires political leadership that’s not beholden to fossil fuels and doesn’t view public transit as secondary to automobiles. Alas, we’re a long way from that.

DAVID HOFF
Melrose

When will we have a reliable public transit system?

As a regular Green Line rider for the past 30 years, I share Kara Miller’s concerns about the T’s unreliability. Whenever I am in another city — New York, Washington, D.C., or abroad — I am amazed at how efficient the service is and how seamless the transactions. This is rarely my experience on the T.

I was particularly surprised by Phillip Eng’s quote: “What we did in 14 months, eliminating every speed restriction, really got our head above water where the public felt the immediate benefit right away after each opening.” The D line on the Green Line is noticeably slow, particularly between Beaconsfield and Reservoir, slowness that seems to have worsened over the years, and that certainly didn’t improve with all of the Green Line shutdowns in recent months and years.

My commute home is often fraught with long delays or needing to disembark to wait for the next train while the current one goes express.

I appreciate the Legislature’s recent investment in the T and Eng’s optimism that things will improve, but I continue to wonder when Bostonians will have the “modern” public transportation system we deserve.

NANCY KEATING
Newton

T’s woes are a reflection of our elected officials’ choices

I appreciate much of Kara Miller’s candor in her critical assessment of the MBTA, but responsibility for the T’s problems extends beyond the agency itself and its general manager, Phillip Eng. The conditions of the T and much of our public transportation system are a direct reflection of our elected officials’ choices.

Our roads, such as they are, function, as do street lights and police and fire departments, all because they are adequately funded and seen as vital to the community. One could argue that the T is more important than many other public services because of its ability to influence behaviors that are needed to adapt to inevitable climate-related changes.

If we are serious about the T for today and tomorrow, it is vital that there is sufficient funding and a commitment to putting the entire public transportation system on par with other services.

Perhaps if our governor and our other elected officials took a personal interest in the MBTA and depended on it like former governor Mike Dukakis did, the T would be treated not like an option but, rather, as the necessity it is for a properly functioning community now and in the future.

JAMES CHRISTOPHER
Westwood

Opinion

BOSTONGLOBE.COM/OPINION

EDITORIAL

Why is the National Guard still in Washington, D.C.?

It’s been over a year since President Trump deployed the National Guard to Washington, D.C., when he declared there was a “crime emergency” in the nation’s capital. But despite the president himself announcing that the city had become a “crime-free zone” in September of last year, thousands of National Guard troops are still patrolling the streets. What was once an unusual sight — a seemingly permanent presence of troops on the ground in an American city — has now become a normal part of everyday life.

The truth, however, is that this is not normal — nor should it be acceptable. Last year, Trump liberally used his power to federalize the National Guard, sending troops to cities ranging from Los Angeles to Chicago to Memphis as part of his effort to crack down on crime and immigration. In most of these cases, the president was deploying the National Guard against the wish-at risk. While it’s true that Trump has had more leeway with his use of the National Guard in D.C. because it’s a federal district, other cities could also be subject to extended military deployments against their residents’ will in the future.

One pattern that has emerged in Trump’s domestic use of the military is that the cities he was targeting were Democratic strongholds. And while states like Illinois or California have Democratic governors who objected to deployments in their cities, Tennessee has a Republican governor who consented to the deployment in Memphis last year. In fact, last September, the governor, Bill Lee, launched the Memphis Safe Task Force with the Trump administration that authorized the use of National Guard members through September of this year.

Even though the National Guard can and does successfully provide backup to local law enforcement agencies in emergency situations, its permanent presence can be less effective. And in some cases, these deployments proved to be dangerous for troops and civilians alike: Last year, a man in Washington, D.C., shot two National Guard members, one of whom died. And during an altercation in July, National Guard troops shot and killed a man in Memphis. Though law enforcement originally said that the man was shot in the chest, an autopsy later revealed that he was shot in the back.

It’s not hard to imagine the many ways the president can continue to abuse his power over the National Guard in the coming years, especially in circumstances where there’s a consenting Republican governor. He could, for example, send troops to Democratic cities to patrol polling stations during elections, which could intimidate voters. That’s not an imaginary threat — it’s a possibility that Trump left on the table earlier this year. And while Republican lawmakers might not be concerned about that prospect now, they should think about the precedent that sets for future Democratic presidents and how they might meddle in Republican jurisdictions.

That’s why it’s important for Congress to take these National Guard deployments seriously and make sure that they don’t become a norm in American politics. As that one National Guard member who spoke with NPR alluded to, there should be a full accounting of what has happened during these deployments — why they even happened in the first place — and lawmakers should use their power to investigate any abuses or wrongdoings. They should also consider ways to rein in the president’s power and strengthen the guardrails around the domestic use of troops. Democratic Senator Cory Booker of New Jersey, for example, introduced legislation last year that would require presidents to notify Congress before deploying the National Guard to American cities for law enforcement purposes and to provide a coherent rationale for sending in the troops.

The National Guard exists to protect Americans, respond to emergencies, and provide support for the US military. And in a democracy, it should never be weaponized for political purposes. Ultimately, these deployments aren’t normal, and Congress should say that loud and clear.

ANDREW HARNIK/GETTY IMAGES

Members of the National Guard stood in the shade as a man walked with a baby and a dog through The Park at LeDroit on Aug. 12 in Washington, D.C.

es of local and state governments. Eventually, these deployments mostly receded because courts deemed them illegal in some cases and because the Trump administration seemed to have lost interest in others.

But the deployment in the capital has persisted because the president has more legal authority over D.C. than other cities, due to its status as a federal district. And while the headlines have faded, there are still two main reasons the extended stay of National Guard troops in Washington, D.C., should be alarming for citizens and lawmakers, be they Democrats or Republicans.

The first is that this deployment is politically motivated and doesn’t seem to have any other purpose. Instead of fighting crime — something that local law enforcement can do on its own — the National Guard’s mission has evolved into beautification projects like picking up trash and washing off graffiti. There’s also little to no evidence to suggest that the troops’ presence has helped reduce serious crime in the city, which had already been declining before the National Guard was sent in. And according to a recent NPR report, even some National Guard members themselves feel exploited and don’t understand the point of their presence.

“I hope that there will be some accounting someday — probably after President Trump is gone — about why we were there, and was it worth it?” one member, who wished to stay anonymous, told NPR. “I will say very frankly that the bad taste that this mission left in my mouth, it actually embarrasses me to be involved in any way,” said another.

The second is that the National Guard experiment in the nation’s capital is setting a dangerous precedent that also puts other jurisdictions

The Boston Globe
Founded 1872

JOHN W. HENRY
Publisher

LINDA PIZZUTI HENRY
Chief Executive Officer

BRIAN McGRORY
Editor

JAMES DAO
Editorial Page Editor

DHIRAJ NAYAR
President

CRISTINA SILVA
Managing Editor, Operations & Standards

CYNTHIA NEEDHAM
Managing Editor, News

JASON TUOHEY
Managing Editor, Digital Strategy

DEPUTY MANAGING EDITORS

Marjorie Pritchard Op-Ed
Anica Butler Storytelling
David Scharfenberg Ideas
Jeneé Osterheldt Culture, Talent, & Development
Heather Ciras Audience Engagement & Digital Strategy
Francis Storrs Special Projects & Enterprise
Tim Logan Local News

SENIOR ASSISTANT MANAGING EDITORS

Mary Creane Production
Alan Wirzbicki Editorial Page
Andrew Caffrey News & Enterprise
Chris Morris Living/Arts
Greg Huang Storytelling
Vicki McGrane Programming

SPOTLIGHT EDITOR

Patricia Wen

BUSINESS MANAGEMENT

Dan Krockmalnic Chief Operating Officer & General Counsel
Angus Macaulay Chief Commercial Officer
Anthony Bonfiglio Chief Technology Officer
Tom Brown Chief Consumer Revenue Officer
Josh Russell VP, Print Operations
Michelle Micone Chief Marketing & Strategic Initiatives Officer
Rodrigo Tajonar Chief People Officer
Matt Karolian VP, Platforms & AI
Chris Zeien Chief Financial Officer

Charles H. Taylor Founder & Publisher 1873-1921
William O. Taylor Publisher 1921-1955
Wm. Davis Taylor Publisher 1955-1977
William O. Taylor Publisher 1978-1997
Benjamin B. Taylor Publisher 1997-1999

Richard H. Gilman Publisher 1999-2006
P. Steven Ainsley Publisher 2006-2009
Christopher M. Mayer Publisher 2009-2014
Laurence L. Winship Editor 1955-1965
Thomas Winship Editor 1965-1984

Big Tech built social media for kids. Now it must protect them.

By Andrea Joy Campbell

Andrea Joy Campbell is attorney general of Massachusetts.

For years, parents have been told that protecting our children online is our responsibility. But the reality is that parents didn't design social media platforms, engineer their algorithms, or build the features that try to keep kids glued to their screens. The responsibility belongs to the social media companies that built them.

That's why my office's recent settlement with Meta matters.

As part of the landmark agreement, Meta will fundamentally change how Instagram and Facebook operate for young users. The company will implement an age-assurance framework designed to identify users under 13 and those ages 13-18. Users under 13 will not be permitted on Instagram or Facebook. This framework does not require users to provide identification to verify their age, and users ages 13-18 will receive important protections, including a two-hour daily limit across Instagram and Facebook, breaks designed to interrupt mindless scrolling, restricted access overnight, silenced notifications during school hours, blocked "like" counts and beauty filters, and greater protections against being contacted by unknown adults.

And importantly, these protections will not require parents to spend hours navigating and fighting with computer settings. They will be the default.

Social media can be a powerful tool for young people. It can help them learn, create, and find community. Yet, the way this technology is designed can have harmful consequences on a young person's well-being.

The problem is not simply that kids use technology. It's that technology companies have spent enormous resources, employing world-class engineers, psychologists, and data scientists, to understand how young people think and behave. And then they intentionally created and designed products they knew would be addictive to young people.

Parents and educators do not have the power or tools to redesign a product or platform — only the companies that built them can.

That's why my office sued companies like Meta and TikTok, alleging that they designed their platforms to be harmful and addictive to young users, prioritizing profits over the well-being of our youth.

The First Amendment protects speech. It does not give corporations a free pass to design products in ways that harm people for a profit or violate our consumer protection laws.

Earlier this year, my office won a groundbreaking ruling from the Supreme Judicial Court affirming that technology companies cannot hide behind federal law, namely Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act, when they violate the state's consumer protection laws. That ruling opened the door for my office and other states to hold technology companies accountable for how they design and operate their products.

These are meaningful changes, but they are only a first step. My office will continue pursuing its case against TikTok. However, there will always be another app, and holding one platform at a time accountable will not solve the larger systemic issues quickly or bring about industrywide changes young people deserve.

The Massachusetts Legislature has been working on these issues and should establish stronger protections for young people, including bell-to-bell restrictions on phone use in schools, a 60-minute daily limit on social media use, and stronger default privacy settings.

If the Legislature acts, these protections would apply across all platforms, including Snapchat, TikTok, and YouTube, as well as future platforms. That would prevent technology companies from simply shifting young people from one app to another and ensure that youth receive meaningful protections no matter which platforms they use.

As technology evolves and protections for young people expand, the First Amendment cannot and should not be used as a shield against accountability. The First Amendment protects speech. It does not give corporations a free pass to design products in ways that harm people for a profit or violate our consumer protection laws.

From social media to artificial intelligence to the infrastructure powering it all, tech accountability will be one of the defining issues of the years ahead. The responsibility is clear: The technology children grow up with must be worthy of their trust.

ELLA AUDREY SCHEUERELL

Health care for women with autism: Ask and advocate

Ella Audrey Scheuerell is a cartoonist and storyteller from the Greater Boston area. To learn more about her, visit ellaaudreyart.com.

Call for help ends with detention by ICE

►ICE
Continued from Page A1

field office in a suburban business park that critics say is ill equipped as a jail for overnight detentions, lacking sleeping and showering facilities, adequate food, and other basic services, particularly personal and medical care for women.

“I was afraid that I was going to go crazy in there,” do Carmo Santana said in an interview with the Globe. “I was really scared.”

Immigrants and their attorneys have told the Globe that detainees in Burlington sleep without mattresses on concrete floors and are unable to shower. Some women said they lacked access to menstrual products. They were given crackers and microwaved oatmeal as meals. And medical help is scarce. Earlier this year, a woman who was 24 weeks pregnant and detained by ICE at the facility was rushed to the hospital in acute abdominal pain, the Globe previously reported.

Dr. Carolyn Sufrin, an associate professor of gynecology and obstetrics at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, said a woman experiencing the aftermath of a miscarriage should be offered safe alternatives to detention — and certainly should not be held in such harsh conditions.

“This is a very high-risk individual who should not have been exposed to this level of worsening trauma,” she said. “It is our responsibility to care for people when they are under the supervision of our criminal justice system, our criminal legal system.”

As the agency has ramped up arrests in New England for more than a year, ICE has used the field office more frequently for longer overnight stays. There are no immigration detention centers for women in Massachusetts, so women are often at Burlington while ICE finds bed space for them in other states.

A spokesperson for the Department of Homeland Security, which oversees ICE, defended the use of the Massachusetts office for overnight detention.

“Any claims of inadequate conditions at the ICE Burlington facility are categorically FALSE,” the spokesperson said. “No law-breakers in the history of human civilization have been treated better than illegal aliens in the United States.”

But do Carmo Santana’s detention, her attorneys said in court documents, would appear to violate ICE’s own internal policy which states that agents should avoid detaining individuals who are known to be pregnant, postpartum, or nursing — except in “exceptional circumstances.” However, that policy was adopted by the Biden administration, and the Trump administration has upended multiple longtime norms and practices in immigration enforcement.

Even so, Sorokin, the judge in her case, said in court that “ICE has conceded to me ... that the Burlington hold facility is not a place that’s appropriate to hold people for extended periods of time.”

“It’s kind of troubling,” Sorokin said, “as a systemic matter.” He had never heard of ICE providing a medical evaluation to a detainee upon arrival, he said.

A 29-year-old immigrant from Brazil, do Carmo Santana was arrested by Border Patrol in July 2021 near San Ysidro, Calif., the DHS spokesperson said, after unlawfully crossing the southern border. She was subsequently released, applied for asylum, and has an immigration court date scheduled for 2029. She received employment authorization and has been working as a house cleaner.

She and her fiancé, Gabriel Lemos, a legal permanent resident, are set to be married next year, after which she plans to apply for her green card, too.

In late August, do Carmo Santana miscarried and under-

HANDOUT

Gabriel Lemos and Iara do Carmo Santana, with her son and his daughter. Lemos called 911 when do Carmo Santana was distraught following a miscarriage and an infection.

went a surgical procedure, but soon developed an infection for which she was prescribed antibiotics and pain medication.

“We were suffering a lot from it,” Lemos, 31, said. “It was really hard for her to keep on going.”

Afterward, do Carmo Santana was depressed, cried frequently, and could not get out of bed, the couple said in an interview.

On Sept. 4, Lemos called police because he had “concerns for her well-being,” attorney Jason Thomas told a Malden district court judge during do Carmo Santana’s arraignment. She was distressed because of the miscarriage and “in a state of depression.” But when Malden police arrived at the couple’s home, they arrested her.

Do Carmo Santana was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and assault and battery on a household member, court records show. An attorney for the state said that, according to police, she pushed Lemos with two hands and struck him with a hair straightener.

The Globe was unable to obtain the police report. Malden police Chief Marc Gatcomb said police are not authorized to release information regarding domestic reports or mental health incidents, per federal and state Massachusetts laws.

She was detained at the Malden police station Friday evening and was released some hours later. But once she was booked at the police station, ICE could access do Carmo Santana’s information through a shared FBI database that is updated when someone is arrested and fingerprinted. ICE uses the database to identify individuals taken into police custody whom they deem eligible for detention.

ICE agents arrested her as she was released from police custody.

Do Carmo Santana said she informed ICE agents she was experiencing symptoms of anxiety and depression, and that she had recently had a medical procedure. She had to take an antibiotic for the infection, the family said.

She said she nevertheless received no medical evaluation upon her arrival at Burlington.

She was hungry, she said, and there was no Portuguese translator to help her communicate. Lemos brought her medication to treat her infection to the facility, but do Carmo Santana said officials would often forget to give it to her.

“I wasn’t OK,” she said. “I told them that I had just had surgery, that I was feeling pain in the bottom of my belly,” she said, but she received no medical attention.

Since do Carmo Santana was detained, the symptoms of her infection, including pelvic pain, worsened, Lemos said, and she has not been able to return to work.

Todd Pomerleau and Thomas, do Carmo Santana’s attorneys, filed a habeas petition in federal district court alleging that ICE violated her due process rights. Sorokin ordered her release on Sept. 8, and she was reunited with Lemos and her 6-year-old son.

Reports about the conditions inside Burlington are not new, Pomerleau told Sorokin during the federal hearing. “Time and time again,” Pomerleau said, detainees “complain of these same deplorable conditions.”

“It doesn’t improve,” Pomerleau said.

ICE had intended to transfer do Carmo Santana more than 1,000 miles away to Louisiana, where there was available bed space, a US attorney said in the federal court hearing.

Dr. Theresa Cheng, an assistant clinical professor in emergency medicine at the University of California San Francisco, said miscarriages can take more than a week to resolve and require close monitoring from a doctor. But from her experience, she said, ICE is consistently dismissive toward such health concerns.

“We hear stories again and again,” said Cheng, who has worked with detained women and also researches immigration health policy. “And I’ve seen, personally, people coming from detention facilities and they are on the brink of death because their medical conditions have been ignored, or scoffed at, for so long.”

Giulia McDonnell Nieto del Rio can be reached at giulia.mcdnr@globe.com. Follow her @giuliamcdnr.

After a missed connection, she’s hoping a note will work

►BLUE LINE
Continued from Page A1

Heights. She didn’t follow him.

But she wished she had.

Filosa has since embarked on a search tailored for the first act of a rom-com. In it, the heroine — her hair perfect and tightly coiled — loiters for hours near the location of her failed meet-cute in search of a second chance. She tacks notes onto a half-dozen trees and poles near where he disembarked, hoping to see him again. And she spends an afternoon with a reporter (and fellow hopeless romantic) whose colleague stumbled upon one of the notes and joked in a message: “Your next big T story.”

Everyone is taking it earnestly.

Filosa’s message is bolded, highlighted, accented with emojis, and laminated with scotch tape to brace it against the elements. “LOOKING FOR THE GUY WITH THE BLUE EYES,” it starts. She doesn’t include her name, just her phone number.

“I’m very shy, and instead of smiling back at you, I did what I do best when I’m nervous: looked down!” Filosa, 43, wrote

(bolds included). She describes his light blue suit and briefly, herself: curly-haired, with dark eyes and beauty marks, dressed in all black. Text me, she requested. “Maybe this time we’ll say hello.”

A cynic would see this as an act of desperation. There are probably hundreds of missed connections on the T every day — personal ones, not a Green-to-Red Line transfer — that are never found.

But Filosa believes in magic. She’s Italian-born. (At a 3 p.m. coffee, she forbade a reporter from getting a cappuccino because it was “too late.”) She knows she could date efficiently and exactly. Find someone kind and stable. Settle.

Yet, what can she say? She wants love.

“It is so annoying,” Filosa said, “that we are like this.”

Dating apps? Full of “people with no manners,” she snapped. Everyone’s attention span is broken. Swipe left, swipe right. “There is no commitment. There is no time. There is no beauty in the process,” she said. “No romance.”

But when the potential for love entered the picture somewhere under the city, Filosa shut down. On the T that evening, she could barely get out her usual toothy smile. By her account, she was “paralyzed,” and she still blushes while answering questions about the meeting.

“I feel like a teenager,” Filosa said.

It’s embarrassing, because she knows how she sounds in the worst interpretation of her story: ditzy and delusional. Filosa only left the note a week after the night in question, when she was struggling to put Mr. Mystery out of her mind. But after she duplicated the message on a few Facebook groups, the commenters came.

“Is this seriously what women are doing these days?” one wrote.

She brushed it off. Anyway, crazier (and cuter) things have happened. Two Southborough residents who met on the commuter rail later got married on the train in 2009. A former T executive first talked to his future wife by offering her his seat on the Green Line. There is even a 1998 movie — that Filosa had never heard of — called “Next Stop Wonderland” about two people, destined to be together, who keep crossing paths around the Blue Line.

PHOTOS BY PAT GREENHOUSE/GLOBE STAFF

Daniela Filosa posted notes on several trees and poles near the Orient Heights stop, hoping the man she saw get off the Blue Line at that station will get in touch with her.

It’s almost too on the nose.

Even in her own life, Filosa has seen the perfect combination of determination and luck come together before. When she left a similar note looking for a lost camera full of memories on vacation in 2010, a family returned it to her and refused a reward. Years later, Filosa met her ex-husband while she was on a trip to Boston. (Filosa, who’s worked in state government, now has been single for a few years.)

Two of Filosa’s friends also met on a train abroad and now have a family, she said.

The MBTA, for one, is rooting for her. The system has always been “more than transportation,” linking “us all with new faces and places,” spokesperson Maya Bingham said in a statement. “$2.40 for a subway ride and a new connection — sounds better than a dating app! We wish Daniela well in finding her missed connection.”

Filosa has given into the girlish possibility of the stars aligning. Who was he, heading east in a crisp suit on a late summer night? He could work in finance or law, she wondered. Maybe he was out to a late dinner.

She would love to find the answer, even if the two of them are not “meant to be,” because really, “meant to meet” is enough for her.

“You have to believe good things can happen — things like this,” Filosa said in between sips of a macchiato. Her eyes wandered toward the window. She threw her head back in a chuckle. “Our soul is kind of like a light. Sometimes someone sparks it.”

Laura Crimaldi of the Globe staff contributed to this report. Diti Kohli can be reached at diti.kohli@globe.com. Follow her @ditikohli.

BOSTON GLOBE MEDIA
1 Exchange Place, Suite 201
Boston, MA 02109-2132

The Boston Globe (USPS061-420) is published Monday–Saturday.
Periodicals postage-paid at Boston, MA.
Postmaster, send address changes to:

Mail Subscription Department
300 Constitution Dr.
Taunton, MA 02783

YEARLY MAIL SUBSCRIPTION RATES FOR NEW ENGLAND

Seven days$1,612.00
Daily (6 Days)$1,060.80
Sunday only.....$520.00

For all other mail subscription rates and information, call 1-888-MYGLOBE or visit www.bostonglobe.com/subscribe

Free newspaper reading service for the visually impaired: Contact
Perkins Braille & Talking Book Library at 800-852-3133 or www.perkinslibrary.org

REMEMBERING VIETNAM VETERANS FROM SOUTH BOSTON

PHOTOS BY JESSICA RINALDI/GLOBE STAFF

Jack Lyons of South Boston placed a flower for each South Boston soldier killed in Vietnam at the South Boston Vietnam Memorial on Sunday, following a rededication ceremony that was moved indoors to St. Brigid Church because of rain. The event, attended by veterans, their families, and elected officials, marked the 45th anniversary of the memorial. At right, a member of the Marine Corps Honor Guard walked into the church for the ceremony. B2

‘We put housing justice on the ballot.’

DAVID MORALES, Rhode Island state representative who beat incumbent Brett Smiley in the Democratic primary for Providence mayor

With Morales’s win, rent control is on the table

By Steph Machado
GLOBE STAFF

PROVIDENCE — After Wednesday’s primary delivered victories for progressive candidates up and down the ballot in Providence, city leaders are all but certain to enact limits on rent increases in 2027.

The Providence City Council narrowly failed to enact rent control earlier this year, falling one vote short of enough to override a veto from Mayor Brett Smiley.

But that roadblock burst apart

Providence mayor’s loss in primary gives progressives on City Council an opening

Wednesday night when state Representative David Morales, a 27-year-old democratic socialist, beat Smiley in the Democratic primary for mayor.

“When working people are getting priced out of the city that they love, then we must cap rent increases at 4 percent every single year,” Morales said to a cheering crowd in his victory speech on Wednesday. “We put housing justice on the ballot.”

Morales is a heavy favorite to beat Republican Dave Talan in November, and the new mayor takes office in January.

Without a mayoral veto in play, the council will need a simple majority of eight out of 15 votes — rather than a supermajority of 10 — to enact the legislation.

At least nine of the Democratic primary winners have publicly supported rent stabilization. All are expected to win their general elections in November.

New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani, also a democratic socialist, was among those commenting on Morales’s win and the expected housing legislation Thursday, after being asked about the race at a news conference.

“The little that I do know about
RENT CONTROL, Page B4

CLASSIC CAROUSELS ARE HANGING ON

By Carlos Muñoz
GLOBE STAFF

PAWTUCKET, R.I. — Every summer, children scramble onto a carousel and grab the reins of a favorite horse, or a more fearsome lion, gargoyle, dog, or mythical creature for a memorable, roundabout ride.

While people have been thrilled by carousel rides for generations, they weren’t built to last indefinitely. Maintaining them is costly, and while they’re found in amusement parks across the country, many were built in seaside locations, leaving them vulnerable to storms and sea level rise because of climate change.

According to Patrick Wentzel, president of the National Carousel Association, there were 3,500 to 5,000 carousels built in the United States from the 1860s to the 1960s. Now, there are about 400 left — six of them in Rhode Island.

Rhode Island once had at least a dozen, possibly more since some locations had multiple rides. You can still take a spin (and even try to grab at the brass

CAROUSELS, Page B4

TOM HERDE/GLOBE STAFF/FILE

Slater Memorial Park’s carousel in Pawtucket, R.I., was created by Charles Loeff, a furniture maker who built many merry-go-rounds.

Germany, US push education reforms

Low test scores prompt action

Countries learning from other systems

By Christopher Huffaker
GLOBE STAFF

BERLIN — German education officials faced a conundrum this year all too familiar in the United States: Student test scores had been sliding for more than a decade, fueling calls for sweeping reforms.

One prominent education leader from Hamburg, arguing for reforms, recently described the country’s learning trajectory as an “inverted smiley face” with gains in the early 2000s followed by a decade of decline that began before the pandemic. The test scores of American students have followed much the same path, as have those of their peers across much of the world.

The nearly worldwide slide suggests the problem extends beyond America’s debates over reading instruction and take-home laptops, making the search for answers more urgent.

Looking abroad at other education systems can help identify practices that reliably improve learning, according to experts who study education through a global lens. Countries defying the global decline in achievement show that even with challenges like smartphones, students can improve.

The world’s highest-performing school systems share several traits, according to Montserrat Gomendio, the former education lead at the organization that administers the PISA international student assessments. Countries such as Singapore and South Korea emphasize knowledge-building, hold students to high expectations, and place a premium on teacher quality.

“You only allow students who are top performers,” Gomendio said, “to study education.”

As students return to school in the United States and Germany this fall, education leaders in both countries have sought lessons internally from places

TEST SCORES, Page B3

Bursts of ‘pink noise’ can boost brain health

Gentle sounds timed during sleep cycles

By Sarah Rahal
GLOBE STAFF

A faint rush of sound, delivered at precisely the right moment, could improve brain health while people sleep, according to a new study.

Researchers at MIT and Boston University found that carefully timed bursts of “pink noise” trigger stronger waves of cerebrospinal fluid, or CSF, that clear waste from the brain.

Pink noise is a gentle, static-like sound. Like white noise, it contains a range of pitched frequencies, but its lower frequencies are louder, and its higher frequencies are softer. This creates a balanced sound similar to steady rain or a distant waterfall.

The study, published Wednesday in Science Translational Medicine, involved 14 people who fell asleep during afternoon sessions inside an MRI scanner. It was designed as a proof of concept.

The work grew out of research Laura Lewis, an MIT associate professor, conducted several years ago, when her team discovered large waves of cerebrospinal fluid moving through the brain during sleep. Those waves appeared to follow the slow electrical waves characteristic of non-REM sleep, the restorative portion of the sleep cycle when brain activity slows.

“We were really fascinated by that
PINK NOISE, Page B5

JESSICA RINALDI/GLOBE STAFF

Michael Gannon, a Vietnam veteran, carried wreaths to place at the South Boston Vietnam Memorial on Sunday. A ceremony marking the 45th anniversary of the memorial was held at St. Brigid Church. It was moved indoors because of rain.

South Boston honors fallen soldiers at rededication of Vietnam Memorial

By Katie Cressman
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

A mix of veterans, their families, and elected officials gathered beneath the stained-glass windows of St. Brigid Church in South Boston on Sunday for the 45th rededication of the South Boston Vietnam Memorial.

Moved indoors because of rainy weather, the ceremony took place just across from Med-al of Honor Park, where the memorial sits. The memorial honors 25 service members from the South Boston community who died during the Vietnam War.

Seated throughout the church pews, veterans wore red flower corsages signifying their service. Among them was former US senator Jim Webb, a former Marine who served in Vietnam, with a red flower pinned over his heart.

Webb, who also served as an assistant secretary of defense and secretary of the Navy, attended the first memorial ceremony 45 years ago.

“Walking in, I saw so many friends who were here today, and 45 years ago,” he said to the audience.

Webb also spoke about the number of young men who enlisted from Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and how many of them died in the war. He said the number of men who enlisted from South Boston was significantly higher.

“In this community, you can see what they did when their country called,” Webb said.

Tom Lyons, who also served in the Marines during the Vietnam War, spoke about the importance of honoring those who served.

“For those of us who serve, remembrance is more than tradition; it’s an obligation,” he said to the audience.

Lyons helped to construct the memorial in Boston, which was the first of its kind in the city and one of the first in the country. He is also the chairman of the South Boston Vietnam Memorial Committee, which organizes the annual ceremony.

“We remember because freedom has always come at a price,” he said.

At one point during his remarks, Lyons became emotional while addressing the 25 service members to whom the memorial is dedicated.

“If you could see us today, I hope you know your lives continue in spirit,” he said. “Your sacrifice continues to unite us.”

Several elected officials attended Sunday’s ceremony, including Boston City Council president Ed Flynn, State Senator Nick Collins, and Mayor Michelle Wu.

“At a time when the rest of the country was ready to turn its back on those who served, this community stood up,” Wu said.

“There’s dedication and unflinching resolve to keep showing up,” she continued. “Year after year, season after season, occasion after occasion. ... As time goes by, it is on us to make sure that the next generation remembers.”

Because the ceremony had moved indoors, Gold Star families were invited to stand in lieu of the traditional laying of wreaths.

US Representative Stephen Lynch was the last elected official to take the altar, using his remarks to emphasize the importance of remembrance.

“There’s a saying that there is loyalty in the simple act of remembrance, and that is really why we are here,” he said. “We are each, in our own way, trying to express our loyalty to the memory of those young men.”

The name of each fallen soldier was read aloud. One by one, the veterans in attendance approached the altar and saluted in their honor.

Not long after, a trumpeter played taps, followed by the singing of “America the Beautiful.” As loved ones held hands, some quietly sang along, swaying gently as the song went on.

“Southie never forgets,” Lynch told attendees. “And that makes me so proud.”

Katie Cressman can be reached at katherine.cressman@globe.com.

Waltham man arraigned on manslaughter charge

By Madyline Swearing
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

A man who got into a fight with another man, who later died, in May outside a Waltham gas station was arraigned on manslaughter charges Friday in Middlesex Superior Court, prosecutors said.

A plea of not guilty was entered on behalf of Timothy J. Scalisi, 31, of Waltham. He was ordered held in lieu of posting a $10,000 cash bail, court records show.

His next court date is Nov. 10.

On May 27, Waltham police responded to Woodside’s Service Station on Weston Street for a report of two men fighting near the parking lot entrance, Middlesex District Attorney Marian Ryan’s office said in a statement.

Nicholas Dagostino, 23, of Waltham, told police he was trying to enter the parking lot, but it was blocked by Scalisi’s vehicle, according to the June 8 joint statement issued with Waltham police chief Kevin O’Connell.

Scalisi and Dagostino exchanged words before they got out of their cars and a physical struggle broke out, according to prosecutors.

During the struggle, Scalisi allegedly picked up Dagostino and “brought him violently to the ground,” Ryan and O’Connell’s joint statement said.

Dagostino became nauseated after the altercation was vomiting, and appeared confused, before he was taken to a hospital, officials said. He died two days later at Lahey Burlington Medical Center.

It was later determined that Dagostino suffered a brain bleed and a fracture to the lower rear right side of his skull due to the assault, the June statement said.

Scalisi was identified from security videos from the gas station and nearby businesses, according to the statement.

He was charged with manslaughter and assault and battery causing serious bodily injury. He pleaded not guilty during his arraignment in June in Waltham District Court, according to court records.

On Sept. 3, a Middlesex County grand jury indicted Scalisi on a charge of manslaughter, moving the case to the Superior Court.

The district court charges against Scalisi were dismissed on Thursday, Sept. 10, court records show.

Madyline Swearing can be reached at madyline.swearing@globe.com

Cape Cod assistant principal faces third OUI charge after Boston arrest

By Nick Stoico
GLOBE STAFF

An assistant principal for a Cape Cod middle school was arrested last month in Boston and charged with her third operating under the influence offense, court records show.

Holly Burns, 44, the assistant principal at Dennis-Yarmouth Middle School, was arrested Aug. 9 after police stopped her in the area of Beach and South streets in the Leather District, according to a police report.

Authorities allege Burns drove her white Jeep Grand Cherokee in an opposite lane toward oncoming traffic, forcing drivers to swerve out of her way, and later drove the wrong way down a one-way street before she was stopped.

She was charged with operating under the influence of liquor, third offense, which is a felony. She was also charged with misdemeanor reckless operation of a motor vehicle and improper operation of a motor vehicle, a civil motor vehicle infraction, police said.

She was arraigned in Boston Municipal Court on Aug. 10 and pleaded not guilty. She was released on personal recognizance with conditions that she not drive or consume alcohol and must wear an alcohol-monitoring device, according to court records.

Burns’s attorney, Thomas Glynn, declined to comment Thursday. She is due back in court Sept. 22.

Her arrest was previously reported by Boston 25 News.

Around 1:45 p.m. on Aug. 9, officers on patrol in the area of Kneeland Street and Atlantic Avenue saw Burns maneuver her vehicle “into oncoming traffic” with “several cars having to dodge out of the way” before the vehicle came to a stop, according to the police report.

Burns allegedly backed up “into oncoming traffic” before taking a left turn onto South Street, a one-way road, the report stated.

The officers activated their cruiser lights to stop the vehicle, the report said. But after pulling over, she allegedly “proceeded to place the car in reverse, nearly striking the officer’s cruiser.”

Police wrote in the report that Burns’s eyes appeared “glossy and pinpoint” and she was slurring her speech. Officers said they smelled a “strong odor of an alcoholic beverage coming from the vehicle or her person.”

When police asked Burns where she was coming from and heading to, she said “I am here from New Hampshire, but I’m going to Plymouth, and I also have to find a hotel

“The district was made aware of the arrest and conducted an internal investigation.”

MARC SMITH
Superintendent,
Dennis-Yarmouth Regional School District

nearby now,” followed by “I didn’t see the sign,” according to the report.

Police said the officers asked Burns if she needed medical attention and she declined. When asked if she’d had been drinking, Burns said no and that her last alcoholic drink was “last night.”

The officers arrested Burns and searched her vehicle, where they allegedly found a Miller Lite can that had spilled inside the middle console, according to the report. Police also allegedly found a can of cannabis gummies and a “small blue THC bottle” in the vehicle.

Police wrote that Burns had prior OUI-liquor offenses out of Plymouth District Court.

The superintendent of the Dennis-Yarmouth Regional School District, Marc Smith, said Burns remains employed with the school district.

“The district was made aware of the arrest and conducted an internal investigation,” Smith said in an email. “Any other information regarding this is a personnel matter and is privileged” under state labor law.

Nick Stoico can be reached at nick.stoico@globe.com.

The Boston Globe

News

CONTACTS, TIPS, COMMENTS
Switchboard: (617) 929-2000
(617) 929-7400
newstip@globe.com
comments@globe.com
SPOTLIGHT TEAM TIP LINE
(617) 929-7483

Customer service

PRINT AND DIGITAL
(888) 694-5623
customerservice@globe.com

Advertising

DISPLAY
(617) 929-2200
bostonglobemedia.com

CLASSIFIED
(617) 929-1500
boston.com/classifieds

	City	Retail	Other
7-day home delivery	$70.00	70.00	70.00
Sunday-only home delivery	$22.50	22.50	22.50
Daily single copy	$4.00	4.00	4.00
Sunday single copy	$6.00	6.00	6.00

Lottery

SUNDAY MIDDAY	0055
Payoffs (based on a $1 bet)
EXACT ORDER
All 4 digits	$5,351
First or last 3	$749
Any 2 digits	$64
Any 1 digit	$6
ANY ORDER
All 4 digits	$892
First 3	$250
Last 3	$250
SUNDAY NIGHT	7893
Payoffs (based on a $1 bet)
EXACT ORDER
All 4 digits	$5,298
First or last 3	$742
Any 2 digits	$64
Any 1 digit	$6
ANY ORDER
All 4 digits	$221
First 3	$124
Last 3	$124
MILLIONAIRE FOR LIFE
Sept. 12	02-13-42-45-58
Millionaire Ball 02
Jackpot: $1 million a year for life ; winners

MASS CASH

Sept. 1304-06-17-25-27

Jackpot: $100,000; no winners

MEGABUCKS

Sept. 1205-16-20-22-41-43

Jackpot: $500,000; winners

PREVIOUS DRAWINGS

	Midday	Night
Saturday	4958	4352
Friday	6468	0213
Thursday	4591	6629
Wednesday	7235	4592
Tuesday	9416	2494

WEEKEND NUMBERS

AROUND NEW ENGLAND

Sun. Maine, N.H., Vermont

Day: 3-digit9964-digit6062

Eve: 3-digit8284-digit8423

Rhode Island

Sunday1368

Saturday's Powerball

14-16-23-58-69

Powerball03

Jackpot: $251 million; winners

This day in history

Today is Monday, Sept. 14, the 257th day of 2026. There are 108 days left in the year.

Birthdays: Former Boston Bruins coach and general manager Harry Sinden is 94. Actor Walter Koenig (“Star Trek”) is 90. Architect Renzo Piano is 89. Basketball Hall of Fame coach Larry Brown is 86. Pope Leo XIV is 71. Country singer John Berry is 67. Supreme Court justice Ketanji Brown Jackson is 56. Rapper Nas is 53. Olympic gold medal middle-distance runner Hicham El Guerrouj is 52. Florida Governor Ron DeSantis is 48. Chef and TV personality Katie Lee is 45. NBA Actor Emma Kenney is 27.

►In 1716, Boston Light, considered the first lighthouse in North America, was illuminated for the first time, with Little Brewster Island resident George Worthylake serving as the first lighthouse keeper.

►In 1847, during the Mexican-American War, US forces under General Winfield Scott took control of Mexico City.

►In 1861, the first naval engagement since the start of the Civil War took place as the USS Colorado attacked and sank the Confederate private schooner Judah off the coast of Pensacola, Fla.

►In 1901, President William McKinley died in Buffalo, N.Y., of gunshot wounds inflicted by an assassin eight days earlier; Vice President Theodore Roosevelt succeeded him, becoming the youngest-ever US president at age 42.

►In 1927, modern dance pioneer Isadora Duncan died in Nice, France, when her scarf became entangled in a wheel of the sports car in which she was riding.

►In 1982, Princess Grace of Monaco, formerly film star

Grace Kelly, died at age 52 of injuries from a car crash the day before.

►In 1991, the government of South Africa, the African National Congress and the Inkatha Freedom Party signed a national peace pact.

►In 1994, on the 34th day of a strike by players, acting baseball commissioner Bud Selig announced the 1994 season was over.

►In 2001, Americans packed churches and public squares on a day of remembrance for the victims of the Sept. 11 attacks. President George W. Bush prayed with his Cabinet and attended services at Washington National Cathedral, then flew to New York, where he walked into the ruins of the World Trade Center and addressed rescue workers in a show of resolve.

►In 2012, fury over an anti-Muslim film ridiculing the Prophet Muhammad sparked violent clashes across the Muslim world.

►In 2018, Hurricane Florence made landfall on the US southeast coast in the Carolinas, swamping entire communities, trapping hundreds in rising floodwaters, and leaving at least 43 people dead.

►In 2022, a planeload of migrants from Texas arrived on Martha’s Vineyard, part of a ploy orchestrated by Florida Governor Ron DeSantis to force northern states to share the burden of addressing the nation’s immigration problems.

►In 2024, the first submarine especially designed to accommodate men and women sailors was commissioned by the US Navy. The USS New Jersey, a fast-attack submarine, was put into service with separate sleeping and bathing quarters for the coed crew.

SUZANNE KREITER/GLOBE STAFF

Students in a first grade classroom on the first day of school at the Hernandez School.

US, Germany take different paths to battle low test scores

►TEST SCORES
Continued from Page B1

that had long struggled academically but recently made significant gains.

In Massachusetts, leaders looked to Mississippi and Louisiana as they overhauled the state's reading instruction. That could result in the improvements Gomendio recommends, at least in English classes. Germany turned to Hamburg, the diverse city-state near the North Sea which had become one of the country's highest-scoring states.

Officials here are pushing beyond incremental reforms. In a significant cultural shift, Germany is moving away from its long tradition of "halbtagschule," or half-day schools.

That means as first-graders start school his month, they will for the first time all be able to attend school all-day. It was a reform Hamburg previously implemented in part to address inequities visible at an early age.

The afternoon session is optional because its purpose is to help more mothers work, not improve education.

And as the Trump administration has sought to reduce the federal role in education, Germany has gone in the opposite direction. Earlier this year, the country's states, which have autonomy over schooling, agreed on a nationwide plan modeled on Hamburg's success. Details are still being finalized, but the plan includes tracking more data, such as standardized tests, student surveys, and teacher observations.

That contrast between the United States and Germany was evident last week with the release of the latest international PISA test results. Fifteen-year-olds in both countries scored at their lowest levels ever in reading and math.

In response, German state officials doubled down on a national push to improve education.

"We will discuss the recommended measures in depth at the Conference of Ministers of Education," said Bavarian state Education Minister Anna Stolz at a news conference. "We will continue to advance the initiatives we have already launched."

American Education Secretary Linda McMahon, however, drew the opposite conclusion in a statement criticizing the "one-size-fits-all federal education bureaucracy."

Like the United States, Germany began the 21st century in a frenzy of education reform. While President George W. Bush pushed for the No Child Left Behind Act to create more federal oversight over education, German leaders grappled with the "PISA Shock," the revelation in the first international PISA assessment that their students' test scores were below average.

As a result, Germany created its first national education guidelines and a research institute, the IQB, which ran a new national system of tests.

"IQB was founded to improve the German education system because our results were quite poor — well below average," said Pauline Schröter, the institute's spokesperson.

Many blamed Germany's educational decline on its intensive tracking system. The country splits students into different career paths after primary school.

Germany is not as racially or economically segregated as the United States, but its tracking system divided students by family wealth just as sharply, said sociologist Heike Solga. To address the issue and falling enrollment, many regions reduced the number of tracks and sought to create more flexibility.

At first, the new focus seemed to be paying off. From 2000 and 2015, German scores on the PISA reading test rose from 483 points — below the average score of 500 — to 509.

But despite continued reforms, Germany's gains peaked more than a decade ago. Students scored 465 in reading in 2025, their lowest level ever, erasing all gains. In math, where they were long above average, they were now scoring far below.

In both countries, according to various tests, the pandemic further accelerated declines and exposed gaps. American 15-year-olds' achievement has not declined as sharply on the PISA tests, but other assessments including the Nation's Report Card have documented sharp slides among younger students.

But where the US has seen a backlash to Chromebooks and other classroom screens, German politicians continue to worry about unequal access to computers.

Germany is doubling down on standardized tests, while US states from Massachusetts to Mississippi have recently moved away from them.

In other areas, Germany is adopting practices that have long existed elsewhere. The plan the German states agreed to earlier this year emphasizes data monitoring that is commonplace in the United States. Student attendance information, for example, is not collected universally in Germany.

Similarly, there's growing interest in making kindergarten more academic, and the plan also recommends studying American schools' practices to improve student mental health.

Germany and the United have made some similar reforms, including increasing education spending in recent years. And some theories for declining test scores are shared: Both countries have struggled to educate large immigrant populations and growing numbers of students with disabilities.

But changing demographics can only explain part of the trend because the scores of all student groups have declined, said Josefine Lühe, the scientific coordinator of a major annual education report.

The real culprit, according to many observers, is social media and smartphones. Social media bans for young people are popular with politicians, if not with courts, on both sides of the Atlantic. And prohibiting cell-phones has become a prescription for academic problems across the globe.

But students in the world's best school systems have smartphones. And Nat Malkus, an education policy scholar at the conservative American Enterprise Institute who has analyzed international achievement trends, notes that declines in student performance began as early as 2013, when very few children had their own smartphones.

Policymakers need to be mindful of that timeline, Malkus said, to avoid putting too much emphasis on the wrong interventions.

"We could successfully manufacture a shift on tech," Malkus said, "and still be like, 'Well, that didn't fix it. ... We just made our big push, and we missed.'"

Christopher Huffaker can be reached at christopher.huffaker@globe.com. Follow him @huffakingit.

Gang leader in Peabody admits to gun, drug charges, prosecutors say

By Tonya Alanez
GLOBE STAFF

A 30-year-old Brazilian man who was living in Peabody and dealing drugs and narcotics through a gang called Primeiro Comando Da Capital has pleaded guilty to numerous felony charges, according to the office of Leah B. Foley, US attorney for Massachusetts.

Adinazio Vinicius Soares Dias-Barbosa supplied fentanyl and cocaine to the violent transnational criminal organization based in Brazil and operating on the North Shore, federal prosecutors said.

Dias-Barbosa, who goes by the street name "Panda," is scheduled to be sentenced Dec.

3, Foley's office said.

Dias-Barbosa was in the United States illegally and operated as a general in the gang that is "one of the largest cocaine distributors in the world and is responsible for acts of violence and firearms trafficking," Foley's office said.

Dias-Barbosa was stopped by authorities while driving on Interstate 95 in South Carolina July 1, 2025, prosecutors said. He consented to a search of the vehicle but then ran away. He was captured on the grassy median.

During a search, investigators found nine rifles and ammunition in the vehicle, Foley's office said.

Dias-Barbosa admitted to buying the guns in South Carolina. He said he was taking them to a broker in Miami who would arrange to transport the rifles to Brazil through Paraguay, prosecutors said.

Dias-Barbosa pleaded guilty to conspiracy to distribute and possess with intent to distribute controlled substances, being an alien in possession of firearms and ammunition, and engaging in the business of dealing in firearms without a license.

If convicted as charged, Dias-Barbosa faces a maximum of 50 years in prison, according to prosecutors.

Tonya Alanez can be reached at tonya.alanez@globe.com.

notices & more

LEGAL NOTICES

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
LAND COURT
DEPARTMENT OF THE TRIAL COURT Docket Number: 26 SM 000436
ORDER OF NOTICE

TO: The Heirs, devisees, and Legal Representatives of the Estate of Donald Robert Cahoon; Robert Cahoon aka Robert D. Cahoon, individually and as the Personal Representative of the Estate of Donald Robert Cahoon aka Donald R. Cahoon and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act, 50 U.S.C. c. 50 §3901 (et seq) claiming to have an interest in a Mortgage covering real property in 37 Bingham Avenue, Dedham, MA 02026, given by Donald R. Cahoon to RBS Citizens, N.A., dated November 4, 2014 and Registered at the Norfolk County Registry District of the Land Court as Document 1,319,439, and noted on Certificate of Title Number 124907, has/have filed with this court a complaint for determination of Defendant's/Debtors' Servicemembers status.

Citizens Bank, N.A.

If you now are, or recently have been, in the active military service of the United States of America, then you may be entitled to the benefits of the Servicemembers Civil Relief Act. If you object to a foreclosure of the above-mentioned property on that basis, then you or your attorney must file a written appearance and answer in this court at: Three Pemberton Square, Boston, MA 02108 on or before 10/12/2026 or you may lose the opportunity to challenge the foreclosure on the ground of noncompliance with the Act.

Witness, Gordon H. Piper, Chief Justice of this Court on 8/28/2026.
Attest: Deborah J. Patterson, Recorder

ADVERTISEMENT

THIS PROJECT IS BEING ELECTRONICALLY BID AND HARD COPY BIDS WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED. Please review the instructions in the bid documents for details on how to register as an electronic bidder. Bids shall be prepared and submitted online via COMMBUYS at www.commbuys.com.

The Massachusetts Trial Court, Facilities Management & Capital Planning (FMCP), is seeking proposals for a service agreement to provide preventive maintenance and authorized repair services for chillers and associated HVAC equipment serving Region 3 (Middlesex and Essex County) court facilities. Covered equipment includes chillers, cooling towers, chilled-water pumps, condenser-water pumps, water separators, and related components.

General Bidders must be certified by the Division of Capital Asset Management and Maintenance (DCAMM) in the category of HVAC and must submit a current DCAMM Certificate of Eligibility along with a signed DCAMM Prime Update Statement.

General Bids will be received until October 7, 2026, at 2:00 PM, at which time they will be publicly opened online. Filed Sub Bids will be received until September 24, 2026 at 11:00 AM and publicly opened, forthwith online.

All bids must be submitted electronically through COMMBUYS and received no later than the date and time specified above.

General Bids shall be accompanied by a bid deposit in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the greatest possible bid amount (including all alternates), made payable to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Bid Forms and Contract Documents will be available at www.commbuys.com. General Bids: BD-27-1107-FREGS-ACCOU-133133; Commbuys Bid#: BD-27-1107-FREGS-ACCOU-133133;

LEGAL NOTICES

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court Department
Summons By Publication

ESSEX Division. DOCKET NUMBER: ES95W3198PA1

Kamilla Pariser, Plaintiff(s)

v.

Ikkan Kawabe, Defendant(s)

To the above named Defendant(s): Ikkan Kawabe

A Motion and Affidavit has been presented to this Court by the Plaintiff, Kamilla Pariser, seeking a Motion for Relief from Judgment Under Rule 60(b)(6) and Request to Amend Judgment with Supporting Affidavit.

You are required to serve upon Paul Joseph McCallum, Esq., - whose address is P.O. Box 32021, Boston, MA 02132 your answer on or before the 14th day of October, 2026.

If you fail to do so, the court will proceed to the hearing and adjudication of this action.

You are also required to file a copy of your answer in the office of the Register of this Court at Salem, MA.

Witness, Frances M. Giordano, Esquire, First Judge of said Court at Salem, this 4th day of September, 2026.

ADVERTISEMENT

THIS PROJECT IS BEING ELECTRONICALLY BID AND HARD COPY BIDS WILL NOT BE ACCEPTED. Please review the instructions in the bid documents for details on how to register as an electronic bidder. Bids shall be prepared and submitted online via COMMBUYS at www.commbuys.com.

The Massachusetts Trial Court, Office of Court Management, Facilities Management & Capital Planning (FMCP), the Awarding Authority, invites sealed bids from qualified General Contractors for the Interior Water Damage Repair and Restoration Project at the Brockton Trial Court, located at 215 Main Street in Brockton, MA 02301, in accordance with the Contract Documents prepared by FMCP.

This project consists of replacing or re-installing building materials that were damaged or removed as a result of the water leak. Damaged materials include carpet, cove base, ceiling tiles, sheetrock, and paint. Materials that were displaced include handrails and light fixtures. The estimated construction cost for this Project is $336,040.31.

Bids are subject to Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 149 Sections 44A-1 and to minimum wage rates as required by Massachusetts General Laws Chapter 149 Sections 26-27H.

General Bidders must be certified by the Division of Capital Asset Management and Maintenance (DCAMM) in the category of General Building Construction and must submit a current DCAMM Certificate of Eligibility along with a signed DCAMM Prime Update Statement.

Filed sub-bidders must be DCAMM certified for the trades listed below and bidders must include a current DCAMM Sub-Bidder Certificate of Eligibility and a signed DCAMM Sub-Bidder's Update Statement. SUBTRADES: Lathing and Plastering; Painting

General Bids will be received until October 7, 2026, at 2:00 PM, at which time they will be publicly opened online. Filed Sub Bids will be received until September 30, 2026 at 11:00 AM and publicly opened, forthwith online.

All bids must be submitted electronically through COMMBUYS and received no later than the date and time specified above.

General Bids and Sub-Bids shall be accompanied by a bid deposit in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the greatest possible bid amount (including all alternates), made payable to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Bid Forms and Contract Documents will be available at www.commbuys.com. General Bids: Open Market Bid #BD-27-1107-FREGS-ACCOU-133132; Filed Sub-Bids: Open Market Bid BD-27-1107-FREGS-ACCOU-133131

Experience Globe.com

Access your Globe subscription account online.

You can also take advantage of GlobeReader to have the news delivered straight to your desktop.

Access your Globe account online:
bostonglobe.com/subscriber

The Boston Globe

From the Charles to Prospect Hill...

Curated by Camberville editor Joshua Miller,
Camberville is your weekly guide to the interesting news, people, and events taking place in Cambridge and Somerville.

Sign up today at Globe.com/camberville

Wake up with The Boston Globe app

Powerful journalism at your fingertips.

The Boston Globe app provides you access to our best features on your phone or tablet. Read the e-paper, play games, and catch up on the latest news, investigative reports, and thought-provoking opinions and analysis.

Download the app today and enable push notifications for the best experience.

The Boston Globe

The thrill isn’t gone yet at the classic carousels in R.I.

►CAROUSELS
Continued from Page B1

ring) for $5 or less at Watch Hill Beach in Westerly, Roger Williams Park Zoo in Providence, Crescent Park in East Providence, Slater Park in Pawtucket, Adventureland in Narragansett, and at the Warwick Mall.

The Flying Horse Merry-Go-Round, an open-air carousel in Westerly, is believed to have been left behind by a traveling circus around 1883, according to Gary Anderson, who has been refurbishing its horses since 1993. Anderson is the operator of Anderson Artworks in Stonington, Conn., and he, his daughter, Elizabeth Anderson, and son, Benjamin Anderson, are the merry-go-round’s official caretakers.

Once a week during the summer, they sweep sand and water away from the ride, which is about 150 feet from the beach. They brush and condition the horsehair tails and manes, check the leather saddles and stirrups, and perform other maintenance.

“It has had a roof over it, at least since 1906,” Gary Anderson said. “If it’s raining, the center fills up with water. There’s salt water, mist, and other things to contend with.”

The Flying Horse has endured through the powerful storms that have hit Rhode Island. It was buried under sand after the Hurricane of 1938 pushed 17 feet of storm surge ashore, and has been battered by several more since, including hurricanes Carol (1954), Bob (1991), and Sandy (2012).

The original horses are on display the first few weeks of the season, before they’re replaced by a “sacrificial” set made for the busy summer season, Anderson said.

“They were never meant to last this long,” Anderson said. “Most carousels are wood-carved and painted. These have leather and metal tacks, marbles for eyes, and some sewing is involved.”

Climate change has claimed several of Rhode Island’s classic carousels.

In Newport, the carousel at Easton’s Beach was shuttered in 2019, after salt water damaged the building’s structure, according to Thomas Shevlin, the city’s director of communications. It was disassembled, and the pieces are in storage in Connecticut until officials can determine a new location.

JONATHAN WIGGS/GLOBE STAFF

A young girl rode the Flying Horse Merry-Go-Round in the Watch Hill neighborhood of Westerly, R.I., in 2002. The carousel has been in Westerly since the late 1800s and was buried in sand during the Hurricane of 1938.

“We’ve seen a steady uptick over the last 10 years of flooding events at Easton’s Beach,” Shevlin said. “We started seeing waves coming over the beach, over the sand, into the parking lot.”

Erosion and flooding also claimed the carousel at Atlantic Beach Park in Westerly’s Misquamicut district.

Carousels were a fixture at the family-owned Atlantic Beach Park for more than a century. One was destroyed during the Hurricane of 1938; it was replaced by a 54-foot-wide carousel housed in a special circular building designed especially for it. Eventually, that carousel’s mechanisms began to wear out, and it was replaced by a series of smaller rides.

“We even had a double-decker in there at one point,” owner Charles Trefes, the grandson of the original owner, told the Westerly Sun in 2025.

In 1996, Trefes and his wife, Amy Trefes, installed a 1915 Herschell-Spillman menagerie carousel that was relocated from Rocky Point Park in Warwick. But as with other carousels, high operating costs, flooding from storms, and changing safety regulations led them to shut down the Atlantic Beach Park carousel during the pandemic.

“Antique wooden carousels are very labor intensive,” Amy Trefes said in a statement emailed to the Globe.

The family planned to reopen the carousel in the summer of 2024. But violent, back-to-back coastal storms in December 2023 and January 2024 “essentially destroyed everything inside the main building,” she said.

“After witnessing the damage sustained during those winter storms firsthand and thinking back to other storms and hurricanes, it made us seriously contemplate our future and the precautions we can take to avoid future losses,” she said. “It is not if’ a future storm will come but

‘when.’”

The carousel was dismantled and put in storage “in a location far away from the angry ocean until we can find a safe new home for it where the beautiful horses can all run together again,” she said. The family hopes to get the carousel “up and running in the future.”

In the meantime, the Atlantic Beach Park arcade in Westerly still remains, as does the Windjammer Surf Bar nearby. “Plans to renovate the buildings are in the works for next summer, including a new and fresher arcade,” she said in an email.

Even disassembled, old carousels can be worth a pretty penny. Carousel horses can fetch $100,000 or more apiece at auction, according to the publication Carousel History. Given the high operating costs, keeping them off the auction block can be costly.

“We lost a lot back in the 1980s to auctions,” said Wentzel of the National Carousel Association. “Carousel figures were expensive. They were breaking them up.”

But some local carousels have survived.

Melissa Kells Burdick, owner of Adventureland in Narragansett, said she installed the 28-foot Victorian-style Poppy’s Carousel in memory of her parents, Raymond and Patricia Kells, who founded Adventureland in 1985.

“It’s you just experiencing the ride. It brings back all the parts of childhood that are innocent and beautiful, in my opinion,” Burdick said. “That’s why kids love it. Their faces light up.”

In Pawtucket, Slater Memorial Park’s carousel is part joy ride, part thrill ride. It was originally made for Lee Funland Park in Troy, N.Y., and came to Rhode Island around 1910, according to Cheryl Babiec and Patricia Zacks, members of Friends of the Loeff Carousel at Slater Park, a nonprofit organization that works to preserve the ride.

“It’s magic. The unit’s like 131 years old,” Zacks said. “It’s

With Morales’s win, rent control is on the table in Providence

►RENT CONTROL
Continued from Page B1

this soon-to-be new mayor is that one of the central issues in his race was around rent stabilization and around the importance of delivering on affordability,” Mamdani said. “What we’ve seen is that his constituents agreed with exactly that.”

The plan is to limit rent increases to 4 percent a year, with exemptions for smaller landlords and newly constructed buildings. Specifics of the proposal are likely to be tweaked from the version that was vetoed earlier this year.

The proposal was ferociously debated throughout the first half of 2026, with business leaders and builders warning it would slow construction and fail to lower rent.

But progressives, aided by groups including Reclaim Rhode Island and the Working Families Party, campaigned on the issue all summer, successfully ousting both Smiley and City Councilman John Goncalves, who was the swing vote on the ordinance and ultimately voted against it.

Goncalves, who was running for a third term in Ward 1, was narrowly defeated by Miguel Martínez Youngs, a former council staffer who wrote the rent stabilization ordinance that Goncalves opposed.

“I do see it as a mandate,” said Youngs, who quit his job to challenge Goncalves after the rent stabilization vote.

Goncalves wrote in a message to constituents on Thursday morning that he doesn’t plan to seek elected office again.

“I have never particularly excelled at the ‘game’ of politics,” Goncalves wrote. “I have made mistakes. I have learned some difficult lessons. But I have always tried to bring people together rather than divide them and to remember that public service, at its core, is about helping people.”

On the campaign trail, Goncalves defended his vote against rent stabilization, arguing it was poorly written and rushed through the council.

“I think it is really giant that the person who wrote the rent stabilization ordinance defeated John Goncalves,” said Dan Denvir, co-chair of Reclaim Rhode Island. “Reclaim did issue him a clear message that if he did not support rent stabilization, we would primary him, defeat him, and end his political career. And we did that.”

Other candidates in favor of capping rents who won contested primaries included Annajane Yolken in Ward 13, Yulyana Torres in Ward 3, and Jackie Goldman in Ward 5. Incumbents Justin Roias and Miguel Sanchez beat back serious challenges in Wards 4 and 6, respectively. (Roias’s challenger, Joseph Casoli, has asked for a recount, though it’s unclear if it will be approved with a 3.5-percentage point margin.)

But it wasn’t a clean sweep of pro-rent control candidates on Wednesday.

Pedro Espinal, a landlord who is staunchly against rent control but has otherwise championed affordable housing, easily won his Ward 10 primary against progressive challenger Aubrey Planitz, who was running on the rent issue.

Brian Guzman, who said on the campaign trail he opposed rent stabilization, won in a landslide in Ward 11.

And Juan Pichardo, one of the lead sponsors of the rent stabilization ordinance, is locked in a two-vote race for Ward 9 with Carmen Castillo, who previously represented the ward and has expressed misgivings about rent control.

With some mail, provisional, and overseas ballots yet to be counted, Castillo and Pichardo both requested a recount on Thursday as the race remained too close to call.

LANE TURNER/GLOBE STAFF

MARK STOCKWELL FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

Two other councilors who voted against rent control, James Taylor and Oscar Vargas, did not draw primary challengers.

“There is clearly a lot of pressure and a lot of support for rent stabilization in the city,” said Adam Myers, a political science professor at Providence College. “But can we interpret these results as a clear mandate for rent control? I don’t know. That said, it’s clear that it’s going to happen.”

Leadership of the council absolutely beautiful.”

“When you’re looking at it — the art and the pieces — it’s like a melting pot of the world on a carousel,” Babiec said.

During its heyday, the merry-go-round spun at a dizzying 15 to 20 miles per hour. Today, it rotates at about 9 to 10 miles per hour, still among the fastest in the country.

“It goes really fast, and it’s affordable for the kids,” said Cassandra Parise, who receives four free tickets a year from the Feinstein Jr. Scholar program. “My daughter loves it. She likes to pick the pink, bedazzled ones. [As a child], I always would pick the one I thought was the cutest, the prettiest, and most aesthetic.”

A ride originally cost 5 cents, and is still only $1.

Slater Memorial Park’s carousel was created by Charles I.D. Loeff, a Danish furniture maker who built more than 40 merry-go-rounds, including one in Coney Island, N.Y., as well as several amusement park rides, roller coasters, and Ferris wheels in the United States, according to the Friends of the Loeff Carousel at Slater Park.

Loeff also created the Crescent Park Carousel in East Providence, which was built in 1895 and added to the National Register of Historic Sites and Places in 1976, according to a website dedicated to the carousel’s history.

In 1985, the Rhode Island General Assembly proclaimed it “the State Jewel of American Folk Art” and in 1987, the Department of the Interior, National Park Service, designated the carousel a National Historic Landmark.

The National Carousel Association offers grants to help carousel owners preserve them, but the job of saving carousels really comes down to communities, Wentzel said. “They need to rally around them.”

“National organizations can help, but we’re not the ones who save the carousels,” he said. “It’ll be local groups. It needs to be preserved for the history of the community.”

Carlos Muñoz can be reached at carlos.munoz@globe.com. Follow him @ReadCarlos and on Instagram @Carlosbrknews.

not yet clear which one would emerge as a candidate for president.

Pichardo previously told the Globe he was interested in running for president of the council, before his race was too close to call. He could not be reached Thursday.

A Democratic caucus is likely to be held this month to endorse a president, though the formal election would not take place until the candidates are sworn in in January.

Morales said in an interview he would work with the council to craft the rent cap legislation.

“The [current] administration had no interest in pursuing rent stabilization in any way, shape, or form,” Morales said. “I believe that now we have a very strong opportunity to ensure that there is a better relationship between the City Council and the mayor’s office.”

Youngs noted that with a mayor backing the ordinance, the legislation could potentially be simplified to include more enforcement at the administrative level. Morales said he still supports a separate rent board to enforce the law, but said he would propose changes on how those members should be appointed.

And Morales said he would sit down with builders, some of whom have expressed concerns about constructing apartments in Providence because of impending rent limits.

“I want to hear directly from existing developers and those that are thinking about building in the city of Providence,” Morales said. “But we’re not going to back down around the basic idea that our neighbors should not be price gouged for what they’re paying in rent.”

Steph Machado can be reached at steph.machado@globe.com. Follow her @StephMachado.

Boston study finds timed sounds during sleep help brain health

►PINK NOISE
Continued from Page B1
because there’s lots of prior work from animal studies showing that sleep is a really important state for maintaining brain health,” Lewis said. “We thought, if we could make more of these electrical slow waves, would we actually be able to drive more of the CSF flow during sleep?”

CSF is the clear liquid surrounding the brain and spinal cord. It cushions the brain and helps transport nutrients and waste as the brain burns energy. During non-REM sleep, waves of cerebrospinal fluid wash through the brain to help clear out metabolic waste.

Lewis and her colleagues wondered if they could manipulate one to influence the other. “You can make more of these electrical slow waves through an auditory stimulus, if it comes at just the right time,” said Lewis. “Similar to a child on a swing, if you push them when they’re at the right moment in their movement, you can make that swing go farther. The challenge is: How do you find just the right time?”

That requires more than a sound machine, she said. Participants wore special headgear and EEG equipment to measure their brain activity while they slept in an MRI scanner.

An algorithm predicted the timing of their slow waves, allowing researchers to deliver 50-millisecond bursts of pink noise during wave peaks.

The researchers found that the CSF response depended on where in the slow-wave cycle the sound arrived. Simply playing sounds during non-REM sleep did not produce the same effect, Lewis said.

So, people shouldn’t expect to reproduce the experiment by pulling up a pink-noise track on their phone while scrolling in bed.

“There’s no evidence” that simply playing continuous pink

ERIC BARADAT/AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES/FILE

Researchers at MIT and Boston University found that timed bursts of “pink noise” trigger stronger waves of cerebrospinal fluid that clear waste from the brain.

noise would have the same effect, Lewis said. “We had gone to a lot of trouble to play these at the specific correct times.”

Lewis and the study’s lead author, Joshua Levitt, say they invented the “CSF-flow neurofeedback system” and are cofounders of Cerebloom Inc., with a patent pending, according to the paper’s disclosures.

Levitt recently earned his PhD from Boston University and was a visiting graduate student in Lewis’s lab. Levitt started the company to develop a headband-like device that people could use at home to increase CSF flow by delivering an auditory stimulus at the right time.

The findings are intriguing to them because disruptions in CSF circulation have been associated with aging and neurological disorders, including Alzheimer’s and Parkinson’s diseases.

And it’s part of what Lewis wants to investigate next.

“We did it all in healthy individuals,” she said. “It’s very important for us to test: Does this work in people who may be either much older or who may be showing signs of the beginnings of a neurological disorder?”

Previous research has also suggested that manipulating slow waves could affect memory and other aspects of brain function. However, researchers didn’t test memory or cognitive outcomes.

For people simply looking to sleep better tonight, Lewis said there is no reason to try to recreate the experiment at home.

“I certainly hope that in future work we can start to develop things that will actually be transferable out of the lab environment, but we don’t have that now,” she said.

She also cautioned against turning the pursuit of perfect sleep into another source of anxiety.

“Worrying about it, I think, can even make it harder,” Lewis said. Some people prefer silence while others sleep better with continuous background noise, she said, and the new research doesn’t address whether one is better than the other.

Rebecca Robbins, an assistant professor of sleep medicine at Harvard Medical School and an associate scientist at Brigham and Women’s Hospital said the new study doesn’t change the basic advice she gives people looking for a better night’s rest.

“The best environment for sleep has three considerations: quiet, dark, and cool,” said Robbins.

The bottom line for people who use sound to help them sleep, Robbins said, is to “find something consistent at home and while traveling to condition yourself that what comes next is sleep.”

Sarah Rahal can be reached at sarah.rahal@globe.com. Follow her on X @SarahRahal_ or instagram @sarah.rahal.

The Boston Globe

POWER PLAY

Shirley Leung

Jon Chesto

Your inside scoop on business and power in Boston

Sign up for Power Play, our new twice-a-week newsletter at Globe.com/powerplay.

find it
Boston
MAGAZINE

Greater Boston’s Private Schools

Explore Boston magazine’s trusted recommendations for the region’s leading professionals and services.

The Boston Globe

THE SCRUM

The morning briefing for people who run Massachusetts.

Massachusetts politics is a contact sport.

Get in the game with The Scrum — the Globe’s newsletter delivering the political coverage you won’t find anywhere else.

Sign up now at Globe.com/scrum

Meet the Boston-born winners of a prestigious literary prize

By Janira Skrbkova
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Boston-born authors Adam Ehrlich Sachs and Joyelle McSweeney will be honored at Yale University in New Haven as Donald Windham-Sandy M. Campbell Literature Prize winners on Sept. 16.

The English-language literary achievement is endowed from the shared estate of writer Donald Windham and actor Sandy M. Campbell and administered by the university's Beineke Rare Book & Manuscript Library. Established at Yale in 2011, the prize is by nomination only, globally awarded to living writers, poets, and playwrights recognized for their body of work or for outstanding promise.

McSweeney (inset), a Harvard University graduate, is cofounder and co-editor of Action Books, an international press for poetry and translation. She also serves as Chair of the English Department and the William P. and Hazel B. White Professor of English at the University of Notre Dame. "Death Styles" is the latest of her five poetry books and navigates grief and survival after the loss of an infant.

"For me, finding out that I was being recognized this way, both for what I had already made and for what I might make next, was just incredibly strengthening," McSweeney told the Globe. The author currently resides in South Bend, Ind., but traces her strong Bostonian pride back to her grandfather, David McSweeney, a union leader for whom a Sullivan Square bus maintenance facility had been named.

Also a Harvard University graduate, Sachs has written absurdist novels "The Organs of Sense" and "Inherited Disorders: Stories, Parables, and Problems." The most recent book by Sachs, who now resides in Amherst, is 2024's "Gretel and the Great War."

"In general, I write kind of obscure books with a small readership," Sachs (inset) told the Globe. "Getting this recognition is really reassuring — a nice way to sort of suggest that I'm not just whistling to myself in the wilderness."

McSweeney and Sachs are two of three US-based winners, with drama prize recipient Christina Anderson also having New England ties as a Brown University and Yale School of Drama alum.

Each year's Windham-Campbell candidates are nominated by 60 literary experts across drama, fiction, nonfiction, and poetry; finalists are chosen by a nine-person selection committee. Two prizes are awarded in each genre, the eight winners each receiving unrestricted grants of $175,000 to pursue creative work.

"This is going to give me both the time and also the resources to take some risks that are beyond the page," McSweeney said.

Her next work is a set of plays that borrow from the tropes and structures of Greek tragedies — but with utterly contemporary protagonists. One such play, "Killanova," features a fictionalized Kim Kardashian as the leading lady.

McSweeney teased the project with an excerpt in the Windham-Campbell Prize edition of the Yale Review.

"Whether [Kardashian] has a fatal flaw or not, it's up to the audience to decide," she joked. "The other [plays] I'm just going to be working on for a while and seeing where they take me."

For Sachs, the grant helps to quell some of the anxieties that come with choosing a literary career path.

"I'm always on the verge of having to find a more productive, reasonable way to spend my time," Sachs said. "The prize offers a respite from that internal debate."

The September prize ceremony, which is one part of a three-day celebration, will feature 2020 Windham-Campbell fiction prize recipient Yiyun Li as the keynote speaker. Li, who is the author of Pulitzer-winning memoir "Things in Nature Merely Grow," will deliver a lecture structured around the theme "Why I Write."

"The Windham-Campbell Prize is a spectacular award, but it's also a spectacular institution," McSweeney said. "I feel really honored to be welcomed into this circle of artists."

Janira Skrbkova can be reached at janira.skrbkova@globe.com.

ALESSANDRA TARANTINO/AP

"Primetime" star Robert Pattinson arrived at the 83rd edition of the Venice Film Festival in Venice, Italy, on Sept. 5.

At the Venice Film Festival, TV continues to exert its influence

By Chris Vognar
GLOBE STAFF

VENICE, Italy — The membrane between movies and television gets thinner by the day, even at major film festivals. At the Venice Film Festival (which ran from Sept. 2 to Sept. 12), the oldest festival in the world and the unofficial launching pad for movie awards season, the presence of the small screen has been an undeniable fact for a few years now. That means series premieres, and also other projects that tap into TV as a subject.

I come to Venice every year to serve on a panel with fellow critics discussing the films of the Biennale College, a selection of microbudget films from around the world that the festival develops and helps finance. But while I'm here I can't help but drift toward television. Even with the one series in this year's lineup, the Italian meta-showbiz comedy "Peccato," premiering after my departure, I still had ample opportunity to consider TV's considerable reach.

The world premiere of "Primetime" was Exhibit A. Robert Pattinson stars as Chris Hansen, who rose to fame as the host of the popular reality series "To Catch a Predator," which aired from 2004 to 2007 on NBC and routinely ventured right up to the edge of entrapment. Luring potential online sexual predators with young actors playing bait, Hansen would then enter with a camera crew and tell said predators they were on TV and the cops were waiting outside. The film, directed by Lance Oppenheim ("Ren Faire"), tracks Hansen's rise as a network darling and his fall after a "Predator" tragedy that won't be revealed here since, like me, you may not remember the details.

Oppenheim, who also co-directed the Elizabeth Holmes documentary "You Can See Everything" with Nathan Fielder (it premiered with a bang at the Telluride Film Festival last Sunday), brings a deadpan thriller approach to "Primetime." Without preaching, the film examines the blurred lines between performance and reporting, justice and spectacle, that defined "Predator" and shows of its ilk. Pattinson plays Hansen as an icy, deeply flawed, ambition-fueled missile, a pure product of television. It opens in theaters Sept. 25.

A far more heroic form of TV news can be found in the gripping documentary "My Undesirable Friends: Part II — Exile." Like Part I, 2024's "Last Air in Moscow," "Exile" follows the mostly female TV journalists of TV Rain, an independent Russian television channel that embraces the journalistic mission of speaking truth to power. This, of course, is a dangerous practice in Vladimir Putin's Russia, where the only free-flowing information is state-friendly propaganda. In "Last Air in Moscow," currently streaming on Mubi, we see the TV Rain journalists bring journalistic rigor to stories including the Russo-Ukrainian War. They know they could be arrested at any time for bucking the official government line. As the title of "Exile" suggests, that threat is now so immediate that the Rain crew has fled to safer harbors, including Tbilisi and Istanbul, in order to keep committing journalism.

"Exile" checks in at about six hours, which means it has more in common with a bingeable TV series than a standard documentary, and Mubi will eventually offer it for streaming. But both parts of "My Undesirable Friends" speed along at an agile and engaging clip. You feel the urgency and immediacy that director Julia Loktev invests in every frame; she was born in the Soviet Union and immigrated to the US as a child, and there's never any question that her subjects trust her intuitively. If you think life is hard right now for journalists in the US, "Exile" demonstrates just how easy it is to take a free press for granted. The TV Rain reporters are for all intents and purposes stateless. But they keep on doing the work.

In recent years some great series have premiered at Venice, including both "Disclaimer" and "Mussolini: Son of the Century" in 2024, and it's telling that such an august cinema event has so fully embraced television. TV can't be ignored, as a medium or as a subject. It's in the air we breathe, even off the Adriatic Sea.

Chris Vognar can be reached at chris.vognar@globe.com. Follow him on Instagram at @chrisvognar and on Bluesky at chrisvognar.bsky.social.

How to watch, who's presenting, and everything you need to know about the 2026 Emmys

By Matt Juul
GLOBE STAFF

The 2026 Emmys are almost here with another star-studded ceremony planned to honor the top performers and TV shows that have dominated our screens. From how to watch to who's presenting and performing, here's everything you need to know ahead of this year's awards.

How to watch this year's awards

This year's ceremony will broadcast live Monday on NBC and stream live on Peacock beginning at 8 p.m.

Who's hosting?

NBC is tapping one of its biggest stars to host this year's Emmys, with "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit" actress Mariska Hargitay helming Monday's festivities. While it's her first time hosting, Hargitay is pretty familiar with the award show's stage, having won three Emmys in her career, including the award for outstanding lead actress in a drama series for her work on "SVU."

Who's presenting and performing?

A number of big names will join Hargitay on Monday night, with the presenters list set to feature Zendaya, Jon Hamm, Sally Field, Macaulay Culkin, Florence Pugh, Linda Cardellini, and Bay State native and "Saturday Night Live" alum Amy Poehler. Other presenters include Alan Cumming, Amanda Peet, Odessa A'zion, Keke Palmer, Julianna Margulies, Marcello Hernández, Rachel Sennott, Dan Levy,

CAROLINE BREHMAN/INVISION/AP

Host Mariska Hargitay was at an Emmys preview event Thursday in LA.

Peter Krause, David Harbour, Annie Murphy, and Niecy Nash-Betts.

New England's own Noah Kahan will be at the Emmys too, with the Grammy-nominated singer set to perform "Bridge Over Troubled Water" during the in memoriam segment.

2026 Emmy nominations

In the major comedy categories, it's set to be a showdown between Emmys veteran "Hacks" and the New England-set newcomer "Widow's Bay." Filmed across Massachusetts, the Apple TV horror-comedy earned 19 nominations for its freshman season, and already won eight awards during the early Emmy ceremonies, with Betty Gilpin picking up the win for outstanding guest actress in a comedy series.

Meanwhile, HBO Max's "Hacks" set a new record for most nominations earned by a comedy in a single year, picking up 24 nods, having already won one earlier in the month for outstanding picture editing for a single-camera comedy series. "Hacks" and "Widow's Bay" will face off in the outstanding comedy series category on Monday night.

HBO Max's medical drama "The Pitt" leads the field overall with 25 nominations this year, winning four awards already during the earlier ceremonies. The hit series looks to defend its outstanding drama series title against first-time nominees like Apple TV's "Pluribus" (which earned 18 nominations, and also won four awards earlier in the month) as well as perennial contenders like "Slow Horses" (the Apple TV spy show picked up nine nominations this year).

Check out the full list of 2026 Emmy nominees at www.boston-globe.com/2026/07/08/arts/emmy-nominations-2026/.

Matt Juul can be reached at matthew.juul@globe.com.

TV HIGHLIGHTS

Soccer: Premier League, Newcastle-Leeds, 3 p.m., USA
Baseball: Braves-Cubs, 7:40 p.m., MLB
NFL: Broncos-Chiefs, 8:15 p.m., ABC, ESPN
Listings, C7

Sports

C

THE BOSTON GLOBE MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 2026 | BOSTONGLOBE.COM/SPORTS

NFL WEEK 1

Jets	23	Lions	31
Titans	10	Saints	OT 30
Bengals	33	Bills	36
Buccaneers	27	Texans	31
Steelers	20	Cardinals	26
Falcons	13	Chargers	14
Bears	59	Eagles	24
Panthers	37	Commanders	22
Ravens	41	Jaguars	34
Colts	23	Browns	10
Vikings	39	Raiders	27
Packers	22	Dolphins	13
Giants	28
Cowboys	20

Bills pull out win

Terrel Bernard (right) and Bills break Houston drought. C4

Chicago hope

Bears outlast Panthers in points record for season opener. C5

ERIC CHRISTIAN SMITH/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boutte trade, Brown injury opens the door

Williams may be needed to fill void

By Nicole Yang
GLOBE STAFF

Five notes on the Patriots after Week 1 . . .

1. If the trade of Kayshon Boutte heightened the attention surrounding wide receiver Kyle Williams, then the injury to A.J. Brown takes it to another level.

Williams played just 12 snaps in the season opener (two in the first half) and registered zero targets. After Brown exited Wednesday's game, quarterback Drake Maye started to rely more on the big-bodied Mack Hollins. It would not be surprising to see Hollins continue to garner targets, but Williams should see an uptick as well.

As a rookie last year, Williams lined up out wide 82.4 percent of the time and finished with 10 catches on 21 targets for 209 yards and three touchdowns. Williams, who has flashed the speed to serve as a potential home-run threat, has acknowledged the need to round out his game in the intermediate area as well.

PATRIOTS, Page C4

DANIELLE PARHIZKARAN/GLOBE STAFF

Payton Tolle began his six scoreless innings Sunday in immaculate fashion, striking out the side on nine pitches in the first.

Historic outing for Tolle

Rare immaculate inning helps Red Sox clinch winning season

By Tim Healey
GLOBE STAFF

Red Sox 4 As Fenway Park came alive with anticipation, so did Payton Tolle's smile.

Royals 1 Two strikeouts into the first inning of the Red Sox' 4-1 win Sunday, Tolle got ahead of the third Royals batter, 0 and 2, pushing him to the brink of a rare feat. The crowd got loud, and his exhale grew into a grin just before he unfurled one more fireball, at 98 miles per hour. Jac Caglianone swung and missed.

Tolle hopped off the mound with a fist pump and to a standing ovation after the eighth immaculate inning in recorded franchise history: nine pitches, nine strikes, three strikeouts.

It is an achievement rarer in Red Sox lore than cycles (23), no-hitters (18), and World Series championships (nine).

RED SOX, Page C2

PETER ABRAHAM
ON BASEBALL

Houck could be postseason option

Back in the olden days of 2022, there was a healthy debate about how the Red Sox should use Tanner Houck.

The righthander was drafted and developed as a starting pitcher, but was more effective as a reliever that season, picking up eight saves as part of a closer-by-committee approach.

Houck had both the high-end stuff and unflappable confidence to succeed in high-leverage situations late in games, plus the durability to pitch multiple innings coming out of the bullpen, something he did 10 times that season. It was intriguing.

The Sox instead signed Kenley Jansen to close and made Houck a starter. It was the right call. He was 15-20

ON BASEBALL, Page C2

Bruins rookies trying to earn a spot at camp

By Kevin Paul Dupont
GLOBE STAFF

BUFFALO — The shrink-wrapped Bruins preseason kicked off Sunday at LECOM Harborcenter with their fresh-faced rookies, all hoping to advance to this week's varsity camp, rolling up an impressive 6-2 win on their Sabres counterparts.

Ex-BC Eagle James Hagens, the Black-and-Gold's top prospect, scored a pair of goals and ex-Merrimack goalie Max Lundgren, who signed as a free agent over the summer, turned back 29 shots.

The pace was impressive and the goals aplenty — other scorers were Attilio Biasca, Dans Locmelis, Tom Zocco, and Nolan Renwick — making for what turned into an easy first for new AHL Providence coach Trent Whitfield.

The Swiss-born Biasca, another offseason free agent signee, kicked off the scoring only 25 seconds after puck drop. Driving to the net off a dump-in, he slid a doorstep backhand into a wide-open net, the beneficiary of a quirky hop off the rear wall, reminiscent of the crazy bounces at the old Auditorium.

"I didn't expect that all," a smiling Biasca said following his first game in North America

BRUINS, Page C4

ANGELA WEISS/AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

Alexander Zverev claimed his second Grand Slam title by defeating Ben Shelton in the US Open final in four sets.

US OPEN

Zverev tops Shelton to win second major

US men without title for 23 years

By Brian Mahoney
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Alexander Zverev's best year in tennis goes on, and so does that lengthy Grand Slam drought for American men.

Zverev won his second major championship and disappointed a crowd that was desperate to see the first Grand Slam title by an American man since 2003, beating Ben Shelton, 6-3, 7-6 (7-2), 5-7, 6-2, on Sunday in the US Open final.

Zverev finally broke through in the majors by winning this year's French Open and followed up by adding the title in New York that he so painfully let slip away in 2020.

The No. 1 seed in a Grand Slam for the first time, he capitalized on Shelton's shaky start in his first major final, played a nearly flawless tiebreaker on serve, and then turned back Shelton's comeback attempt in front of a crowd that desperately

US OPEN, Page C4

INSIDE

Still the queens

American women roll to fifth straight world hoops crown. C6

Singular spark

Europe reclaims Solheim Cup with sparkling Sunday. C6

Fiery resilience

Turgeman, defensive will earn Revolution win in Chicago. C6

Legacy surprise

Boston bottles up Rodman, Spirit to win in Washington. C6

Youth served

Lynn English football, light on seniors, makes a statement. C7

Baseball

Contreras returns; Seigler put on IL

By Tim Healey
GLOBE STAFF

Willson Contreras is back with the Red Sox, activated Sunday from the injured list for their finale against the Royals. He collected two hits and a walk in the 4-1 win.

The Red Sox didn't need to think hard about how to open a spot on the active roster: Infielder Anthony Seigler went on the injured list with a right wrist issue.

"We talked a lot about as guys were getting healthy, the conversation was like, 'What are you going to do?'" interim manager Chad Tracy said.

"Stuff's going to happen, which it all ways does."

Contreras missed a dozen games because of a left hamstring strain.

After playing through the leg problem for about a month, Contreras asked the front office to let him more thoroughly rest, figuring a September time-out would serve him well down the stretch and into the playoffs.

On his first day back, he tested it plenty — hustling to first base and advancing to second on an error, moving from first to third on a single.

"I ran a lot today on the field, and my hammy feels pretty good," Contreras said. "I won't lie: If I wasn't feeling really good in [Double-A] Portland, I wasn't going to play tonight."

Tracy said: "The point of [going on the IL] was to get [the hamstring] to a point where he felt confident in it, where he can go out and play and not have to worry. And at least like to think we've got to that point, which is good."

DANIELLE PARHIZKARAN/GLOBE STAFF

Willson Contreras (right) went 2 for 3 with a run in his return from the IL on Sunday after missing 12 games because of a left hamstring strain.

In a two-game tuneup with Portland, Contreras went 2 for 7 with three strikeouts and no walks.

His appearance Saturday yielded a strange episode in the fourth inning.

After a ball moved the count to 1 and 1, he called timeout, seemingly to get pine tar. Plate umpire Daniel Byteway called him back to the plate.

Contreras then all but stopped participating in the plate appearance, leaving the bat on his shoulders for the next four pitches. He struck out looking.

On his way back to the dugout, drawing boos from the Portland crowd, Contreras tossed his bat back toward the plate.

"I didn't even know until somebody showed it to me this [Sunday] morning," Tracy said before the game. "I haven't even seen him and asked him that yet. I think that's something to do with pine tar."

Contreras said later Sunday: "I don't know. You can go ask the umpire. His name is Gary. Thank you."

The Red Sox didn't have a diagnosis on Seigler, who hurt himself on a seemingly random swing Saturday, but intended to send him for tests in the coming days.

As the rotation turns

The Red Sox will keep their starting pitchers in line against the Rangers: Patrick Sandoval on Tuesday, Jake Bennett on Wednesday, Sonny Gray on Thursday. Brayan Bello is bumped back to the bullpen following a one-start cameo.

Rehab roundup

The Red Sox will bring Tyron Guerrero (right shoulder inflammation) to Texas and activate him during the Rangers series. They haven't decided which day. He is eligible to return Wednesday.

Ceddanne Rafaela (right quad strain) told NESN he is planning to return for the Rays series next weekend.

"We'll call that a goal. It's not a guarantee," Tracy said. "It really is dependent on strength numbers in the quad and making sure that's appropriate, and then he gets through all the sprint volume stuff first, and then we'll see where he's at."

The Sox will leave it up to Rafaela, Tracy added, whether he wants to go on a rehab assignment before returning. Triple-A Worcester is the last affiliate still in season.

Justin Slaten (right elbow inflammation) still has not resumed throwing.

Guest of honor

Beverly native Beckett Connolly, a 10-year-old liver cancer survivor and transplant recipient, threw out a ceremonial first pitch — to hefty applause from the Fenway Park crowd.

Red Sox 4, Royals 1

At Fenway Park
KANSAS CITY	AB	R	H	BI	BB	SO	Avg.
Loflin 3b	3	0	0	0	0	1	.231
a-Jensen ph-c	2	0	1	1	0	1	.232
Witt Jr. ss	4	0	1	0	1	3	.280
Caglianone dh	2	0	0	0	0	2	.281
b-Pasquantino ph-dh	1	0	0	0	0	0	.239
Perez 1b	4	0	0	0	0	1	.229
Massey 2b	4	0	1	0	0	2	.280
Malugo rf	3	0	0	0	0	1	.143
c-Rojas ph-3b	1	0	0	0	0	0	.237
Collins lf	2	0	0	0	2	0	.221
Maile c	2	0	0	0	0	1	.162
d-Rave pr-cf-rf	0	1	0	0	1	0	.222
Tolbert cf-3b-cf	4	0	1	0	0	1	.298
Totals	32	1	5	1	5	12

BOSTON	AB	R	H	BI	BB	SO	Avg.
Anthony lf	4	0	1	1	0	0	.241
Jones dh	4	0	0	0	0	3	.210
Abreu rf	4	0	1	0	0	2	.257
Contreras 1b	3	1	2	0	1	0	.277
Rutschman c	4	1	1	0	0	0	.239
Story ss	4	0	2	2	0	1	.239
Durbin 3b	1	2	1	1	1	0	.250
Sogard 2b	3	0	0	0	1	1	.263
Eaton cf	2	0	0	0	0	1	.132
e-Gasper ph	0	0	0	0	0	0	.265
f-Monasterio ph	1	0	0	0	0	1	.240
Duran cf	1	0	0	0	0	0	.205
Totals	31	4	8	4	3	8

Kansas City.....000 000 100 — 1 5 2
Boston.....010 000 12x — 4 8 0
a-singled for Loflin in 7th, b-filed out for Caglianone in 7th, c-grounded out for Lugo in 8th, d-ran for Maile in 7th, e-was announced for Eaton in 7th, f-struck out for Gasper in 7th, E—Loflin (9), Maile (1). LOB—Kansas City 10, Boston 8. 2B—Rutschman (22). HR—Durbin (13), off Cameron. SB—Durbin (18). RISP—Kansas City 1 for 11, Boston 3 for 10. GIDP—Rutschman, Sogard. DP—Kansas City 2 (Massey, Perez), (Witt Jr., Massey, Perez).

Kansas City	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO	NP	ERA
Cameron	6	4	1	1	1	4	85	3.84
Kimbrel L 1-3	½	0	1	1	2	0	16	3.90
Thomas	½	1	0	0	0	2	11	2.45
Pearson	1	3	2	2	0	2	22	2.36
Boston	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO	NP	ERA
Tolle	6	4	0	0	1	7	96	3.02
Miller	½	0	1	1	2	0	16	1.23
Whitlock BS4; W7-1	½	1	0	0	0	1	9	1.81
Weissert	1	0	0	0	0	1	11	3.54
Chapman S 34	1	0	0	0	2	3	25	1.95

Inherited runners-scored—Thomas 2-1, Whitlock 2-1. HBP—by Cameron (Durbin), by Pearson (Durbin), by Tolle (Caglianone). Umpires—Home, Roberto Ortiz; First, Alex MacKay; Second, Alan Porter; Third, Jim Wolf. T—2:41. A—34,966 (37,755).

HOW THE RUNS SCORED SECOND INNING
RED SOX — Story struck out. Durbin homered to left. Sogard grounded to third. Eaton struck out.
SEVENTH INNING
ROYALS — Collins walked. Maile walked. Collins to second. Rave pinch-running for Maile. Tolbert reached on fielder's choice, center fielder to third, Collins out, Rave to second. Whitlock pitching. Jensen, hitting for Loflin, singled to right, Rave scored. Tolbert to third. Witt struck out. Pasquantino, hitting for Caglianone, flied to center.
RED SOX — Story flied to center. Durbin walked. Durbin stole second. Sogard walked. Gasper hitting for Eaton. Thomas pitching. Monasterio, hitting for Gasper, struck out. Anthony singled to center, Durbin scored, Sogard to third. Jones struck out.
EIGHTH INNING
RED SOX — Abreu struck out. Contreras singled to right. Rutschman doubled to left, Contreras to third. Story singled to left, Contreras and Rutschman scored. Durbin was hit by a pitch, Story to second. Sogard struck out. Duran flied to left.

Houck could play role in postseason

►ON BASEBALL
Continued from Page C1

with a 3.83 ERA the next two seasons and made the All-Star team in 2024.

But you can't walk away from the price you pay. Houck pitched through elbow pain last season before undergoing what was described as a "hybrid reconstruction" of his ulnar collateral ligament with a flexor tendon repair in August.

Houck beat the projected return date and is now two games into a minor league rehabilitation assignment. He is scheduled to pitch one inning for Triple-A Worcester at Polar Park on Tuesday, then return to the WooSox on Saturday for 50 pitches.

"I had my mind set on one goal, going out there and just helping this team this year," Houck said on Sunday before the Sox beat the Royals, 4-1, at Fenway Park. "I just truly believed that I could do it."

AL wild card

	W	L	Pct.	GB
New York.....	86	63	.577	—
Boston.....	82	68	.547	—
Cleveland.....	76	74	.507	—
Toronto.....	75	75	.500	1
Texas.....	74	76	.493	2
Baltimore.....	72	78	.480	4
Minnesota.....	70	79	.470	5½
Detroit.....	70	79	.470	5½
Seattle.....	70	80	.467	6
Kansas City.....	66	84	.440	10

locked into the second wild card and a best-of-three series against the Yankees starting Sept. 29 in New York.

Houck has a 2.38 ERA in 14 career games against the Yankees and has pitched well in seven games at Yankee Stadium.

He would be a good option out of the bullpen, especially if one of the starters isn't sharp early in the game. Managers tend to be more aggressive with relievers in the postseason, especially in such a short series.

"Three innings out of the pen is a little bit more appealing than just being a one-inning limited-pitch-count guy," Houck said. "So if I can get built up for 40-50 pitches and help out in any way, then it's a lot easier role."

In '22 alone, Houck pitched as a starter, a long reliever, a setup man, and a closer.

"Any role that I can step in and go out there and help this team win, I'm in," he said.

Houck and Garrett Whitlock are the only players in the organization who have experienced being on the home side of a postseason game at Fenway Park, those games coming during the run to the American League Championship Series in 2021. He's eager to feel those emotions again.

"I still tell everyone that I remember '21 like it happened yesterday," Houck said. "I remember that very vividly, the Fenway crowd losing their mind. Being around playoff baseball and in Boston is special."

Once the Red Sox broke camp in March, Houck reported to the ballpark early in the morning for his rehab work and had only other injured players as company. He lived in a rented house with his wife, Abby, and made the best of the situation.

"I'll admit it sucked," he said. "I'm so programmed to being around the team, being around the guys. I just took it as an opportunity to step back and just focus on what was most important, which was the rehab and recovery aspect. I knew that was going to lead me to getting back and helping the team."

He followed the roller coaster season in Boston from afar, getting updates from teammates.

"I could only imagine the buzz that was happening in this locker room," Houck said. "That's what I wanted to be around."

That step has been taken. Now comes getting back on the roster, then into a game. In a season full of unexpected surprises, Houck helping win a postseason game could be the next one.

Houck was told it would take 12-14 months to get back on the mound, but he persevered through the rehabilitation work at the team complex in Fort Myers, Fla.

And now it's intriguing again.

There are still 12 games remaining in the regular season, but the Sox are essentially

DANIELLE PARHIZKARAN/GLOBE STAFF

Red Sox catcher Adley Rutschman and pitcher Payton Tolle celebrate after Tolle's immaculate inning in the first against the Royals.

Historic inning for Tolle keys 82nd win

►RED SOX
Continued from Page C1

"Soak those in whenever you can," Tolle said, "because it was a cool moment."

Interim manager Chad Tracy said: "He was just fired up. Everybody was fired up."

And Roman Anthony: "It's an electric fastball. He's an electric pitcher. He's an electric human being."

The Red Sox went on to win via a late burst against the Royals' bullpen. Anthony came through with a go-ahead, two-out single in the seventh, and Trevor Story added a two-run single in the eighth. Aroldis Chapman evaded trouble in the ninth, striking out three straight batters after walking his first two.

With the victory, the Red Sox (82-68) clinched a winning record for the year. They have 12 games remaining in the regular season.

Tolle's was the first immaculate inning for the Red Sox since Chris Sale's on Aug. 26, 2021, in the third inning against the Twins, also at Fenway.

The only other Sox hurler to do so in the first frame was Pedro Martinez on May 18, 2002, versus the Mariners, also at Fenway.

Tolle started with Nick Loftin, who received a trio of four-seam fastballs: 95.9 (swing and miss), 96.6 (swing and miss), 97.2 (called strike).

That was when immaculate thoughts started to cross his mind. "After we had three straight strikes, [it] pops into the brain," Tolle said. "It's probably bad. I probably need to be better about not thinking about that kind of stuff, but it definitely was there."

Then came Bobby Witt Jr., who got three more four-seamers, all drawing whiffs: 97.8, 97.1, 97.

Tolle started Caglianone with a sinker for a foul ball. Strike one.

"After the first two hitters and you get strike one on the next guy, you feel like it's doable," Tracy said.

Caglianone missed a 97.6-m.p.h. fastball for strike two.

That brought much of a knowing Fenway crowd of an announced 34,966 — which looked smaller when the game started 3 hours, 20 minutes after the original scheduled time because of rain — to its feet.

"He was just pumping the heater," said Adley Rutschman, Tolle's catcher and fantasy football co-manager. "It kept getting the swings that we wanted, and we kept rolling with it."

As they decided on another four-seamer for the ninth pitch, Tolle happened to glance at the Red Sox' dugout. He caught the eye of pitching coach Andrew Bailey.

"I had it in the mind," Tolle said. "Just looked over at Bails and he was smiling too."

When Caglianone missed again for strike three, Tolle and Rutschman met on the way to the dugout and laughed.

"I love when he's in that mental space of getting after hitters and enjoying being out on the mound," Rutschman said. "When you have a moment like that, he's coming off with high emotion and energy, it's pretty cool. It's something to celebrate."

When Tolle returned for the second, he got a called strike with his first pitch against Salvador Perez — making him 10 for 10.

When the 11th pitch was deemed a ball, fans booed.

"I thought it was funny," Tolle said. "I didn't try to throw a ball, but it was fun. I was like, are they booing at me? Or they're booing at the guy for not calling a strike? I don't know, but it was funny."

Altogether, Tolle tossed six scoreless innings, scattering four hits and a walk. He struck out seven, including his final two batters, helping him escape his biggest jam of the day.

The Royals put two runners on base with no outs in the sixth. Tolle answered by retiring the next three Royals. The last: Matthew Lugo — former Red Sox farmhand — struck out flailing at a curveball in the dirt.

Tolle bounced off the mound again, this time with a roar. Vigorous handshakes and high-fives in the dugout indicated his outing was over.

"Definitely just grind[ing through], it, definitely started losing some velo, kind of a long day," Tolle said.

Tracy said: "It's a big moment in the first. It's a lot of energy that you want him to [continue with]. OK, it was awesome, but settle in. We need you to throw five more innings. He was fantastic."

Against lefthander Noah Cameron, the Red Sox managed one run in six innings, on Caleb Durbin's homer in the second. It was his first long ball and second extra-base hit in the past month.

Erik Miller (two walks) and Garrett Whitlock (Carter Jensen pinch-hit single) combined to give up a run in the seventh, setting up the late drama.

By the end of the game, the last baseball from Tolle's immaculate inning had made its way to his locker — via first baseman Willson Contreras and clubhouse manager Tom McLaughlin.

It sat in a case, under a ball signed by Wade Boggs, part of Tolle's growing collection. A trophy from another standout moment in a standout rookie season.

"Trying to be an energy-giver," Tolle said. "Trying to be the spark whatever way I can."

Tim Healey can be reached at timothy.healey@globe.com.

AL

EAST	W	L	Pct.	GB	WCGB	Last 10	Streak
p-Tampa Bay	90	59	.604	—	—	7-3	W 3
New York	86	63	.577	4	—	7-3	W 1
Boston	82	68	.547	8½	—	7-3	W 2
Toronto	75	75	.500	15½	1	6-4	W 2
Baltimore	72	78	.480	18½	4	3-7	L 2
CENTRAL	W	L	Pct.	GB	WCGB	Last 10	Streak
Chicago	76	73	.510	—	—	3-7	L 1
Cleveland	76	74	.507	½	—	6-4	W 1
Minnesota	70	79	.470	6	5½	3-7	L 1
Detroit	70	79	.470	6	5½	6-4	W 4
Kansas City	66	84	.440	10½	10	4-6	L 2
WEST	W	L	Pct.	GB	WCGB	Last 10	Streak
Houston	75	75	.500	—	—	4-6	L 3
Texas	74	76	.493	1	2	5-5	W 2
Seattle	70	80	.467	5	6	4-6	L 1
Athletics	61	89	.407	14	15	7-3	W 1
Los Angeles	56	93	.376	18½	19½	3-7	L 3

NL

EAST	W	L	Pct.	GB	WCGB	Last 10	Streak
Atlanta	88	62	.587	—	—	5-5	L 1
Philadelphia	83	67	.553	5	—	4-6	W 1
Miami	74	76	.493	14	7½	3-7	W 2
Washington	70	81	.464	18½	12	3-7	W 3
New York	69	80	.463	18½	12	7-3	L 1
CENTRAL	W	L	Pct.	GB	WCGB	Last 10	Streak
p-Milwaukee	93	57	.620	—	—	6-4	L 1
Chicago	83	67	.553	10	—	5-5	L 1
Pittsburgh	75	75	.500	18	6½	7-3	W 1
St. Louis	74	76	.493	19	7½	4-6	W 1
Cincinnati	70	79	.470	22½	11	4-6	W 1
WEST	W	L	Pct.	GB	WCGB	Last 10	Streak
Los Angeles	90	59	.604	—	—	8-2	L 2
San Diego	81	68	.544	9	—	8-2	W 7
Arizona	79	71	.527	11½	2½	6-4	L 2
San Francisco	62	88	.413	28½	19½	4-6	L 3
Colorado	55	94	.369	35	26	2-8	L 7 p — Clinched playoff berth

RESULTS

SUNDAY
At Boston 4	Kansas City 1	Cincinnati 4	at Milwaukee 3
At Detroit 8	Colorado 2	Cleveland 9	at Minnesota 2
At Washington 6	LA Angels 5	At St. Louis 3	Chi. White Sox 1
At NY Yankees 2	NY Mets 0	Pittsburgh 4	at Chi. Cubs 3
Philadelphia 9	at Atlanta 4	At Athletics 8	Seattle 7
At Toronto 8	Baltimore 1	Texas 7	at Arizona 6
At Tampa Bay 14	Houston 4	San Diego 6	at San Francisco 4
At Miami 6	LA Dodgers 4

SATURDAY
At Boston 5	Kansas City 1	At Miami 4	LA Dodgers 3
At Detroit 11	Colorado 7	At Tampa Bay 3	Houston 2
NY Mets 12	at NY Yankees 2	At Milwaukee 13	Cincinnati 9
At Chi. Cubs 4	Pittsburgh 3	Chi. White Sox 6	at St. Louis 5
At Toronto 7	Baltimore 3	At Atlanta 12	Philadelphia 2
At Washington 6 (10 inn.)	LA Angels 5	Texas 6	at Arizona 2
San Diego 7	at San Francisco 6	Seattle 19	at Athletics 1
At Minnesota 4	Cleveland 3

MONDAY'S GAMES
	Odds	W-L	ERA	Team rec.	2026.....	2026 vs. opp.	IP	ERA	Last 3 starts.....
CHI. WHITE SOX AT CLEVELAND, 6:40 p.m.
Newcomb (L)	+125	2-4	2.77	4-1	0-1	7.1	1.23	0-0	5.1 1.69
Williams (R)	+145	13-7	3.78	18-11	0-0	15.1	4.11	1-0	14.1 4.40
LA DODGERS AT CINCINNATI, 6:40 p.m.
Skubal (L)	-200	9-7	2.84	14-9	1-0	7.1	2.45	1-0	19.0 2.37
Lodolo (L)	+170	3-4	5.12	6-12	0-1	4.2	5.79	0-1	14.2 5.52
DETROIT AT TORONTO, 7:07 p.m.
Melton (R)	+110	8-4	2.42	12-6	0-0	0.0	0.00	1-2	18.0 6.00
Soriano (R)	-130	12-7	3.48	18-11	0-1	5.0	5.40	2-0	18.2 3.86
BALTIMORE AT NY METS, 7:10 p.m.
Young (R)	+105	9-4	3.71	18-7	0-0	0.0	0.00	0-1	17.1 5.19
Tong (R)	-125	2-1	4.80	1-0	0-0	0.0	0.00	1-0	5.0 7.20
ATLANTA AT CHI. CUBS, 7:40 p.m.
López (R)	+115	4-4	4.13	7-5	0-0	1.2	5.40	0-2	14.2 6.75
Peterson (L)	-135	7-8	5.28	8-12	0-0	0.0	0.00	0-1	13.0 6.23
NY YANKEES AT MINNESOTA, 7:40 p.m.
Warren (R)	-135	10-6	4.05	18-9	0-0	0.0	0.00	2-0	18.0 2.00
Kremer (R)	+115	3-5	5.65	5-9	0-0	0.0	0.00	1-1	13.0 7.62
SAN FRANCISCO AT ST. LOUIS, 7:45 p.m.
Roupp (R)	Off	9-13	4.00	10-18	1-0	6.0	0.00	2-0	16.0 1.13
Mathews (L)	Off	1-3	4.11	2-4	0-1	6.0	3.00	1-1	16.2 2.16
SAN DIEGO AT COLORADO, 8:40 p.m.
Mize (R)	-180	5-9	3.70	9-14	0-0	0.0	0.00	0-2	14.2 5.52
Sugano (R)	+150	12-9	5.30	15-11	1-0	11.2	2.31	0-2	16.0 7.88
SEATTLE AT LA ANGELS, 9:38 p.m.
Anderson (L)	-120	1-1	4.29	2-2	0-0	0.0	0.00	1-1	15.1 4.11
Detmers (L)	+100	5-8	3.32	10-19	0-0	6.2	0.00	1-0	19.0 0.95
MIAMI AT ARIZONA, 9:40 p.m.
Alcantara (R)	+115	13-10	3.78	16-15	0-0	0.0	0.00	0-2	16.1 8.27
Burnes (R)	-135	0-0	6.00	0-0	0-0	0.0	0.00	0-0	3.0 0.00
Team rec. —	Record in games started by this season.

TIGERS 8, ROCKIES 1
Colorado	AB	R	H	BI	BB	SO	Avg.
McCarthy cf	2	0	0	0	0	1	.295
Beck lf	1	0	0	0	0	1	.197
Amador 2b	4	1	1	1	0	1	.326
Carriag ss	4	0	0	0	0	3	.258
Rumfield dh	3	0	1	0	1	0	.298
Moniak dh	4	0	1	0	0	3	.244
Aranda 1b	1	0	0	0	0	2	.272
Malgeni cf	3	0	2	0	0	0	.500
BrSullivan c	3	0	0	0	0	0	.231
Veon lf-cf	3	0	0	0	0	1	.250
Totals	31	1	5	1	1	11
DETROIT	AB	R	H	BI	BB	SO	Avg.
McGonigle dh	3	1	1	2	1	0	.272
Callahan ph-dh	1	0	0	0	1	1	.229
Lee 2b	3	0	1	0	1	1	.259
Keith 3b	4	1	1	0	1	0	.257
Greene lf	4	1	2	3	0	1	.283
Malgeni lf	0	0	0	0	0	0	.232
Rafaela, Bos.	1	0	1	1	0	1	.282
Hagill	1	0	0	0	1	1	.580
DETROIT	IP	H	R	ER	BB	SO	ERA
Jobe W 2-2	6½	3	1	1	1	8	3.89
Hurter	1	1	0	0	0	1	2.86
Diaz	1½	1	0	0	0	2	6.75
Inherited runners-scored	—	Hurter 1-0, Hughes 1-0, McCarthy (4), NP—Hughes 7-0, Agnos 36, Frasso 17, Herget 30, Hill 24, Jobe 87, Hurter 13, Diaz 21. Umpires—Home, James Jean; First, Manny Gonzalez; Second, Ron Kulp; Third, Ryan Blakney; T—24. A—22,726 (40,988).

AL LEADERS
Through Saturday's games
BATTING	AB	R	H	BI	R	H	Av.
Alvarez, Hou	522	95	162	310
Simpson, TB	527	61	161	306
Diaz, TB	569	84	171	301
DeLaunar, Cle	457	57	133	291
McGee, Det.	535	67	151	282
Tagliarone, KC	475	66	134	282
Greene, Det.	463	72	130	281
Witt Jr., KC	507	84	142	280
Camirero, TB	566	90	158	279
Aranda, TB	542	69	150	277
Contreras, Bos.	434	66	119	274
Kwan, Cle	496	73	136	274
Arozarena, Sea	524	97	143	273
Klement, Tor	546	59	149	273
Johnson Jr	552	74	148	272
Cleashall, Min	479	72	130	271
Bellinger, NYY	451	68	122	271
Naylor, Sea	545	56	147	270
Antonacis, CWS	439	74	118	269
McNeil, ATH	433	47	116	268

NL LEADERS
Through Saturday's games
BATTING	AB	R	H	BI	R	H	Av.
Arraez, Phi	560	66	177	316
Lopez, Mia	578	88	179	310
Gonzales, Pitt	515	67	157	305
Moreno, Ari	427	62	129	302
McMurry, Col	504	62	150	298
De La Cruz	493	72	146	296
Burton, Tex	529	72	156	295
Chourio, Mil	475	87	140	295
Harris II, Atl	542	69	156	288
Tatis Jr, SD	573	85	164	286
De La Cruz, Cin	523	89	144	283
Burleson, Tex	563	89	159	283
Walker, StL	563	92	159	282
Edwards, Mia	500	59	141	282
Lee, SF	513	63	143	279
Crow-Armstrong, ChC	574	111	160	279

EVAN BERNSTEIN/GETTY IMAGES

Walpole's Cam Schlittler shut out the Mets for six innings on one hit, his ERA falling to 1.95.

NOTEBOOK

Devers out for season

Slugger may need surgery

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rafael Devers's season is over and he may have surgery for a core muscle injury.

The Giants placed the first baseman/designated hitter on the 60-day injured list Sunday, ending his season.

Devers, who leads the team with 37 homers and 98 RBIs, is to meet Monday in Philadelphia with Dr. William Meyers. If a procedure is recommended, Devers would have the operation on Tuesday.

Devers had played in 309 consecutive games before sitting out the Giants' 7-6 win over St. Louis on Wednesday.

“He battled with it the entire year,” Giants manager Tony Vitello said. “I think it’s something that has bothered him for a few years now.”

Devers homered in his last two games and had eight home runs with 20 RBIs in his final 11 games.

In the third season of a $313.5 million, 10-year contract, Devers was acquired from Boston in June 2025. He was batting .207 with two homers through April but has raised his average to .258.

Schlittler takes ERA lead

Cam Schlittler took over the major league ERA lead, combining on a three-hitter that helped the Yankees close in on a record 61st postseason berth with a 2-0 win over the Mets at Yankee Stadium.

Schlittler (14-6), a Walpole native and former Northeastern pitcher, allowed one hit over six innings, his 21st start this year allowing one run or none. The only other pitcher 25 or younger with more in the last 110 years was the Angels’ Dean Chance with 22 in 1964, according to Major League Baseball.

Schlittler’s 1.945 ERA dropped below the 1.952 of Milwaukee’s Jacob Misiorowski. Schlitter struck out eight and walked two.

PATRICK SMITH/GETTY IMAGES

Alexander Zverev won $5.5 million and his second Grand Slam title of the season at the US Open.

Shelton’s US Open bid falls short

►US OPEN
Continued from Page C1
cheered him on.

“I know today 99.9 percent of the people wanted Ben to win, so I’m very sorry first of all,” Zverev said during the trophy presentation. “But second, it was an incredible atmosphere to play in. Even though I know that the crowd was against me, the crowd was always incredibly fair.”

Shelton was trying to win the first title by an American man since Andy Roddick won in Flushing Meadows in 2003, as well as become the first Black player to win the men’s crown since Arthur Ashe in 1968.

But Zverev was too good in majors this year and apparently didn’t even know how good he was. He finished the match on his serve but didn’t seem to realize it, dropping back behind the baseline as if set to return. Only a few moments later did he figure out he had won, raising his arms in celebration.

“You’re one of the very best players in the world, maybe the best player in the world this year,” Shelton told Zverev.

Zverev improved to 25-2 in major matches this year and won $5.5 million, matching the prize earned by women’s champion Elena Ry-bakina on Saturday as the largest in Grand Slam history.

He thought this title would come in 2020 and still acknowledges it should have. He won the first two sets against Dominic Thiem and got within 2 points of victory before becoming the first man to blow a two-set lead and lose in the final since 1949.

Whatever ghosts were left from then are long gone now.

Zverev also reached the final at Wimbledon, falling to Jannik Sinner, and became the No. 1 seed in New York when the top-ranked Sinner had to withdraw with a knee injury.

“I think God has seen how hard we worked, how much we suffered, how much pain we went through and I think 2026 is the outcome of all the years that happened before,” Zverev said, addressing his team.

Shelton had already eliminated the defending champion when he beat Carlos Alcaraz in a five-set quarterfinal that ended at 3:33 a.m., the latest finish in US Open history.

But he fell short on Sunday in his attempt to become the first man to beat the No. 1 and No. 2 seeds en route to the US Open title since 1975.

The No. 8 seed fell to 0-6 against Zverev, winning a set Sunday for only the second time.

The 23-year-old Shelton figures to get more chances, but Americans who have grown tired of waiting to celebrate a men’s title wanted it now.

Fans stood and screamed when Shelton emerged from the tunnel before the match, but he didn’t give them any reason to keep the cheers going once play began. Serving first, he lost the opening 2 points and then eventually handed the game to Zverev with a double-fault.

Zverev maintained that lead the rest of the set, which ended on another double-fault by Shelton.

Zverev then turned back Shelton’s chance to even the match in the tiebreaker.

Shelton returned Zverev’s opening serve long, was beaten by a superb passing shot, and then came up on the wrong end of a 16-shot rally as Zverev went up, 3-0. Zverev then hit serves of 147 and 124 miles per hour that Shelton couldn’t get back in play. Shelton cut it to 5-2 and then got a return in play for the only time, but Zverev won the point and then hit another serve at 139 m.p.h. to close it out.

Biasca makes solid first impression

►BRUINS
Continued from Page C1

since his days playing top-tier juniors in Canada. “There was a bouncing puck, but I went for a skate and when you skate, good things happen.”

Biasca hasn’t played a shift in the AHL or the NHL. He’s a long-shot to stick around for the upcoming days of varsity camp (Brighton on Wednesday) and a longer shot to be holding a job on Marco Sturm’s roster when the season opens Sept. 29 against the Rangers at TD Garden.

Still, all those odds considered, nothing catches eyes like goal scoring, and Whitfield was impressed with the Swiss kid’s overall game, particularly his play in the offensive zone.

“A real smart player,” said Whitfield. “He gets to the good spots, has a good stick, and [forces] a ton of turnovers. He’s in the right spot. He works, effective, gets underneath and inside. It’s all the things you love as a coach.”

All of which is why the Bruins over the summer took a flyer on Biasca, who did not get drafted in his junior days in Halifax, Nova Scotia, and chose to go home to play in Switzerland’s top pro league.

What impressed the Bruins most about his play over there, according to assistant general manager Dennis Bonvie, was his willingness and feistiness to get to the critical scoring areas. One game in a rookie tournament does not prove he can do that in the world’s best league, and Bonvie was quick to add, “I don’t want to oversell the player, but . . .”

But . . . they saw enough to offer him a path to prove it.

“It’s good start,” mused Biasca, the Zug-born 23-year-old. “It’s back on North American ice and it’s great to be back. I’ll just progress from here.”

Center Cole Chandler, a fifth rounder in 2025, failed to convert on a pair of excellent scoring bids in the second period. The 6-foot-1-inch center broke in alone only 17 seconds into the period and was turned away on a doorstep backhandler. He then was thwarted midway through the period on a short-range forehandler, once more denied by Sabres stopper Scott Ratzlaff . . . Hagens, the lone first rounder on the Bruins roster, paired with Biasca on a second penalty-killing unit when Dylan Dumont struck for Buffalo’s first-period power-play goal. The feisty former Eagle also was charged with a couple of minor penalties over the course of the afternoon . . .

Whitfield’s choices for the three alternate captains: Ty Gallagher (defense), Woburn’s Riley Duran (forward), and Jake Schmaltz (forward). All three spent time on the Providence roster prior to Whitfield being promoted to bench boss over the summer upon Ryan Mougenel landing on the Canucks coaching staff . . . Kalle Vaisanen, the hulking (6-5, 200 pounds) Finnish forward obtained over the summer when the Bruins shipped Joonas Korpisalo to the Rangers, lined up on right wing on a trio with Jordan Duguay (left wing), and Schmaltz (center) . . . Zocco, a camp invitee, potted the goal for a 5-2 lead with three seconds remaining in the second period. The 5-10 right winger of the Staten Island Zoccos led USHL Sioux Falls in scoring last season with 70 points. He used Locmelis, open in the slot, as a decoy and then picked the top right corner on Ratzlaff from the right circle. Whitfield admitted to not knowing much about him. “I honestly don’t,” he said. “I know he was a leading scorer in the USHL and he is extremely gifted offensively. He made a lot of really slick little plays and that’s nice to see.”

Kevin Paul Dupont can be reached at kevin.dupont@globe.com.

Allen, Bills end drought with victory in Houston

By Kristie Rieken
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bills 36
Texans 31
HOUSTON — Josh Allen didn’t wait for the question he knew was coming on Sunday after finally leading the Bills to a road win over the Texans in a season-opening thriller. “We do like Reliant Stadium,” he said with a big smile. “Woo.”

Allen threw a 34-yard touchdown pass to Joshua Palmer with 1:36 left to lift the Bills to a 36-31 victory in a back-and-forth game.

Allen had 334 yards passing with two touchdowns and ran for two more scores after losing his previous four games at Reliant Stadium.

“It feels good to start the season off right,” Allen said.

It was the Bills’ first win at Houston since Nov. 19, 2006.

The Texans led 31-30 when Allen split two defenders to find Palmer. The 2-point conversion failed.

One play earlier, Houston’s Kamari Lassiter got his hands on a pass from Allen in the end zone but couldn’t grab the interception.

“We got lucky,” Palmer said. “He dropped it. Next play I caught it.”

The Texans had a chance to win in the closing seconds, but Greg Rousseau had his second strip-sack of the day, taking down C.J. Stroud at the Buffalo 28. Terrel Bernard recovered to seal the victory.

It was a disappointing outing for Houston’s vaunted defense, which led the NFL in yards allowed and ranked second in points allowed last season.

“We had multiple opportunities to make plays, had chances to make plays on the football and we didn’t make plays,” Texans coach DeMeco Ryans said.

Houston allowed its most points since a

ALEX SLITZ/GETTY IMAGES

The Bills’ Josh Allen (17) accounted for four TDs, including rushing for two.

36-22 loss to Cleveland on Dec. 24, 2023.

“We’ve got to do a better job, especially closing out the game,” defensive end Will Anderson said. “It just wasn’t our standard. That’s not who we are. That’s not who we want to be as a defense.”

Dalton Kincaid had five receptions for 130 yards and DJ Moore had five catches for 100 yards and a touchdown in his Buffalo debut after a trade from Chicago.

Buffalo’s Joe Brady started his head coaching career with a win after he was promoted from offensive coordinator following Sean McDermott’s firing after nine seasons.

“You saw a lot of the conviction, everything we sort of talk about,” Brady said. “We didn’t care how pretty. There’s no such thing as an ugly win.”

David Montgomery, who was traded from Detroit this offseason, had a three-TD day in his Houston debut. He had scoring runs of 1 and 18 yards in the first half and his 7-yard touchdown reception put Houston up 28-27 early in the fourth.

Stroud threw for 274 yards and two touchdowns but lost two fumbles.

Williams may be needed to fill the void at receiver

►PATRIOTS
Continued from Page C1

Maye and Williams will have to fast-track their rapport, as the two rarely shared the field during training camp. Williams played during the preseason, connecting with backup Tommy DeVito for multiple deep touchdowns, but Maye did not. During games last year, there were moments when Williams did not appear to be on the same page as Maye.

Williams is trying to buck the trend of drafted wide receivers flaming out in New England. Some of his predecessors include Ja’Lynn Polk (2024 second round), Javon Baker (2024 fourth round), Tyquan Thornton (2022 second round), and N’Keal Harry (2019 first round).

DeMario Douglas and Boutte, both taken in the sixth round in 2023, are two examples of recent draft picks that were able to carve out roles for themselves.

The decision to trade Boutte will obviously come under fire, now that the Patriots could use depth at the position. Coach Mike Vrabel previously said Boutte would be inactive on game days, because he does not contribute on special teams.

In his debut with the Texans, Boutte caught one of two targets for 21 yards. Houston’s offensive coordinator is Nick Caley, who spent seven seasons working with Josh McDaniels in New England, so there could be some overlap within the systems. It will be interesting to see if Boutte’s role grows as the season goes on.

2. Brown is on injured reserve, which means he will miss a minimum of four games. But high ankle sprains can sometimes require a longer recovery period. Although Brown is not expected to undergo surgery, it’s possible he will also miss Weeks 6 (vs. Jets) and 7 (at Bears).

3. Safety Kevin Byard delivered the pregame speech for the Patriots, filling the role often held by Stefon Diggs last season. Byard, the lone new face to be voted captain by his teammates, has quickly emerged as one of the team’s leaders.

“Where else would you rather be right now?” Byard said in his speech. “We spent all [expletive] year for this [expletive], man. Blood, sweat and tears. Be in this moment.

Embrace this [expletive] moment. It’s always going to be about us. It ain’t about what they do. It’s how we play. Our intention, our focus. Play fast, play physical, and trust your brother.”

4. During training camp, when Vrabel spoke to the team about establishing its identity, he showed them a video of boxing trainer Teddy Atlas pumping up Timothy Bradley during his fight against Brandon Rios in 2015.

“Can you be strong for 15 minutes?” Atlas says to Bradley. “Look, the fire’s coming. Are you ready for the fire? We’re firemen. We are firemen. The heat doesn’t bother us. We live in the heat. We train in the heat. It tells us that we’re ready. We’re at home. We’re where we’re supposed to be. Flames don’t intimidate us. What do we do? We control the flames.”

Vrabel, who seemed to push all the right buttons when inspiring his players last season, wanted his players to watch the connection between the trainer and boxer and take note of their shared trust. It would not be surprising to see the “firemen” motif return throughout the season, à la “warriors.”

“I just thought that there are going to be some times when we have one quarter left of the game that we are going to need to be able to lock in and focus,” Vrabel said. “The trainer isn’t going to be able to go out there, but he is going to be able to give him everything that he needs and the wisdom and the training to help him do his job. I felt like that was just a great relationship and a good connection between a coach and a player on what we aspire to be.”

5. Up next for the Patriots are the Steelers, who beat the Falcons, 20-13, in Week 1. Pittsburgh’s defense will present a tough challenge for Maye, with its strong front and pass rush. According to Pro Football Focus, the Steelers registered nine pressures and four sacks on Sunday. Pittsburgh’s defensive coordinator is Patrick Graham, whom McDaniels hired to serve as his defensive coordinator in Las Vegas, so perhaps the two will have a level of familiarity.

Nicole Yang can be reached at nicole.yang@globe.com.

SportsLog

Texas takes over at No. 1 after comeback win over Ohio State

There’s a new No. 1 team in the Associated Press college football Top 25. Texas snagged the top spot Sunday after a wild win Saturday against Ohio State, giving the Longhorns their earliest No. 1 regular-season ranking since 1965. The Buckeyes slid down five places to No. 6, leaving the top five for the first time in two seasons. Oregon, meanwhile, plummeted 15 spots to No. 21 after a 39-31 road loss to an Oklahoma State team that had lost 21 straight against Football Bowl Subdivision opponents.

NBA

Ballmer won’t fight penalties

Los Angeles Clippers owner Steve Ballmer announced Sunday night he is complying with the NBA’s punishment in the Kawhi Leonard salary-cap circumvention case, and apologized to fans. Ballmer had promised to fight the league’s “witch hunt” when the ruling was handed down 11 days prior. “This has been a very difficult time for everybody associated with the Clippers, and for that, I have sincere regrets,” Ballmer said in a statement.

GOLF

Lowry sets Irish Open record

Shane Lowry gave his home crowd and President Trump plenty to cheer when he turned a four-shot lead into a runaway at Doonbeg, closing with a 7-under 63 to break the Irish Open record with an 11-shot victory. He finished on 23-under 257, seven shots better than the previous 72-hole record of 264 by Jon Rahm at Lahinch in 2019. Lowry won by 11 shots over Patrick Reed (64) and Joaquin Niemann (67), breaking the Irish Open record for the largest victory margin by one shot.

SOCCER

Man City wins via ‘error’ goal

The governing body of Premier League referees admitted an “error of judgment” after Erling Haaland’s hotly contested goal settled the 199th Manchester derby. That will be of little comfort to Manchester United after a 1-0 defeat to 10-man Manchester City at Old Trafford.

AUTOMOTOR RACING

Larson ends winless streak

Kyle Larson ended a 51-race winless streak, edging Hendrick Motorsports teammate Alex Bowman in overtime of a crash-filled NASCAR Cup Series race at World Wide Technology Raceway outside St. Louis that shook up the playoff standings. . . . A week after having to come from the back of the grid for an epic win in front of his home fans at Monza, Kimi Antonelli was virtually gifted the Spanish Grand Prix. The young Italian took advantage of an unlucky break for Lando Norris to win as Formula 1 returned to Madrid and increase his lead in the drivers’ standings. Norris finished third behind Red Bull’s Max Verstappen.

Bears' victory sets record for opener

By Steve Reed

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bears 59 CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Ben Johnson said he slept well Saturday night at the Bears' team hotel, sensing that quarterback Caleb Williams was more than ready for the season opener.

Chicago's coach had good instincts. Williams, the No. 1 pick in the 2024 draft, looked like a league MVP candidate on Sunday, throwing for 269 yards and two touchdowns and running for 65 yards and two more scores as the Bears trounced the Carolina Panthers, 59-37, in the highest-scoring season opener in NFL history.

"I could kind of tell [Saturday] night when we did our quarterback meeting one last time that he was just on top of it," Johnson said. "Everything he was rattling out, like where my eyes need to be and what I'm thinking. ... So I went to bed and just slept really well."

Johnson's prolific Bears broke a franchise record for points in an opener, a mark that had stood since 1948, when Chicago hung 45 points on Green Bay at Wrigley Field.

The 59 points were the most allowed by the Panthers since they began play as an expansion team in 1995.

D'Andre Swift, who received a $33.75 million contract extension earlier this week, paid immediate dividends for the Bears, rushing for 124 yards on 18 carries with three touchdowns, while Kyle Monangai had 100 yards on the ground, including a 61-yard touchdown burst in the second half.

"He's had a good week, huh?" Johnson said of Swift. "He earned [the contract], every step of it. We really value what he brings to the table. He has had a great spring and I don't think anybody in our camp is surprised he is out of the gate in strong fashion."

It was the fourth-most points in Bears history. The most came in their notorious 73-0 win over Washington in the 1940 NFL title game.

"That's how we want to look each week," Williams said. "That's who we want to be each week."

Chicago and Carolina scored eight more points than the previous record of 88 set in Tampa Bay's 48-40 win over New Orleans in 2018.

Although Carolina's Bryce Young fell to 0-4 in openers, it was by far the best season debut of his career. The 2023 No. 1 overall pick threw for 361 yards and three touchdowns. He also ran for a score.

Jalen Coker, who emerged as Carolina's No. 2 receiver last year, had eight catches for a career-high 138 yards and two TDs.

But the Panthers were done in three turnovers — a muffed punt by Jimmy Horn, a fumble by Tetairoa McMillan fumble and a pick by Young — and a leaky defense that committed untimely penalties.

The Bears put up 552 yards on offense and had 26 first downs. They were 10 of 14 on third-down conversions.

"It was an incredible day by the Bears," Panthers coach Dave Canales said. "There were some things that we did to give a really good offense more opportunities. They don't need any more opportunities."

The Bears turned the ball over on their first possession, but quickly recovered and scored seven touchdowns on their next 12 drives, including the final four possessions to close the game.

FootballMonday

AFC
EAST	W	L	Pct.	PF	PA	Conf.	Div.	Strk.
NY Jets	1	0	1.000	23.0	10.0	1-0	0-0	W 1
Buffalo	1	0	1.000	36.0	31.0	1-0	0-0	W 1
New England	0	1	.000	10.0	13.0	0-0	0-0	L 1
Miami	0	1	.000	13.0	27.0	0-1	0-0	L 1
NORTH
Baltimore	1	0	1.000	41.0	23.0	1-0	0-0	W 1
Pittsburgh	1	0	1.000	20.0	13.0	0-0	0-0	W 1
Cincinnati	1	0	1.000	33.0	27.0	0-0	0-0	W 1
Cleveland	0	1	.000	10.0	34.0	0-1	0-0	L 1
SOUTH
Jacksonville	1	0	1.000	34.0	10.0	1-0	0-0	W 1
Houston	0	1	.000	31.0	36.0	0-1	0-0	L 1
Tennessee	0	1	.000	10.0	23.0	0-1	0-0	L 1
Indianapolis	0	1	.000	23.0	41.0	0-1	0-0	L 1
WEST
Las Vegas	1	0	1.000	27.0	13.0	1-0	0-0	W 1
Denver	0	0	—	—	—	0-0	0-0	—
Kansas City	0	0	—	—	—	0-0	0-0	—
LA Chargers	0	1	.000	14.0	26.0	0-0	0-0	L 1

NFC
EAST	W	L	Pct.	PF	PA	Conf.	Div.	Strk.
Philadelphia	1	0	1.000	24.0	22.0	1-0	1-0	W 1
NY Giants	1	0	1.000	28.0	20.0	1-0	1-0	W 1
Dallas	0	1	.000	20.0	28.0	0-1	0-1	L 1
Washington	0	1	.000	22.0	24.0	0-1	0-1	L 1
NORTH
Minnesota	1	0	1.000	39.0	22.0	1-0	1-0	W 1
Chicago	1	0	1.000	59.0	37.0	1-0	0-0	W 1
Detroit	1	0	1.000	31.0	30.0	1-0	0-0	W 1
Green Bay	0	1	.000	22.0	39.0	0-1	0-1	L 1
SOUTH
Atlanta	0	1	.000	13.0	20.0	0-0	0-0	L 1
Tampa Bay	0	1	.000	27.0	33.0	0-0	0-0	L 1
New Orleans	0	1	.000	30.0	31.0	0-1	0-0	L 1
Carolina	0	1	.000	37.0	59.0	0-1	0-0	L 1
WEST
San Francisco	1	0	1.000	27.0	7.0	1-0	1-0	W 1
Arizona	1	0	1.000	26.0	14.0	0-0	0-0	W 1
Seattle	1	0	1.000	13.0	10.0	0-0	0-0	W 1
LA Rams	0	1	.000	7.0	27.0	0-1	0-1	L 1

SUNDAY'S RESULTS
NY Jets 23	at Tennessee 10	Chicago 59	at Carolina 37
At Cincinnati 33	Tampa Bay 27	At Philadelphia 24	Washington 22
At Detroit 31	New Orleans 30 (OT)	At Minnesota 39	Green Bay 22
Buffalo 46	at Houston 31	Arizona 26	at LA Chargers 14
Baltimore 31	at Indianapolis 23	At Las Vegas 27	Miami 13
At Jacksonville 34	Cleveland 10	At NY Giants 28	Dallas 20
At Pittsburgh 20	Atlanta 13

MONDAY'S GAME
Denver	at Kansas City	8:15
THURSDAY'S GAME
Detroit	at Buffalo	8:15
THURSDAY'S RESULT
San Francisco 27	LA Rams 7
WEDNESDAY'S RESULT
At Seattle 13	New England 10

Monday night football

Denver at Kansas City

Time: Monday, 8:15 p.m., ABC, ESPN.

Line (over/under): Kansas City by 2½ (43½)

Injuries: BRONCOS: None. KANSAS CITY: OUT: CB Chamarri Conner (knee), T Josh Simmons (back).

BEARS 59, PANTHERS 37
Chicago (1-0)	14	17	14 14 — 59
Carolina (0-1)	5	17	5 17 — 37
Car — Hubbard 4 pass from Young (Fitzgerald kick), 11:33.
Chi — Williams 9 run (Santos kick), 5:52.
Chi — Swift 1 run (Santos kick), 1:59.
Car — Kmet 22 pass from Williams (Santos kick), 13:57.
Car — Coker 51 pass from Young (Fitzgerald kick), 12:40.
Car — Young 7 run (Fitzgerald kick), 8:42.
Chi — FG Santos 40, 5:20.
Car — FG Fitzgerald 44, 2:35.
Chi — Williams 29 run (Santos kick), 0:22.
Car — Hubbard 2 run (Fitzgerald kick), 9:02.
Chi — Swift 1 run (Santos kick), 3:05.
Chi — Monangai 61 run (Santos kick), 0:40.
Chi — Walker 1 pass from Williams (Santos kick), 6:27.
Car — Coker 8 pass from Young (kick blocked), 4:00.
Chi — Swift 28 run (Santos kick), 3:40.
Attendance: 72,597

BENGALS 33, BUCCANERS 27
Tampa Bay (0-1)	3	7	3 7 0 — 27
Cincinnati (0-1)	14	14	14 14 — 28
TB — FG McLaughlin 34, 9:09.
Cin — Knight Jr. 27 opponent fumble return (McPherson kick), 6:18.
Cin — Cincinnati 1 2 pass from Burrow (McPherson kick), 1:48.
Cin — C-Brown 5 run (McPherson kick), 5:32.
TB — Irving 10 run (McLaughlin kick), 1:49.
Cin — FG McPherson 20, 0:06.
FG McPherson 55, 10:03.
TB — FG McLaughlin 51, 3:41.
TB — Trotter 38 interception return (McLaughlin kick), 2:16.
Cin — FG McPherson 58, 14:04.
Cin — FG McPherson 32, 5:19.
TB — Mayfield 9 run (McLaughlin kick), 3:19.
Attendance: 66,625

BENGALS 33, BUCCANERS 27
Tampa Bay (0-1)
Total yards.....	282	351
Rushing-yards.....	20-89	27-106
Passing.....	193	245
Punt returns.....	1-13	0-0
Kickoff returns.....	6-12	7-26
Interception returns.....	1-38	0-0
Comp-att-int.....	23-28-0	25-35-1
Sacked-yards lost.....	4-23	1-9
Punts-avg.....	0.....	1-51.0
Fumbles-lost.....	0.....	0.....
Penalties-yards.....	8-39	7-47
Time of possession.....	28:35	31:25
INDIVIDUAL STATISTICS
RUSHING—TB, Irving 8-45, Mayfield 5-30, Gainwell 1-15, Godwin Jr. 1-3, T.J. Johnson 1-4; Cin, Brown 16-56, Perine 3-20, Burrow 5-20, Meyers 1-10
PASSING—TB, Mayfield 23-28-0-216; Cin, Burrow 25-35-1-254
RECEIVING—TB, Irving 7-48, Egbuka 5-63, Godwin Jr. 4-40, Hurst III 3-36, Otton 3-26, Gainwell 1-3, T.J. Johnson 0-0; Cin, Gesicki 5-78, C-Brown 5-22, Higgins 3-59, Perine 3-30, Sample 1-2-0, Chasen 2-12, Iosivas 2-12, Meyers 1-18, Hudson 1-4
TACKLES-ASSISTS-SACKS—TB, Trotter 3-7-1, McCollum 8-1-0, Winfield Jr. 7-2-0, Anzalone 2-5-0, Robinson 3-2-0, K-Scott 4-0-0, Morrison 4-0-0, Smith 3-1-0, Parrish 2-0-0, Nelson 1-1-0, Bain Jr. 1-0-0, Muhammad 1-0-0, Diaby 1-0-0, Nunez-Roches 0-1-0; Cin, Battle 5-2-1, Carter 5-3-5, D-Will 7-0-0, Knight Jr. 5-2-0, Cook 4-2-0, J-Davis 2-3-0, Turner II 3-1-0, Allen 2-1-1, Murphy 1-1-5, Jenkins Jr. 1-0-1, Mafe 1-0-1, Slaton Jr. 1-0-0
INTERCEPTIONS—TB, Trotter 1-38

JAGUARS 34, BROWNS 10
Cleveland (0-1)	0	0	0 0 3 — 10
Jacksonville (1-0)	14	10	14 10 0 — 34
Jax — Washington 30 pass from Lawrence (C.Little kick), 8:11.
Jax — Cameron 4 pass from Lawrence (C.Little kick), 1:42.
Jax — FG C.Little 47, 9:09.
Jax — Strange 14 pass from Lawrence (C.Little kick), 6:18.
Jax — Meyers 32 pass from Lawrence (C.Little kick), 12:08.
Cle — FG Smyth 26, 8:31.
Jax — FG C.Little 40, 1:48.
Cle — Boston 46 pass from D.Watson (Smyth kick), 1:52.
Attendance: 41,156

LIONS 31, SAINTS 30
New Orleans (0-1)	0	14	0 14 3 — 30
Detroit (1-0)	7	0	7 0 3 — 31
Det — Gibbs 1 run (Bates kick), 3:39.
Det — Gibbs 1 run (Bates kick), 11:16.
Det — St. Brown 19 pass from Goff (Bates kick), 8:54.
NO — K-Miller 8 run (Carlson kick), 4:27.
NO — Vele 1 pass from Shough (Carlson kick), 0:28.
NO — FG Carlson 28, 7:41.
Det — FG Bates 23, 2:32.
NO — Johnson 9 pass from Shough (Carlson kick), 1:07.
Det — St. Brown 4 pass from Goff (Bates kick), 5:04.
NO — Fant 8 pass from Shough (pass failed), 1:34.
Attendance: 62,897

LIONS 31, SAINTS 30
New Orleans (0-1)
Total yards.....	29	26
Total yards.....	469	369
Rushing-yards.....	25-91	33-165
Passing.....	378	204
Punt returns.....	4-21	3-35
Kickoff returns.....	4-74	4-84
Interception returns.....	0.....	2-4
Comp-att-int.....	35-56-2	26-39-0
Sacked-yards lost.....	5-32	1-2
Punts-avg.....	7-48.0	7-48.0
Fumbles-lost.....	2-1	1-1
Penalties-yards.....	6-53	8-61
Time of possession.....	31:35	36:51
INDIVIDUAL STATISTICS
RUSHING—NO, Etienne Jr. 9-46, K-Miller 9-30, Shough 4-8, Donaldson 2-4, B-Brown 1-3; Det, Gibbs 29-156, Vaki 2-7, Goff 2-2
PASSING—NO, Shough 35-56-2-410; Det, Goff 25-39-0-206
RECEIVING—NO, Olave 10-182, Vele 7-69, Etienne Jr. 7-32, Fant 4-33, Johnson 3-54, Lance 3-42, Donaldson 1-2; Det, St. Brown 10-67, LaPorta 5-48, Gibbs 5-30, J.Williams 4-45, Veld 1-11, Wright 1-5
TACKLES-ASSISTS-SACKS—NO, Sanker 7-3-0, Ellis 3-6-0, J.Reld 5-3-0, McKinsty 4-3-0, Werner 3-4-0, Stutsman 3-3-0, Blackmon 2-4-0, Godchaux 2-2-0, Riley 2-1-0, Broughton 1-2-0, Shepherd 1-2-0, Granderson 2-0-1; Det, Reed 7-3-0, Ya-Sin 7-0-0, Campbell 5-2-0, Maddox 4-3-0, Barnes 3-2-1, Hutchinson 4-1-0, McCrery 4-0-1, Rodriguez 2-2-0, Harper 1-2-0, C-Clark 2-1-0, White 1-2-0, Ty-Williams 1-2-0, Wonnac 1-2-0, Abney II 2-0-1
INTERCEPTIONS—Det, Barnes 1-3, C-Clark 1-1
MISSED FIELD GOALS—NO, Carlson, 62 (Wide Right)

STEELERS 20, FALCONS 13
Atlanta (0-1)	7	0	3 0 — 13
Pittsburgh (1-0)	7	0	7 0 — 20
Pit — FG Boswell 43, 8:30.
Atl — B-Robinson 23 pass from Rush (Folick kick), 1:13.
Pit — FG Boswell 28, 12:28.
Pit — Freeman 6 pass from Rodgers (Boswell kick), 10:39.
Atl — FG Folk 51, 1:50.
Pit — Watt 35 interception return (Boswell kick), 14:05.
Atl — FG Folk 43, 10:35.
Attendance: 66,089

Metcalf 4-24, Pittman 1-19; Zacheaus, Pitts
 1-10; Williams, Ware 1-10; Ware 1-10;
 Gore Jr. 1-3, Davis 1-3; Johnson, Montgomery 2-
 6, Panks 9-42, Stroud 2-15, Collins 1-
 7, Marking-Burf, Jallen 20-29 0-334; Houder, Stroud
 20-29 0-7.
 RECEIVING - Buf, Kincad 5-120, Moore 5-
 100, Shaker 4-50, Cook III 3-12, Palmer 3-14.
 KNOX 1-7, Coleman 1-1; Hou, Collins 7-75, Feltz
 5-135, Muttonson 3-32, Muttonson 3-32, Muttonson
 3-19, Noel 2-3, Morris 2-10, Sawyer 1-2, High Klein 1-6, Wayne 1-12, Stover 1-2, Marks 1-2.
 TACKLES-ASSISTS-SACKS-Buf, Bernard 6-2-
 0, Williams 4-5-0, Gardner-Johnson 6-2-0,
 Schell 4-1-0, DW 4-1-0, DW 4-1-0, DW 4-1-0,
 Oliver 3-2-0, Rousseau 4-0-2, Chubb 0-4-0, Alai-Shaair 5-3-0, Blankenship 4-0-2, Bull-cock 5-0-1, Pritts 4-0-2, Stingley Jr 4-0-0, A.D. Jr.
 Johnson 1-1-25, Clowney 1-0-1, Edwards Jr.
 1-0-0.

Legacy use late goals to stun Spirit

Boston wins second straight

Legacy 3
Spirit 0

The teams couldn't have looked more different on paper: Washington, sitting in second place in the standings with NWSL Shield aspirations, and the struggling Legacy, who entered Sunday in 14th place with just six wins from 23 matches.

But Boston more than held its own against one of the top teams in the league, keeping Trinity Rodman and the Spirit silent and breaking through as the clock wound down for a 3-0 win at Audi Field in D.C.

Aïssata Traoré scored in the 81st minute, her ninth goal of the season and fourth in the past four games to give the Legacy (7-12-5, 26 points) the lead. With the temperature in Washington reaching 90 degrees, Amanda Gutierres replaced Traoré in a planned substitution two minutes later, then scored twice in stoppage time.

It was the Legacy's second straight road win against a top-five opponent following a 2-1 victory at Utah on Sept. 4.

"It doesn't matter where we are in the table," Gutierres said through a translator. "We need to keep that mentality from the beginning of the season."

On the opening goal, the Spirit back line appeared to have thwarted an attack from Traoré and Nichelle Prince at the top of the box, but the ball slipped through the defenders, and the Legacy's leading scorer snuck a shot in off the bottom of the far left post.

Gutierres doubled the advantage in the fourth minute of stoppage time from some 60 yards out, stealing a pass from Washington's Tara Rudd and firing from long distance when Spirit goalkeeper Sandy MacIver was off her line.

Seeing the opportunity unfold, the entire coaching staff and many of the players on the bench shot out of their seats and ran down the sideline with Gutierres when she won possession.

"Almost everyone tried to score that goal, I think," said assistant coach Bárbara Reis.

The Brazilian striker had one more in her, adding another goal two minutes later on a tap-in at the back post from a cross by Lilly Reale, a Hingham native who came off the bench in the 60th minute for her first game action since Aug. 22 because of a hand injury.

It was a complete departure from the teams' previous meeting, when the Legacy went down by two goals six minutes apart in the first half before getting one back late.

Scoring late has become a habit for the Legacy, who have 14 goals in the 76th minute or later this season — including six of Traoré's nine.

"We feel that the team that reaches that advantage first over the opponent, they feel more motivated," Reis said. "So if we can have that sooner, it's good for us."

Despite the loss, the Spirit (13-7-4, 43 points) have a 1-point lead for second place and are 5 points behind Gotham FC.

The Legacy host Houston next Sunday at Centreville Bank Stadium in their final game this season in Pawtucket, R.I. They will play their final home game at Gillette Stadium on Oct. 16 against Racing Louisville.

Emma Healy can be reached at emma.healy@globe.com or on X @ByEmmaHealy.

Revolution take down Fire

Turgeman scores, adds assist

Revolution 2
Fire 1

Dor Turgeman and a defensive masterclass delivered for the Revolution on Sunday in Chicago. The striker scored on a breakaway late in the first half and set up Peyton Miller at the start of the second, after which New England bunkered in and scored a statement win, 2-1, over the Fire.

The night after MLS's top two teams, Nashville and Inter Miami, played to a high-octane 2-2 draw, two of their Eastern Conference pursuers played a defensive, even match that turned into a Chicago shooting gallery in the final half-hour.

The Fire, who added former Barcelona star Robert Lewandowski during the World Cup break and were unbeaten in their last seven MLS matches, held an 18-2 edge in second-half shots and had all 13 of the match's corner kicks as they repeatedly knocked on the door.

Chicago pulled within 2-1 in the 62nd minute when substitute Maren Haile-Selassie beat Matt Turner (four saves) to his right through traffic from the penalty arc, but a litany of blocked shots and clearances kept out an equalizer.

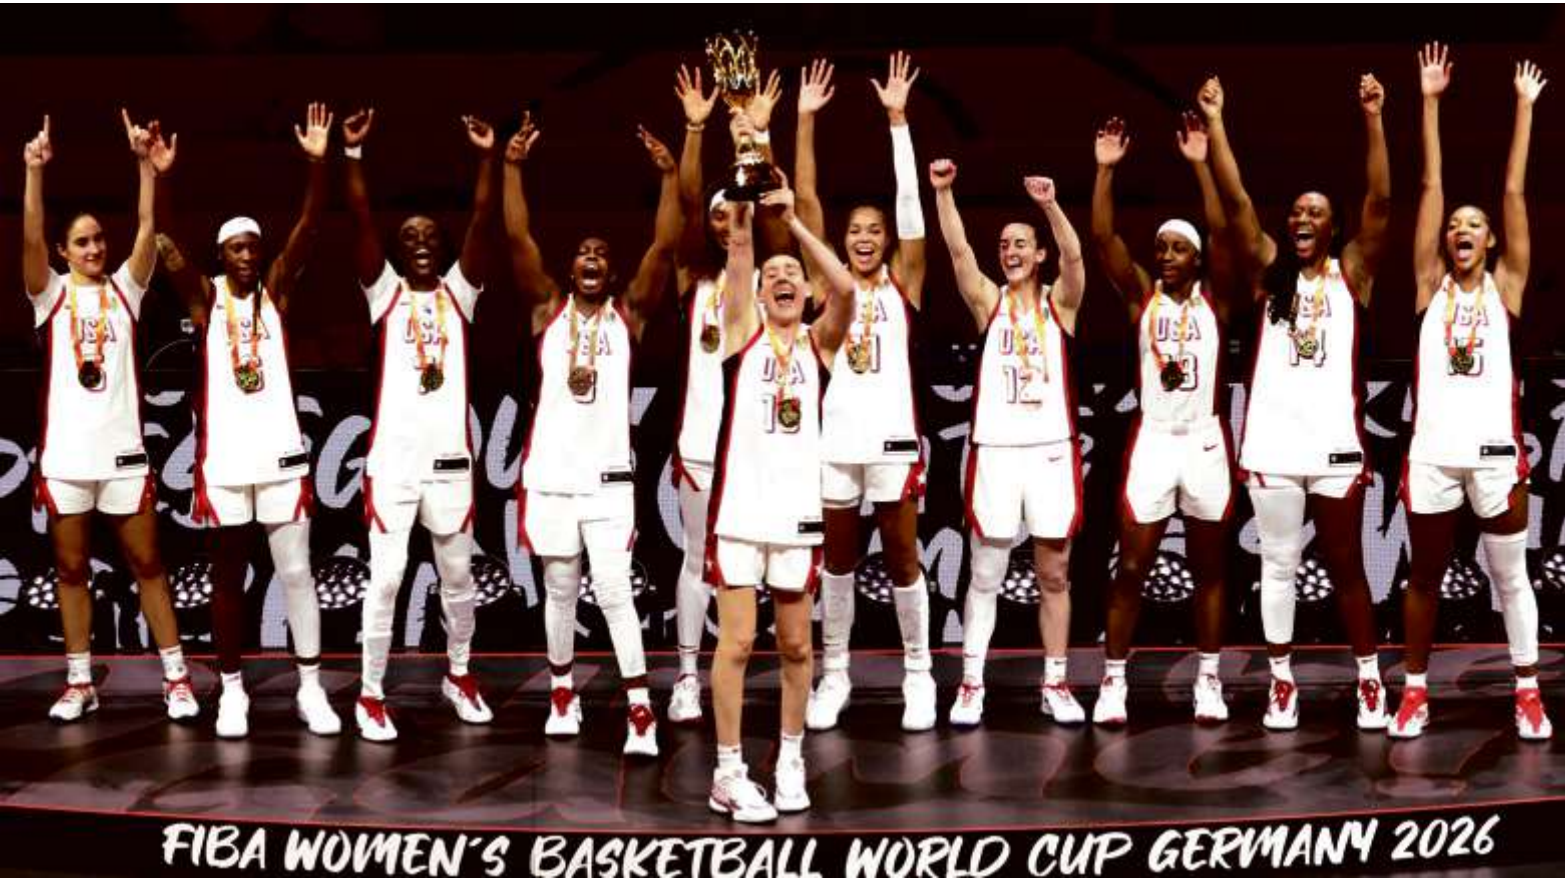

The Revolution (13-8-4, 43 points) moved back into third place in the East, capping a strong 3-1-0 road trip as the Fire (11-7-6, 39 points) dropped to fifth, a point behind Charlotte (with a game in hand). Chicago visits Gillette Stadium on Oct. 17.

Without key setup man Jack Harrison and midfield regular Alhassan Yusuf, who were injured in Wednesday's win at New York City FC, Marko Mitrovic started Dániel Gazdag and Jackson Yueill.

It was a penalty-area clearance from Yueill, making just his third start of the year, that broke Turgeman in in the 39th minute. Turgeman beat Chicago's Sam Rogers through the center circle to the ball, dribbled twice, and shot past goalkeeper Chris Brady for his seventh goal of the season and third in five matches.

Yueill had a more intentional setup in the 47th, chipping a loose ball to Turgeman, who carried it all the way to Brady's 6-yard box, then passed across two Fire players to Miller. The Connecticut teen tapped it in for his fifth of the year, effectively New England's last offensive effort.

The Revolution host Orlando City, on a 4-0-1 run with big summer acquisition Antoine Griezmann, on Saturday night in Foxborough.

ODD ANDERSEN/AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

Tournament MVP Breanna Stewart held the trophy after her 22 points helped the United States win its fifth straight World Cup title.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL FIBA WORLD CUP

US wins fifth straight championship

US 97
France 79

By Doug Feinberg
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BERLIN — Breanna Stewart had an American flag draped around her body as she soaked in the moment.

The US captain delivered again and the Americans continued their domination of international play, winning a fifth straight women's FIBA World Cup title with a 97-79 victory over France on Sunday.

The Americans have won 36 straight World Cup games, dating to the semifinals of the 2006 World Cup, where they lost to Russia.

"We are the standard," said Stewart, who scored 22 points in the victory and earned MVP honors of the tournament for the second time. "USA Basketball has continued to show up and go for gold and to have done that however many times consecutively is an insane stat. We want to make sure that we continue to build on that standard and everybody else knows it."

Despite the final score, this game wasn't easy; the Americans faced their biggest deficit in the tournament since that loss to Russia when they were down 14 points in the first half to France. They calmly rallied behind Stewart and Jackie Young to get within 2 points at half-time, with Caitlin Clark hitting a 3-pointer just before the buzzer.

"I think we felt really good about where we were at," said Clark, who finished with 12 points. "I think France was 8 for 14 (from 3-point range). We dug ourselves a hole, but we climbed out of it, and I felt like we were never rattled by anything."

The United States dominated in the second half, starting the third quarter with a 11-2 run to go up 54-47. Stewart, who has four World Cup titles to her name, had 4 points during the game-changing burst.

France was able to get within 55-51, but the Americans used a 16-3 spurt that included two unsportsmanlike fouls against France on the same play. The Americans were up, 73-57, heading into the fourth quarter, and France never was able to close the gap.

"I'm really happy with the way that we let the rest of the world know that our goal is always gold," Stewart said. "Just really proud."

The US improved to 9-0 in gold-medal games since finishing second in 1983 to the Soviet Union.

This was the second-youngest team the Americans have sent to a World Cup. There were many newcomers on the roster including Clark, Angel Reese, and Paige Bueckers, who were playing for the national team for the first time. But it was the veterans who carried the team to the victory.

The Americans had looked more vulnerable in this tournament than at any time during their remarkable run. A 3-point win over Italy in pool play was the closest a team has come to the US in the group stage in 50 years. The 10-point victory over Spain was the closest semifinal contest during the streak. The Americans had been winning by an average of 26 points over the past four medal-round games.

None of that mattered in the end as the Americans finished the same way they had the previous four World Cup tournaments — as champions.

The loss nevertheless gave France its best finish in the event. The French were hoping for the top prize after they came close against the US in the 2024 Paris Olympics gold-medal game two years ago. That 1-point loss still stung two years later.

Dominique Malonga scored 21 points and Gabby Williams added 20 for France.

"Of course we're disappointed right now, but I think we're showing little by little, France is a basketball country," Williams said. "That was my goal, when I joined this team, was to change the culture. Obviously we have higher expectations, but we'll get there."

France got off to a strong start. The US trailed, 20-17, after the first quarter and the French scored the first 11 points of the second, capped by Williams's 3-pointer, to take a 31-17 lead.

But the Americans rallied and trailed, 45-43, at the half on Clark's 3-pointer just before the buzzer. Spain topped host Germany, 81-58, to win the bronze medal.

SOLHEIM CUP

Woad, Ciganda lead way as Europe regains crown

Europe 15
US 13

By Steve Douglas
ASSOCIATED PRESS

DEN BOSCH, Netherlands — Lottie Woad assured it. Carlota Ciganda — who else? — sealed it.

Vamos! The Solheim Cup is back in the hands of Team Europe.

The blue wave came early in the Sunday singles at Bernardus Golf and never went away, all the way through to Woad holing a putt from 2 feet on No. 17 to win her match and guarantee the Europeans would reach the 14½ points needed to reclaim the crystal trophy from the United States.

MADDIE MEYER/GETTY IMAGES

Carlota Ciganda (right) and Team Europe celebrated after beating the US in the Solheim Cup.

Woad, one of Team Europe's four rookies, punched the air and jumped into the arms of her teammates who flooded onto the green in celebration.

Within 10 minutes, Ciganda, inevitably, officially got the Europeans to the victory target.

The Spaniard, who got the decisive point when Europe retained the Solheim Cup in 2023, completed a 4-and-2 victory over Jennifer Kupcho, a feisty American who had roared "Vamos!" ("Let's go!") when holing an outrageous 93-foot putt on the way to beating Ciganda in a spiky four-balls match on Saturday.

"Today I knew she had no chance," Ciganda said. "I was like, I want to kill you."

Strains of "Olé, Olé, Olé, Olé" drifted across the course as the last matches finished and the European team and staff celebrated, spraying Champagne over each other and draping flags over their shoulders.

Captain Anna Nordqvist, her assistants along with the players and their caddies formed a line, put their arms over one another's shoulders, and walked as one up the 18th fairway toward the green where Celine Boutier — the remaining European player on the course — was wrapping up her match.

When Boutier finished, she piled into the mass celebrations.

The final score in the Netherlands: Europe 15, the United States 13.

To a backdrop of blue-and-yellow smoke, Nordqvist hoisted aloft the Solheim Cup on a podium in front of a first-tee grandstand filled with jubilant Team Europe fans, then gave each of her celebrating players and assistants a touch of the trophy.

"This feels so good," said Nordqvist, who announced her retirement from playing two weeks ago. "There's just been so much hard work this week and in the last two years leading up to this."

The Europeans have now won three of the last five editions, the only loss in that stretch coming in Virginia two years ago.

The US team didn't have possession of the trophy for long and is still without a win on the road since 2015.

"The Europeans played great today, and that's the way it goes," US captain Angela Stanford said. "Their backs were against the wall, they had nothing to lose, and that's exactly what they did — they came out and played well."

The teams were tied at 8-8 after two days and set out Sunday in heavy rain for the 12 singles matches, with Europe going out fast, putting blue all over the scoreboard and ultimately winning six of the first eight matches. Ciganda, in Match 11, added the crucial other victory.

Early wins for Charley Hull and Linn Grant laid the platform for victory, the only wobble for Europe coming when US player Alison Lee came from 4 down after 11 holes to beat Esther Henseleit, 1 up, for the greatest comeback in Solheim Cup history.

Rookies contributed massively for Europe all week and especially Sunday, with Woad, Nastasia Nadaud and Julia Lopez Ramirez all winning matches in the singles.

Nadaud, a 21-year-old Frenchwoman, was a revelation this week, winning 3 points. Only Grant, Lee (both 4) and Lauren Coughlin (3 ½) collected more.

"I think it's been one of the best teams that we've had in the last few years," Ciganda said. "Everyone just a unit, a team. That's what Europe is about."

The US leads the all-time series, 11-8, with one draw.

A big part of the narrative of the week was the misfiring performances of Europe's highest-ranked players.

Hull and Woad, two English players, were paired in each of the first four sessions — a first for a Solheim Cup — and only contributed a half-point. Redemption came Sunday, with Hull leading from the front — she beat Rockland's Megan Khang, previously undefeated in singles, 3 and 2 in Match 1 — and Woad going 4 up after nine holes against Auston Kim before winning 2 and 1.

"She's been playing so good this week and not really getting anything off of it," Nordqvist said of Woad. "But holing the winning putt, I don't think that's ever going to be hard to (forget) for her."

DEBEE TLUMACKI FOR THE GLOBE

Tyler Stelljes had two touchdown passes and a TD run as Scituate beat Duxbury, 21-0, Friday night to stay at No. 6 in the Top 20 poll.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL NOTEBOOK

Young leaders give Lynn English a lift

By Nate Weitzer
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

It is not easy for an underdog to hold on for a road win in a tough environment after relinquishing a two-score lead. Especially if that group is primarily comprised of sophomores and juniors.

But the leaders of the Lynn English football team aren't your average underclassmen.

With sophomore captain Kas-sius Chea setting the example, Lynn English had a strong pre-season that carried into Thursday's 18-15 victory at Marblehead.

New starters provided big performances all over the field, led by junior quarterback Josiah Peralta (16-of-18 passing, 156 yards, 3 touchdowns) and sophomore wide-out Jairo Fernandez (10 receptions, 119 yards, TD).

Sophomore Keilan Smith (four receptions, 25 yards), who only played on defense last season, caught a first-quarter touchdown, and junior Aaden Soto (10 sacks last season) provided a pivotal strip sack late in the second quarter.

When the host Magicians rallied for three unanswered scores to take a 15-12 edge in the second half, Peralta, Fernandez, and Chea responded.

Fernandez came down with a pair of tough catches on fourth and long, then the Bulldogs faced another fourth down at the 4-yard line. Rolling left with limited options, Peralta turned his hips and whipped a strike to Chea, who made a heads-up play to drift off his route toward the corner of the end zone, leading to the go-ahead score, leading to the go-ahead score, leading to the go-ahead score.

"[Chea is] just a natural born leader," said third-year Lynn English coach Tyllor McDonald ("11), who totaled more than 5,000 passing yards and 60 touchdowns at his alma mater.

"He's a really great kid on and off the field. Been a straight-A student his whole life. He's a really smart player and he's only going to get better."

Joe Ford (defensive coordinator), Matt Griffin (offensive coordinator), and Drew Shairs (offensive line coach) have worked alongside McDonald the past few years to "re-store order in this program," as he put it when hired in December 2023.

With all of their captains graduated and just two seniors set for starting roles ahead of this season, McDonald and his staff identified Chea among a crop of younger candidates. The high-honors student is joined by sophomore Edmond Mang, junior Jamaal Boyd, and Sophomore Shane Knowlton-Simard, but Peralta put in a lot of work in the offseason and thrived in his debut with zero turnovers and several highlight throws.

"That throw [Peralta] made was insane," McDonald said of the go-ahead touchdown. "It wasn't a regular throw. It was crossbody and the play was kind of blown up. For him to come in his first start and beat a team like that, it says what type of player he could be."

Extra points

■ A pair of programs started strong after winless 2025 campaigns. Ronan Kelleher and Damir Neal rushed for touchdowns in the second half to put Belmont ahead and senior line-backer Kellen Jones led the charge on a goal-line stop as time expired to give the Marauders a 20-14 win over Arlington Catholic in Chad Foster's first game as coach . . . New Bedford scored just 41 points last year and topped that total in Friday's 42-8 win over Greater New Bedford to open Bob Lomp's second season at the helm. Senior quarterback Tru Gonzalez-Cosme dazzled with two rushing touchdowns, two 2-point conversions, a 42-yard touchdown pass, and a 55-yard punt return for another touchdown. The Bishop Stang transfer also had an 81-yard kick return touchdown called back by penalty.

■ North Quincy first-year coach Greg Sommers, who spent 18 years as an assistant with the Raiders and at Quincy High, also debuted with a big win.

Senior Gavin Brown (14 carries, 111 yards) had two interceptions, including a pick in the fourth quarter after Connor Lynch broke a 95-yard kick return touchdown that proved to be the difference in a 20-13 win over defending Division 7 champion Cohasset. Linebacker Jake Campbell and offensive lineman Breven Lyons were key in the victory.

■ Everett freshman Michael Walsh debuted with 160 passing yards and three touchdowns in a 42-27 win over Arlington. His grandfather, John ('66), played offensive tackle for quarterback Frank Champi on a powerhouse Everett team that lost just one game in three years. His father, John Walsh Jr., coached Danvers and Malden Catholic to six state titles in boys' basketball.

Nate Weitzer can be reached at nweitzer7@gmail.com. Follow him on X @nweitzer7.

Colleges

FOOTBALL
AP Top 25 poll
The poll as of Sept. 13, with first-place votes in parentheses, records, total points based on 25 points for first-place vote through 1 point for 25th, and last week's ranking:
Rec.	Pts.	LW
1. Texas (56)	2-0	1,678	4
2. Georgia (3)	2-0	1,531	3
3. Notre Dame (1)	2-0	1,531	3
4. Indiana (3)	2-0	1,466	5
5. Miami (4)	2-0	1,452	7
6. Ohio State	1-1	1,407	1
7. LSU (11)	2-0	1,334	8
8. Mississippi	2-0	1,216	9
9. Texas A&M	2-0	1,165	10
10. Alabama	2-0	1,068	12
11. BYU	2-0	966	15
12. USC	2-0	906	14
13. Texas Tech	2-0	910	13
14. Penn State	2-0	692	16
15. Tennessee	2-0	676	18
16. SMU	2-0	636	17
17. Utah	2-0	558	20
18. Iowa	2-0	391	21
19. Michigan	2-0	382	28
20. Missouri	2-0	344	23
21. Oregon	1-1	324	24
22. Houston	2-0	292	22
23. Louisville	1-1	244	24
24. Oklahoma	1-1	222	11
25. Virginia	2-0	182	25

Also receiving votes: Washington 172, Florida 83, Boise St. 57, Oklahoma St. 36, W. Michigan 35, Tulsa 18, Mississippi 17, South Carolina 15, Virginia Tech 11, UCLA 9, James Madison 6, Arizona 5, North Dakota St. 3, Kansas St. 1, Pittsburg 1

FBS Coaches poll

The poll as of Sept. 13, with first-place votes in parentheses, records, total points based on 25 points for a first-place vote through 1 point for 25th, and last week's ranking:

Rec.	Pts.	LW
1. Texas (42)	2-0	1,801	3
2. Georgia (15)	2-0	1,732	2
3. Notre Dame (4)	2-0	1,639	4
4. Indiana (10)	2-0	1,611	5
5. Miami (2)	2-0	1,575	7
6. Ohio State	1-1	1,480	1
7. LSU (1)	2-0	1,405	8
8. Texas A&M	2-0	1,311	9
9. Mississippi	2-0	1,228	11
10. Alabama	2-0	1,206	12
11. USC	3-0	1,023	14
12. Texas Tech	2-0	977	13
13. BYU	2-0	975	15
14. Tennessee	2-0	679	18
15. Penn State	2-0	676	16
16. SMU	2-0	605	17
17. Utah	2-0	590	20
18. Oregon	1-1	564	6
19. Michigan	2-0	435	21
20. Iowa	2-0	423	21
21. Oklahoma	1-1	395	10
22. Missouri	2-0	340	23
23. Houston	2-0	290	22
24. Washington	2-0	268	19
25. Virginia	2-0	249	25

Also receiving votes: Florida 183, Louisville 160, Boise St. 44, Kansas St. 24, South Carolina 23, Mississippi 20, Duke 19, Vanderbilt 19, Nebraska 15, Pittsburgh 16, Oklahoma 16, Auburn 15, W. Michigan 10, Virginia Tech 9, UCLA 8, Tulsa 7, North Dakota St. 7, New Mexico 4, Clemson 3, Wake Forest 1, Arizona 1

ATLANTIC COAST
California 21.....	Syracuse 18	ETSU 13
Clemson 22.....	Georgia Southern 7	Illinois 27
Duke 31.....	North Carolina 35.....	Pittsburgh 12	UCF 7
Florida 52.....	SMU 56.....	UC Davis 10	Tennessee 45.....
Georgia Tech 24	Virginia Tech 44.....	Old Dominion 21	Wake Forest 38.....
		Purdue 36 (20T)
COASTAL
Albany 35.....	LIU 21	Baylor State 41.....	Stony Brook 17
Rail State 41.....	Bryant 31.....	Cambridge 52.....	Cambridge 52
Florida 52.....	Merrimack 23.....	Maine 14	N.C. Central 30.....
		No. Carolina A&T 22	UMass 37.....
		Sacred Heart 10	UNH 42.....
		Stonellish 35	URI 31.....
		Elon 10	W. Michigan 49.....
		Monmouth 14
NORTHEAST 10
Bentley 48.....	St. Anselm 14	Frostburg St. 24.....	Assumption 19
		Curry 41.....	Coast Guard 35
		Endicott 49.....	Muhlenberg 21
		Merchant Marine 63.....	Nichols 14
		MIT 70.....	New College 0
		Salve Regina 24.....	Western N.E. 21
		Springfield 48.....	Husson 0
		WPI 22.....	U. New England 21
MASCAC
Bridgewater St. 34.....	Westfield St. 28	Mass. Maritime 70.....	Dean 0
UMass-Dartmouth 56.....	Fitchburg St. 22	Worcester St. 28.....	Plymouth St. 6
NEWMAC
Norwich 17.....	Castleton 10	Chris. Newport 37.....	Western Conn. 7
Maryland 34.....	UConn 14	Miami (Ohio) 45.....	Holy Cross 7
South Dakota St. 57.....	New Haven 14	Toledo 63.....	Central Conn. 10
OTHER EAST
Coastal Carolina 45.....	Fordham 17	Delaware St. 21.....	Bowie St. 6
Lafayette 13.....	Marist 9	Lehigh 44.....	William & Mary 20
Penn State 27.....	Temple 9	South Florida 28.....	Army 24
West Virginia 52.....	UT Martin 7

CONFERENCE OF N.E.
Curry 41.....	Coast Guard 35
Endicott 49.....	Mulhengen 21
Merchant Marine 63.....	Nichols 14
MIL 70.....	New England College 0
Savte Regina 24.....	Western N.E. 21
Springfield 48.....	Husson 01
WPI 22.....	U. New England 21
MASCAC
Bridgewater St. 34.....	Westfield St. 28
Mass. Maritime 70.....	Dean 01
UMass-Dartmouth 56.....	Fitchburg St. 22
Worcester St. 28.....	Plymouth St. 6
NEWMAC
Norwich 17.....	Castleton 10

Baseball

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE
EAST
	W	L	Pct.	GB
Rochester.....	40	28	588
Scranton/W.-Barre.....	38	28	576	1
Syracuse.....	38	29	567 1½
Worcester.....	36	30	545	3
Durham.....	36	31	537 3½
Charlotte.....	36	32	529	4
Lehigh Valley.....	32	35	478 7½
Buffalo.....	31	35	470	8
Jacksonville.....	29	39	426	11
Norfolk.....	27	38	415 11½
WEST
	W	L	Pct.	GB
Indianapolis.....	39	29	574	—
St. Paul.....	36	32	529	3
Gwinnett.....	36	33	522 3½
Nashville.....	35	32	522 3½
Toledo.....	35	32	522 3½
Columbus.....	34	32	515	4
Omaha.....	31	35	470	7
Memphis.....	31	37	456	8
Iowa.....	28	39	418 10½
Louisville.....	24	44	353	15
SUNDAY'S RESULTS
Worcester 8.....	at Lehigh Valley 7
at Louisville 6.....	Columbus 4
at Durham 7.....	Nashville 2
at Rochester 6.....	Scranton/W.-Barre 4
at Indianapolis 6.....	Omaha 5
at Memphis 3.....	Norfolk 2
at St. Paul 6.....	Syracuse 5
at Iowa 2.....	Toledo 1
SATURDAY'S RESULTS
at Lehigh Valley 7.....	Worcester 5
at Charlotte 10.....	Buffalo 1
Toledo 9.....	at Iowa 7
at Rochester 7.....	Scranton/W.-Barre 6
Syracuse 9.....	at St. Paul 7
at Jacksonville 2.....	Gwinnett 0
at Indianapolis 5.....	Omaha 1
at Durham 2.....	Nashville 1
at Memphis 8.....	Norfolk 1
at Louisville 7.....	Columbus 4
Buffalo.....	at Charlotte (ppd.)
Worcester, 8-7
At Coca-Cola Park, Allentown, Pa.
Worcester	AB	R	H	BI
Capra dh	5	2	2	1
Arias ss	5	4	3	1
Winnier cf	4	2	2	1

Higher ed is at a turning point.

Make sense of it with College Town, our new weekly newsletter.

From AI and enrollment declines to funding cuts and falling public trust, we're unpacking what's changing and what comes next.

Sign up for free at Globe.com/collegetown

College Town

The Boston Globe
Globe Opinion

Remembered

SHARE YOUR MEMORIES ON OUR GUEST BOOK AT BOSTON.COM/OBITUARIES

BY CITY AND TOWN

BRAINTREE HAJJAR, Marianne C.	QUINCY HAJJAR, Marianne C.
BRIGHTON VASILIADES, Iphigenia	READING VASILIADES, Iphigenia
BURLINGTON TOLONEN, Carol	WESTWOOD DOHERTY, Patricia A.
COHASSET HAJJAR, Marianne C.	WILMINGTON TOLONEN, Carol
DANVERS HAJJAR, Marianne C.
DEDHAM DOHERTY, Patricia A.
HINGHAM HAJJAR, Marianne C.
MANSFIELD DOHERTY, Patricia A.
MARBLEHEAD DOHERTY, Patricia A.
NEWTON SHERTER, Sidney Lester
NORFOLK DOHERTY, Patricia A.

DOHERTY, Patricia A.

On September 11, 2026, Patricia A. Doherty “Pat” succumbed to her long health battle. Her resilience and strong-willed determination were no match for villainous Cancer.

Pat was born in Boston, on February 10, 1955, and grew up in Dedham. She was predeceased by her parents, the late Victor E. Doherty, Jr. and Mary M. (née Zazzaretti) Doherty of Dedham

She leaves behind her loving sisters, Catherine M. Doherty of Marblehead and Maura J. Doherty-Mcintosh and her husband, Bruce of Mansfield.

She is also survived by her godchild, Brian Donegan of Norfolk; and her dear Kennedy, Piantedosi, Donegan and O'Brien cousins.

For more than 30 years, Pat, an RN, was employed by “the Faulkner” (Brigham and Women's Faulkner Hospital) in Jamaica Plain. She was highly respected by all her peers and well loved by her patients.

Each summer Pat looked forward to camping in New Hampshire and the warmth of her campfires. Pat was also a voracious reader, an avid Sox and Pat's fan and a food show junkie.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Pat's memory may be made to Westwood Public Library, c/o Friends of Westwood Public Library, 660 High Street, Westwood, MA 02090 or to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, P.O. Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284. A private family service will be held at a later date.

She is also survived by her godchild, Brian Donegan of Norfolk; and her dear Kennedy, Piantedosi, Donegan and O'Brien cousins.

For more than 30 years, Pat, an RN, was employed by “the Faulkner” (Brigham and Women's Faulkner Hospital) in Jamaica Plain. She was highly respected by all her peers and well loved by her patients.

Each summer Pat looked forward to camping in New Hampshire and the warmth of her campfires. Pat was also a voracious reader, an avid Sox and Pat's fan and a food show junkie.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Pat's memory may be made to Westwood Public Library, c/o Friends of Westwood Public Library, 660 High Street, Westwood, MA 02090 or to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, P.O. Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284. A private family service will be held at a later date.

Each summer Pat looked forward to camping in New Hampshire and the warmth of her campfires. Pat was also a voracious reader, an avid Sox and Pat's fan and a food show junkie.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Pat's memory may be made to Westwood Public Library, c/o Friends of Westwood Public Library, 660 High Street, Westwood, MA 02090 or to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, P.O. Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284. A private family service will be held at a later date.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Pat's memory may be made to Westwood Public Library, c/o Friends of Westwood Public Library, 660 High Street, Westwood, MA 02090 or to the Dana Farber Cancer Institute, P.O. Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284. A private family service will be held at a later date.

A private family service will be held at a later date.

Died peacefully, on Monday, September 7, while surrounded by her friends and family. She was 63.

Marianne was born on May 7, 1963, in Quincy, MA. Marianne is lovingly remembered by her sister, Louise Densmore and her husband, David of Braintree; her sister, Susan Hajjar of Hingham; and her brother, Steven Hajjar and his wife, Jean of Cohasset. She was predeceased by her brother, Michael Hajjar of Quincy; and is survived by his wife, Asma. She also leaves six nieces and nephews and eight great-nieces and great-nephews.

Marianne attended the Boston School for the Deaf in Randolph and then graduated from Newton North High School in 1983. She went on to attend The National Technical Institute for the Deaf (NTID) and Gallaudet University.

Marianne will be remembered for her generous heart and the genuine connections she formed throughout her life. She will be deeply missed.

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend the Visiting Hours on Tuesday, September 15, 9AM-12PM, in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., QUINCY. A Funeral Mass will immediately follow at St. Joseph's Church, 550 Washington Street, Quincy, at 1PM. Burial in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be sent to DeafBlind Contact Center, 160 Water Street, Danvers, MA 01923.

To view Marianne's complete obituary, visit www.Keohane.com

Bring your memories to life

Capture them in a book with the help of LifeBook Memoirs. Find out how—call 1-844-940-2719 or visit lifebookmemoirs.com

VASILIADES, Iphigenia “Effie”

Of Brighton, passed away on September 11, 2026. She was born in Omali, Greece, on November 26, 1927, to the late Konstantinos and Panagio (Kokulis) Daiopulos. Beloved wife of the late Theocharis “Harry” Vasilades. Devoted mother of Charles Vasilades, Athena Vasilades Mazerall and her husband, James Mazerall, all of Brighton. Cherished sister of Arthur Daiopulos of Reading; and her late sister-in-law, Mary Daiopulos. Funeral from the Lehman Reen & McNamara Funeral Home, 63 Chestnut Hill Ave. (nr Brighton Courthouse), BRIGHTON, on Thursday, September 17, at 9:30am. Followed by a Funeral Service at the Taxiarchae/Archangels Greek Orthodox Church, 25 Bigelow Ave., Watertown, at 11am. Relatives and friends are kindly invited to attend. Interment, Mt. Auburn Cemetery, Watertown. Visiting Hours on Wednesday, September 16, from 4-8pm, in the funeral home. In lieu of flowers, donations in memory of Effie, may be made to The American Friends of the Blind in Greece, c/o Cambridge and Eastern Bank, 143 Daniel Street Portsmouth, NH 03801. For directions and guestbook, please visit www.lehmanreen.com

ST. MICHAEL CEMETERY & CREMATORY

500 Canterbury St. The Respectful Way
Boston, MA 02131 617-524-1036

www.stmichaelcemetery.com

CANNIFF MONUMENT
(617) 323-3690

800-439-3690 • 617-876-9110

531 Cummings Highway, Roslindale
583 Mt. Auburn Street, Cambridge

MON-FRI 9-9; SAT 9-5, SUNDAY 12-5

Life Book memoirs

Bring your cherished memories to life

Capture them in a book for your loved ones

As the world’s leading private memoir service, we have enabled thousands of people to read the life stories of their loved ones. We will listen to your stories in face-to-face interviews and turn them into a handcrafted, heirloom-quality book—a unique family treasure to be shared by generations to come. Now is the time to tell your story.

Find out how—call us on 1-844-940-2719
lifebookmemoirs.com

Obituaries

Jonathan Cooper, famed violin maker, 76

By Clay Risen
NEW YORK TIMES

Jonathan Cooper, a luthier who crafted violins of such supple tone and exquisite range that they allowed players to bridge the gap between classical and American fiddle instrumentation, making him a favorite of musicians like Mark O'Connor and Alison Krauss, died Sept. 7 in Scarborough, Maine. He was 76.

His brother, journalist Matthew Cooper, said the death, in a hospice center, was from sepsis.

Jonathan Cooper, who possessed an almost preternatural understanding of woods, varnishes and strings, was one of only about 100 expert violin makers in the United States. After spending several years studying in Cremona, Italy, the birthplace of the modern violin, he opened a shop in Portland, Maine, where he worked for over 40 years.

He made every instrument from scratch. After selecting his woods, often sourcing his spruce and maple from specific stands of trees, he carved each piece by hand. He preferred traditional tools and natural varnishes, which he kept neatly organized in his one-man workspace.

It took him about a month to make each violin, typically customized for each client. A Cooper violin cost about $15,000, including free maintenance and repairs.

Many violinists have different instruments designed for different types of playing. Customers valued Mr. Cooper's instruments for their immense tonal range, allowing them to use a single violin across a variety of musical styles — European classical, Cajun, Appalachian folk.

He customized his instruments based on extensive conversations with his clients, drawing on their styles of play, their travel routines and whether they used amplified sound.

“If I make a violin, I start off with a concept of the instrument, and I make every part of it from beginning to end, and I present it to the musician, I hear the person play it, I know that violin,” he told Maine Public, the public media network, in 2015.

Among his admirers was O'Connor, a Grammy Award-winning artist known for spanning Old and New World traditions. For years, he played a violin made in 1830 by legendary French luthier Jean-Baptiste Vuillaume, but he eventually set it aside in favor of one of Mr. Cooper's instruments, which he found more versatile — and just as well made.

“I was looking for a unique sound that would help me bridge what I was doing musically, between the worlds of American string playing and jazz and classical music itself,” O'Connor said in an interview. “Here was a man that was really kind of excited to do with an instrument what I wanted to do with music.”

After Mr. Cooper learned that Daniel Pearl, an American journalist who was murdered by terrorists in Pakistan in 2002, was an amateur fiddler, he set out to design and build a quartet of string instruments — two violins, a viola and a cello — in his honor.

DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF/FILE

Mr. Cooper took about a month to make each violin, and the $15,000 price tag included free maintenance and repairs.

Every year, four students from a music camp run by O'Connor receive one of the instruments to play for a year. Many of the recipients have gone on to successful professional careers.

“These young people carry the message that love fights hatred through music-making and understanding that Daniel Pearl's family want him remembered for,” O'Connor said.

Mr. Cooper was not just an accomplished violin maker; he relished the opportunity to repair them.

After Krauss, a Grammy-winning fiddle player, accidentally dropped her prized violin and split it nearly in two, she asked a luthier in Nashville, Tenn., to repair it. He demurred, saying it was too hard a job, but he recommended she take it to Cooper.

It took him months of work, but he returned it to her in perfect condition.

“My fiddle was in shards,” she said in an interview. “When I got it back, I couldn’t believe it.”

Jonathan Gelula Cooper was born on May 17, 1950, in Boston, where his father, Daniel, was completing a doctorate in nuclear physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and his mother, Bette (Gelula) Cooper, was an artist. They soon relocated to Morristown, N.J., for his father's job at Bell Labs.

He taught himself to play guitar as a teenager and played in bands around suburban New Jersey. In 1969, he enrolled in the New Division, an experimental program at Nasson College, now closed, in Maine. The New Division shuttered in 1970, and Cooper left higher education.

In 1971, he moved to Francoonia, N.H., a small town in the middle of the state, where he played in the Con Fullam Band, a bluegrass ensemble. Though never a breakout success, the band gained a regional following and, in 1973, was one of the first acts to perform at CBGB in New York City.

Mr. Cooper did not encounter the violin until he was in his early 20s, when one of his bandmates brought one to practice. He tried it out and was immediately taken with it.

“There's my life before that day, and my life after that day,” he told Strings magazine in 2021, “because I woke up in the morning, went downtown to a thrift store where I'd seen a violin for sale, bought it for like $7, and pretty much started teaching myself how to play it.”

While on tour in Europe with a different band, he took a side trip to Cremona, Italy, to observe traditional luthiers. Watching them in action, he decided to make the craft his life's work — he quit the band and stayed in Cremona for three years.

Mr. Cooper's first marriage, to Leanne Daniels, ended in divorce. Besides his brother, he is survived by his wife, Liz Bieber; two sons, Amos and Seth, with his first wife; another son, Wyatt, with his second wife; and a sister, Ellen Cooper.

Admirers often characterized Mr. Cooper as an American Stradivari, the Italian master, a comparison he was too modest to accept in full, though he said he hoped that, like those of Stradivari, his instruments would also still be in use centuries after his death.

“When I make a violin, I'm pretty confident that, unless it's really heavily damaged along the way, it's going to be here 300 years from now,” he told Strings. “I really like that. Long, long after I'm dead, some of my violins will still be around, making music and, hopefully, you know, still making people happy.”

ANDREW MEDICHINI/ASSOCIATED PRESS

ACTIVIST HONORED — A woman touched the casket of Emma Bonino, who rose to political prominence in the 1970s campaigning to legalize abortion in heavily Roman Catholic Italy, as her body lay in state in Rome's City Hall on Sunday.

The Boston Globe

Globe Summit

BUILT TO LAST

November 17 & 18 | House of Blues & Virtual

Join The Boston Globe for its 6th annual flagship event bringing together Greater Boston's leaders and innovators to ignite collaboration, inspire ideas and shape the future of industries and communities in our area.

On stage this November

Jake Auchincloss
Congressman,
Massachusetts 4th District

Dr. Kiame Mahaniah
Health & Human Services
Secretary, MA

Danny Meyer
Founder, Union Square
Hospitality Group; Author,
What Could Possibly Go Right?

And more!

Register now and save on early bird tickets while supplies last.

REGISTER NOW

Scan the QR code or visit Globe.com/summit

SPONSORED BY

Developers seek to build nearly 2,000 units in Southie

Could a grocery store come to Dorchester and Old Colony avenues?

By Catherine Carlock
GLOBE STAFF

A development team behind one of New York’s tallest residential skyscrapers intends to build 1,945 homes on a prime South Boston site — property where Southie native Andrew J. Collins long dreamed of building.

New York-based J.T. Magen & Co. and Extell Development in March successfully bid $75 million at a public foreclosure auction — held on St. Patrick’s Day — to buy a collection of industrial property along Dorchester Avenue where it splits from Old Colony Avenue. The site, located midway between the Broadway and Andrew MBTA Red Line stations, is at the heart of a decade-old city plan that called for a corridor of dense, tall development in what is now a low-slung industrial zone.

Now the group has kicked off the city’s formal development-review process, with local partner Thomas O’Brien of The HYM Investment Group this month alerting Boston officials of the plan to build 1.8 million square feet of residential and retail space at 314-420 Dorchester Ave. In terms of space, that’s just a tad larger than the former John Hancock tower in the Back Bay, though the Southie project will be developed as multiple buildings.

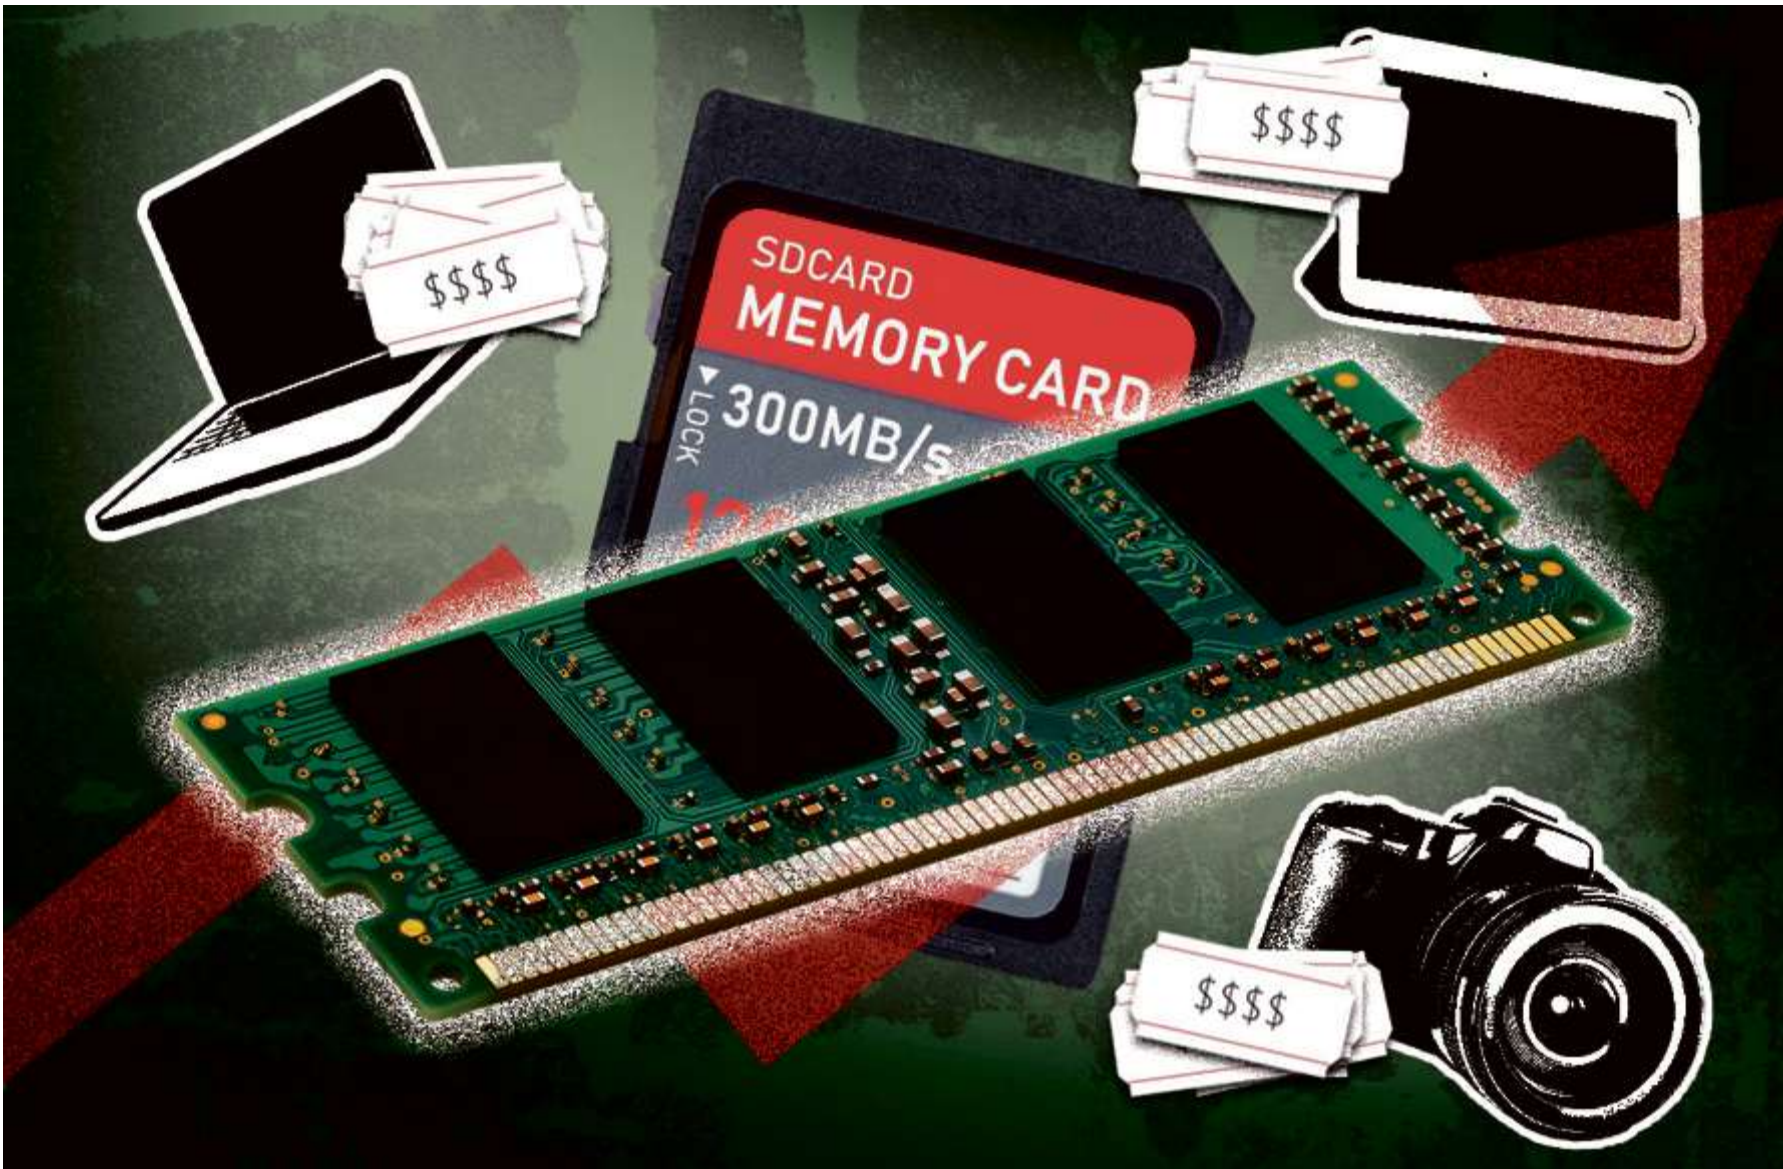

SOUTHIE, Page D2

SUZANNE KREITER/GLOBE STAFF

At a foreclosure auction in March, New York development groups bid $75 million for a six-acre stretch of mostly vacant industrial property along Dorchester Avenue in South Boston.

A tough assignment

ALLY RZESA/GLOBE STAFF; ADOBE

Why back-to-school computer shopping costs more this year

By Karyna Cheung
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

This back-to-school season, new technology is taking a bigger chunk out of people’s budgets than before.

Roughly a third of K-12 shopping budgets and a quarter of college spending are going toward electronics this year, the National Retail Federation reports. Apple announced in June that prices for MacBooks and iPads are increasing anywhere from $100 to almost $900, and the company recently disclosed $100 hikes on older phone models compared with last year.

As tech has integrated into college classrooms, retailers and schools alike are dealing with these high prices across the board. Schools say laptops are an essential investment and retailers have said most customers feel the same. It’s a necessary expense for most students, many of whom use a device for nearly every class. But not everyone can afford the new prices, and costs aren’t projected to go down anytime soon.

DRAM chips, more specifically Dynamic Random-Access Memory, are the essential component in nearly every consumer device that has a digital memory, including phones, PCs, and laptops. Chip manufacturers are struggling because AI servers and data centers require massive amounts of memory to function, which is driving up costs. AI server memory prices are expected to quadruple by year-end, accounting and consulting firm Deloitte reports.

Retailers in the Boston area, like Hunt’s Photo & Video and Cambridge computer hardware store Micro Center, are feeling the squeeze.

Like computers and laptops, photographers need SD memory cards to store their work. At Hunt’s, memory card prices have doubled in some cases. A 128 gigabyte card that cost $39.99 at the start of 2023 goes for $79.99 today when it’s on sale, said Scott Levine,

TECH COSTS, Page D2

DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF

Brigham and Women’s own evaluation of the benefits of AI in the emergency room showed that it falls far short of the techno-optimist vision of the technology generating more efficiency.

STAT

Can AI fix health care?

In the chaos of emergency rooms, the technology comes up short

By Brittany Trang
STAT

The building that houses the Brigham and Women’s Hospital emergency department opened in 2022. But by 2025, it was already too small. One early September evening, the emergency room had 59 patients — 152, if you counted everyone in the waiting room.

“In terms of rooms for acute care, we have 61,” said Christopher Baugh, an emergency physician at the hospital. “You can’t see 152 patients in 61 rooms.” Patient beds lined every possible area, with a full circle of beds surrounding the staff workstations in the center of the bay. Figurines of “Star Wars” characters R2D2 and C3PO peered over beds 80H and 81H — where “H” stands for “hallway.”

To some, this may look like a scene from another country, Baugh said. But to him, it’s just Thursday.

Baugh uses artificial intelligence, in the form of an ambient scribe, to assist in navigating the busy evening as he attends patients desperately waiting for help. Still, the technology is far from the panacea that developers claim it can be for what ails American health care.

The CEOs of some of the biggest AI companies have predicted the technology will “eliminate most cancer” and “improve treatment of most other ailments,” or perhaps “cure all disease” within the next 10 years. But nowhere better illustrates the challenge facing the technology than an emergency department. Brigham and Women’s own evaluation of the benefits of AI in the emergency room shows that it falls far short of the

EMERGENCY ROOMS, Page D3

TALKING POINTS

LAYOFFS

ORACLE CORP. TO SPEND ADDITIONAL $700 MILLION FOR JOB CUTS

Oracle Corp. increased the scale of its planned job cuts while the company grapples with a cash crunch tied to development of large-scale data centers for artificial intelligence work. The company also disclosed a new share trading program for Chairman Larry Ellison, who owns about 40 percent of Oracle's stock. The plan, which was adopted June 22, permits Ellison to sell 50 million shares through Oct. 24, the company said in a regulatory filing. The shares closed June 22 at $175.07 — a value of $8.75 billion for 50 million shares — and have declined 16 percent since then through Friday's close. Ellison has been a major financial backer of his son David's takeover last year of Paramount Global and a $110 billion bid by David Ellison's Paramount Skydance Corp. for Warner Bros. Discovery Inc. The cost of Oracle's job cuts, which the company lists as "2026 Restructuring Plan," is now estimated at about $2.8 billion, largely made up of severance payments to fired employees, according to the filing. Oracle has already accrued about $2.1 billion in costs tied to the plan, and the $700 million increase reflects "additional actions that we expect to take," the company said. Oracle is under financial pressure because of an expensive build-out of AI data centers for customers like OpenAI. Earlier this year, it began cutting thousands of jobs as part of efforts to save cash. Business Insider reported last month that the company was drawing up plans for another round of cuts. During a call with analysts Thursday, chief financial officer Hilary Maxson called out "simplification and efficiency actions" as helping the company reduce costs and protect margins. As of the end of May, the company had about 49,000 US workers while about 92,000 were employed internationally. That's a decrease of 21,000 workers from a year earlier. — BLOOMBERG NEWS

FEDERAL RESERVE

TRUMP PUSHES FED TO LOWER RATES DESPITE PRESSURE TO RAISE THEM

President Trump reiterated that the US should have the lowest interest rates in the world even as his handpicked chair for the Federal Reserve, Kevin Warsh, faces renewed pressure to raise borrowing costs. "We should be paying — the United States is so strong — we should be paying the lowest interest rate in the world, regardless of their formulas," Trump told reporters Sunday in Ireland, where he is attending the Irish Open. Asked if he expected the central bank to raise rates at its next meeting, Trump said: "I don't know." Trump's comments follow data released Friday showing US consumer prices rose more than expected in August. The Fed is likely to view those numbers as pushing it toward the first rate increase in three years. The inflation data led traders to boost expectations for a Fed hike, with an 86 percent chance of a move in September and two increases priced in by the end of the year. The US economy faces higher energy prices with the US war on Iran now in its seventh month, and Trump's tariff policies have also complicated the picture for the Fed's inflation target. Trump repeatedly assailed former Fed chief Jerome Powell for his unwillingness to lower borrowing costs more aggressively. While Warsh hasn't faced the same pressure after taking over the central bank's top post, Trump has signaled continuing frustration with the Fed's policy stance. Even as he has vented his frustration with the Fed, he's suggested that Warsh's hands may be tied by what the president has called a "very political" board of governors. Earlier in September, Trump also floated cutting off trade with certain economies that the US has a trade deficit with if the central bank did not lower borrowing costs, but it was unclear how the threat would help ease rates. "I know more about formulas than anybody, and with the best credit in the world, we make other countries rich. We could turn that off in two minutes," Trump said Sunday. Voters have given Trump poor marks on both the war and his handling of the economy. Concerns over higher costs of living that touch on energy, housing, health care, and groceries are a top issue for voters ahead of November's midterm elections that threaten to break Republicans' control of Congress. — BLOOMBERG NEWS

BOX OFFICE

'PRACTICAL MAGIC 2' CONJURES A NO. 1 DEBUT WITH $30M

"Practical Magic 2" notched a box-office victory this weekend, opening atop the North American charts nearly three decades after its predecessor grew from a modest theatrical performer into a cult favorite. The Warner Bros. sequel starring Sandra Bullock and Nicole Kidman earned an estimated $30 million from 4,146 theaters, according to estimates Sunday from Rentrak. The film knocked "Spider-Man: Brand New Day" out of the top spot after the superhero blockbuster led the domestic box office for six consecutive weekends. The debut landed at the low end of Warner Bros.' projected range of $30 million to $35 million. The Susanne Bier-directed film carries a reported $75 million production budget. "Practical Magic 2" reunites Bullock and Kidman as sisters Sally and Gillian Owens, members of a family of witches whose love lives have long been haunted by an ancestral curse. The sequel finds them trying to end the curse for good and introduces a younger generation of the Owens family, played by Joey King and Maisie Williams. Lee Pace also joins the cast. The film is adapted from the work of author Alice Hoffman and arrives 28 years after the original "Practical Magic." The 1998 film topped out at $46 million during its initial domestic run but gradually developed a devoted following through home viewing, streaming services, and social media. The latest film received two out of four stars from The Associated Press, whose review said the sequel abandons some of the campy fun that helped the original find an unlikely second life, but is buoyed by the strong performances and chemistry of Bullock and Kidman. — ASSOCIATED PRESS

ROCKLAND TRUST BANK

Where Each Relationship Matters®

Member FDIC

'The idea is to build as fast as possible'

►SOUTHIE

Continued from Page D1

Collins, the identical twin brother of state Senator Nick Collins, spent years cobbling together multiple parcels along the Dot. Ave. corridor and pitching a life-science campus there. Despite persuading a number of investors to funnel money toward a project, Andrew Collins never got a development off the ground. Collins has faced a number of lawsuits in state and federal court from investors claiming he owes them around $150 million.

The J.T. Magen, Extell, and HYM development is one of the largest new housing projects proposed in Boston in years. The group envisions a collection of four 200-foot residential buildings with about 45,000 square feet of ground-floor retail, and is exploring the potential to bring a grocery store to the site.

None of the buildings would rise higher than 200 feet, O'Brien said. At that height, the buildings would be roughly 18 stories. The project would have underground parking, which costs about $350,000 per space to build.

O'Brien, who last year briefly considered challenging Mayor Michelle Wu's reelection, declined to share an estimated total development cost. However, new high-rise residential construction in Boston these days can cost more than $1 million per unit to build. The development team hopes to have all permits in hand by early next year.

A rendering from the 2016 Plan: South Boston Dorchester Avenue showing the conceptual buildout of the district.

"The idea is to build as fast as possible," O'Brien said. "Not much housing is being built right now. ... You'd be delivering those units into a market that has not had much new product, and that's a really important consideration."

Residences in downtown.

"These are two groups who are very familiar with Boston, and they understand the basic dynamics of what makes our city great," O'Brien said.

As for the drive-through Dunkin' located at 75 Old Colony Ave. in the center of the site, the Extell, J.T. Magen, and HYM teams intend for it to "stay for as long as possible," O'Brien said.

Catherine Carlock can be reached at catherine.carlock@globe.com.

Lack of resources driving up costs for chip manufacturers

►TECH COSTS

Continued from Page D1

manager of Hunt's flagship store in Melrose.

The increases are driven by a lack of resources at every level, he said. Memory chip manufacturers are supplying more to AI data centers, meaning there's less for stores and then consumers. Raw material costs are growing as well, and Hunt's has to pay more on a smaller supply for their stores. Many of their memory storage offerings are on back order.

"It's this vacuum of no inventory from the manufacturers," Levine said. "And when they do have it available, the prices are exorbitant."

At Micro Center, sales manager Juan Cabrera says computer prices are up anywhere from $50 to $300.

But even with huge price jumps, both Cabrera and Levine say sales haven't shifted much. Photographers still need cards to store their work, and people still need computers, which have become more and more central to schooling.

"If they need the tech, they need to keep up with the tech," Cabrera said.

Not everyone can afford a brand new computer, though, and gaps in access still persist for low-income students and families. Nonprofits that provide computer equipment at low or no cost, like Computers 4 People, are trying to fill that gap.

Two first-grade students worked together on a laptop assignment in a dual language classroom at Alfred J. Gomes Elementary School in New Bedford.

Computers 4 People partners with other nonprofits in New Jersey, New York City, and Massachusetts to give free computers and laptops to eligible applicants. Established in 2019 by Babson College alumnus Dylan Zajac, Computers 4 People also has a low-cost internet service that helps fund electronics refurbishments.

Zajac's organization isn't directly affected by memory chip shortages — most of their stock is old hardware from corporate partners, including Boston-based insurance company John Hancock. But the chip shortage and a third of their tech-access nonprofit partners shutting down because of federal funding cuts mean there's more demand.

Between 2024 and 2025, Computers 4 People had nearly 17,000 applications, far more than Zajac had ever seen. He said he expects numbers to be even higher by the end of this year against their goal of giving away 4,200 devices. A large subsection of applicants cite education access to explain their computer needs.

"Demand is just so unbelievably high," Zajac said. "Everyone that's applying, they can't afford [a computer] and now it's more difficult to afford it."

Colleges, too, are feeling the squeeze.

At Massachusetts Bay Community College, the number of students asking for laptops for the semester through the school's loaner program has increased in recent years. There was a large jump between fall 2024 and spring 2025, from 166 laptops loaned to 292, and this past spring the school hit the program's capacity of 300. There aren't current plans to increase the supply; things are getting more expensive "across the board" for community colleges, MassBay spokesperson Jeremy Solomon said.

"If we had more, we could loan more," Solomon said. "But it's budget restricted."

Other schools have the capability to spend. Bowdoin College in Maine launched a robust technology access initiative that began during the pandemic. With campus shut down and classes going online, Bowdoin started sending iPads to students to "ensure connectivity," said Claudia Marroquin, Bowdoin admissions and student aid dean. That offer then evolved into the Digital Excellence Commitment in 2023, in which the school provides a MacBook, iPad Mini, and Apple pencil free to every student, to keep even after graduation.

With Apple's current retail prices, it's a package that costs $2,727 per student before tax. While Bowdoin receives a bulk discount, the freshman class is larger than normal this fall (more than 550 students), which means costs have gone up further.

"We will continue to be committed to the process," Marroquin said. "It certainly does take a lot of planning ... to ensure that we can continue to meet the promise we've made to students."

The situation is looking grim up the chain. The world's major chip manufacturers have tripled spending on memory since the AI boom began in 2024, but there won't be a new supply of chips or storage until 2029 at the earliest, Deloitte reports.

It seems everyone will continue paying the price for new devices in the coming years.

Karyna Cheung can be reached at karyna.cheung@globe.com.

The Boston
Globe

Some people have bedroom eyes; you're a plugger if you have recliner eyes.

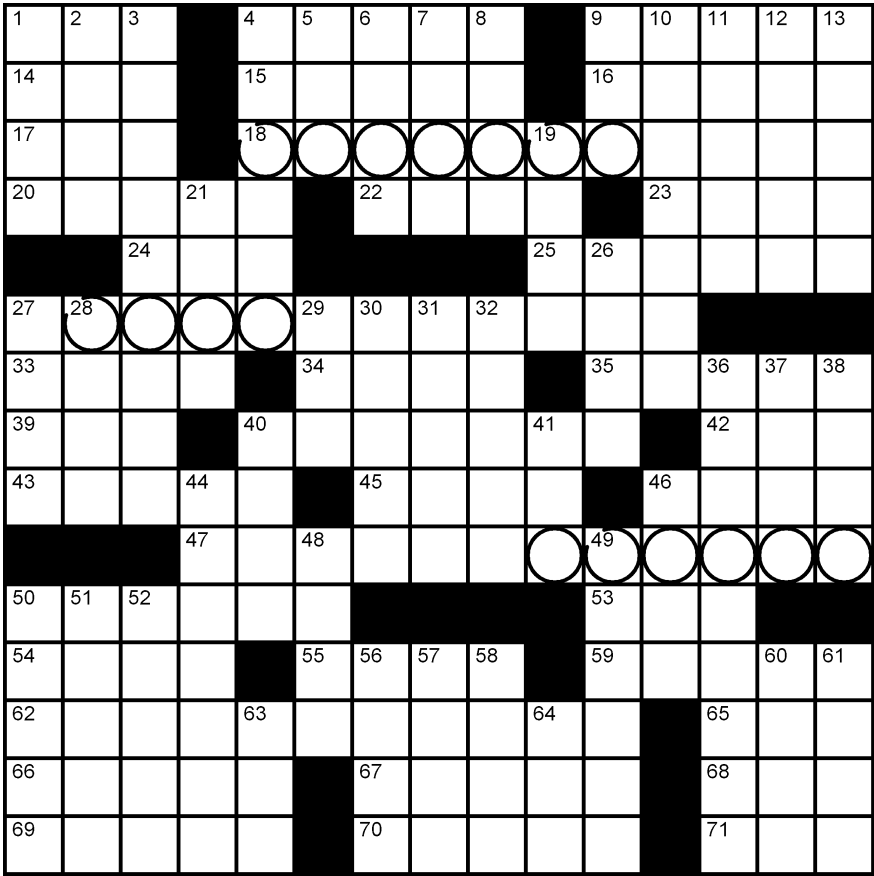

UNIVERSAL CROSSWORD PUZZLE

PRODUCE RESULTS BY CHRIS GROSS | EDITED BY DAVID STEINBERG

- ACROSS
- 1 It's sold at 66-Across stations
- 4 Aggressive poker bet
- 9 Veranda, for one
- 14 One calling you out, perhaps?
- 15 Tripod cousin
- 16 State with a panhandle
- 17 On behalf of
- 18 Popular shared snack (In this answer, unscramble letters 1-7)
- 20 Artist Kahlo
- 22 Grab with a fork
- 23 Hayride bundle
- 24 Zero
- 25 Advisory groups
- 27 Arrive onshore (... letters 2-5)
- 33 Group that's scary to leave
- 34 Seaweed in Sapporo
- 35 Aggressive poker bet
- 39 Gobbled down
- 40 Word that intensifies "awesome"
- 42 Rage
- 43 Bar mitzvah reading
- 45 Play charades
- 46 Way off
- 47 Pass rusher, at times (... letters 7-12)
- 50 ____ tikka masala
- 53 Tiny bit of energy
- 54 Linux forerunner
- 55 Grains in raisiny cookies
- 59 Defeats soundly
- 62 Grocery item sold in ready-to-use bags, and a theme hint

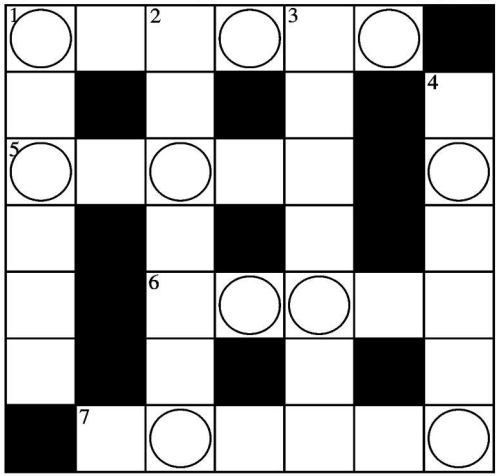

- 65 "So that's it!"
- 66 See 1-Across
- 67 Growth in aquariums
- 68 Title for Minister Tim Lovejoy, Jr. on "The Simpsons": Abbr.
- 69 Pick up on
- 70 Spills the beans
- 71 Henna, e.g.
- DOWN
- 1 Nonsense
- 2 Love, in Lima
- 3 Lawn irrigator
- 4 Think back to
- 5 "How relaxing!"
- 6 Egyptian goddess of magic
- 7 Aug. follower
- 8 Animated princess voiced by Idina
- 9 Wrestler's goal
- 10 Eccentric
- 11 Navigational aid
- 12 Word after "only" or "flower"
- 13 Is optimistic
- 19 Band whose name is a rhyme scheme
- 21 Reducing regimen
- 26 Antiaging cream brand
- 27 Aspiring doc's exam
- 28 Lead-in to "correct" or "mobile"
- 29 Year, in Yucatan
- 30 Phrase of denial
- 31 Deplete, as savings
- 32 They're shown at Sundance
- 36 Pool job for a teenager

- 37 One of OPEC's founding members
- 38 Intellectual introvert, typically
- 40 You, in hymns
- 41 Hula hoop?
- 44 Marketing VIPs
- 46 Prefix with "space"
- 48 Throat annoyance
- 49 Biblical excerpts
- 50 Large American felines
- 51 "Dragon Ball Z" genre
- 52 Actress Cynthia who shares a surname with a '60s-'70s president
- 56 Tunisian or Yemeni
- 57 Tattle
- 58 Dreamcast console maker
- 60 Nonbinary pronoun
- 61 Rescue
- 63 Stag's mate
- 64 Capture

JUMBLE CROSSWORDS™

by David L. Hoyt 9-14-26

CLUE ACROSS ANSWER

1. Spicy root
5. Infuse with
6. Lacking skill
7. Figure ____

CLUE DOWN ANSWER

1. New ____
2. Old golf club
3. Fundamental part
4. Rainwater channel

CLUE: When he was a teenager, Ben Affleck appeared in a ____ TV commercial.

BONUS

How to play

Complete the crossword puzzle by looking at the clues and unscrambling the answers. When the puzzle is complete, unscramble the circled letters to solve the BONUS.

©2026 Tribune Content Agency, LLC & Hoyt Designs. All Rights Reserved.

Send comments to DLHoyt@HoytInteractiveMedia.com

Boston's forecast

TODAY

6 A.M. NOON 6 P.M.

HIGH 74-79

LOW 53-58

tonight. Winds NNW 7-14 mph.

A shower early this morning; otherwise, mostly sunny. Winds NW 10-20 mph. Clear

TUESDAY

6 A.M. NOON 6 P.M.

HIGH 65-70

LOW 56-61

Partly cloudy at night. Winds S 6-12 mph.

Sun in the morning followed by sun and areas of high clouds. Winds ENE 7-14 mph.

WEDNESDAY

6 A.M. NOON 6 P.M.

HIGH 75-80

LOW 62-67

WSW 4-8 mph.

Sunny to partly cloudy and beautiful. Winds SW 7-14 mph. Partly cloudy at night. Winds

THURSDAY

6 A.M. NOON 6 P.M.

HIGH 74-79

LOW 62-67

SW 6-12 mph.

Mostly cloudy. Winds E 6-12 mph. Mostly cloudy at night. Winds

FRIDAY

6 A.M. NOON 6 P.M.

HIGH 69-74

LOW 57-62

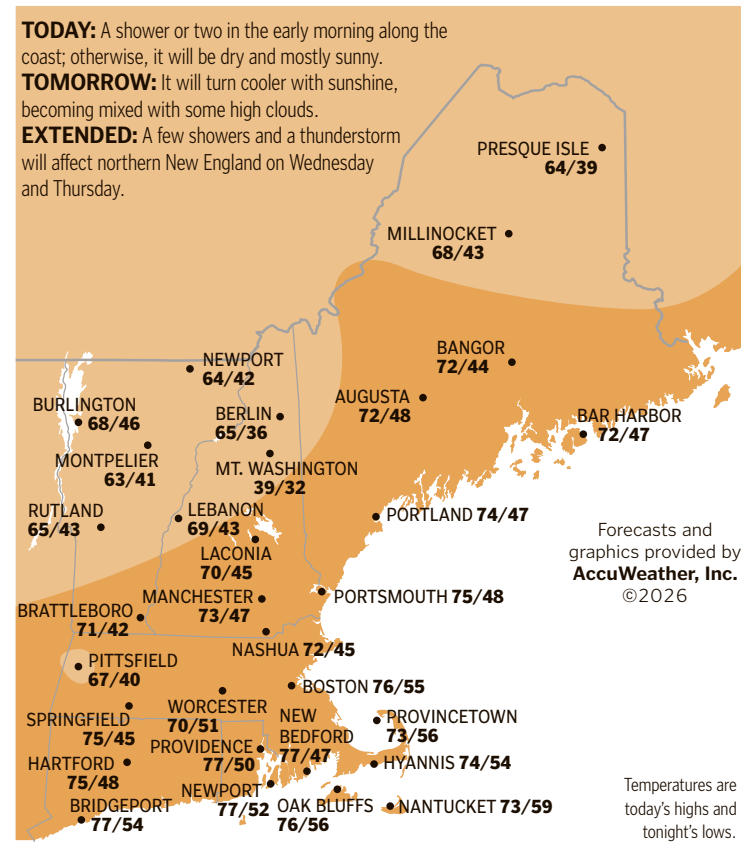

Winds NNW 7-14 mph.

Mostly sunny, pleasant and less humid. Winds NNW 6-12 mph. Partly cloudy at night. Winds NNW 7-14 mph.

AccuWeather.

Proven Superior Accuracy™ Visit AccuWeather.com

New England

Cities

● Travel delays possible, C Clouds, F Fog, H Haze, I Ice, Pc Partly Cloudy, R Rain, Sh Showers, S Sun, Sn Snow, Fl Flurries, T Thunderstorms, W Windy
Today Tomorrow					Today Tomorrow					Today Tomorrow
Atlanta	94/74	S	90/72	Pc	Los Angeles	85/67	Pc	83/67	Pc	Seattle	67/53	Sh	66/52	Pc
Atlantic City	78/53	S	74/54	Pc	● Miami	92/80	Sh	90/79	T	Washington	81/59	S	79/64	Pc
Charlotte	93/69	Pc	85/65	Pc	● New Orleans	92/76	T	93/79	T	Beijing	82/55	S	86/60	Pc
Chicago	73/66	Pc	80/66	T	New York City	74/56	S	72/62	S	Cancun	93/77	Pc	93/76	Sh
Dallas	100/80	S	99/80	T	Philadelphia	77/57	S	78/62	Pc	● Mexico City	74/56	R	78/54	R
● Denver	87/52	T	72/53	T	● Phoenix	102/81	T	101/82	T	Montreal	66/47	S	68/60	C
Detroit	70/58	S	81/66	T	Salt Lake City	73/53	S	82/64	S	Toronto	68/57	Pc	72/65	T
● Fort Myers	91/77	T	92/74	T	San Francisco	76/58	S	72/57	Pc	Vancouver	63/55	Pc	67/52	S

HOROSCOPES

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Monday, Sept. 14, 2026: You are steadfast, organized, efficient, and energetic. You take charge quickly with a sharp eye. This is a year of service for you, perhaps service to family. Take care of yourself so that you can be a resource to those who turn to you for guidance, comfort, and courage.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be pleased with how much you accomplish today! This is because your ruler Mars is boosting the Sun while it is traveling through your House of Employment. You'll be the perfect example of Colonel Saito's motto: "Be happy in your work!" Tonight: Check your finances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your choices are wide open today. You can work in a productive way. Or you can use this same driving energy to explore sports events, fun activities with kids, the arts, the entertainment world, or the hospitality industry. Relations with partners are supportive. Tonight: Listen and co-operate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have lots of energy to make home improvements today. You also might be more involved with a parent than usual. Meanwhile, relations with co-workers are wonderful! Accept someone's help. A work-related romance might be percolating. Tonight: Get better organized.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Enjoy a short trip. Take care of appointments and errands. Explore your ability to market, talk, or teach. These are all excellent choices for you today. Oh yes, you're bright-eyed and bushy-tailed! You're active, confident, and keen to express yourself. People will listen. Tonight: Socialize!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have strong moneymaking ideas, plus the energy to make money. You might do this in a public way or quietly behind the scenes. This is also an excellent day to entertain at home, because relations with family members (especially females) are loving. Tonight: Relax at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a positive day! The Sun is in your sign getting a boost from fiery Mars, while the Moon is lined up with Venus in your House of Communications. You're in the right place, at the right time, saying the right thing to the right person. A winning day! Tonight: A lively discussion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Today you might choose to play things low-key and work behind the scenes. Nevertheless, you'll accomplish a lot! With Mercury in your sign, you're keen to express your ideas to others. Meanwhile, shopping for beautiful things will appeal, especially checking out art and gorgeous fabrics and clothes. Tonight: Check your belongings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Today the Moon is lined up with fair Venus in your sign, which is a winning combination! You're charming with everyone. This is why everyone wants to be in your company. Your charisma will convince people to jump on your bandwagon. Tonight: You win!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You make a strong impression on everyone today because the Sun is at the top of your chart casting you in a flattering spotlight, while Mars amplifies this energy, making you virtually shine in the eyes of others! Use this to your advantage! Tonight: Enjoy time alone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Grab every chance to travel today or do something to expand your horizons. You have a strong urge to do so. Enjoy learning through film, study, or talking to people from different backgrounds. You'll also get a kick out of the stimulation of a new place, anything different. Romance with a friend might begin. Tonight: Be friendly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Discussions about shared property, taxes, debt, and insurance issues will be lively today. And because both the Moon and Venus are lined up at the top of your chart, not only will you be high-viz, it's likely these discussions will go in your favor. And everyone will know it. Tonight: You're admired.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You might attract someone to you today who is forthright and direct. Because another influence encourages romance with someone "different," this could signal some kind of attraction for you. However, it will also encourage fun socializing and physical activity. Tonight: Explore and learn something new.

© 2026 King Features Syndicate Inc.

SUDOKU

		4		7			5
					1		7
		7	2		6	4
	7	9	1				6
		1	5		9	3
4					8	9	5
		3	9		5	8
	1		3
8				1		5

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3X3 box contains the digits 1 through 9. Puzzle difficulty levels: Easy on Monday and Tuesday, more difficult on Wednesday and Thursday, most difficult on Friday and Saturday. Tips and computer program at www.sudoku.com.

DAILY BRIDGE CLUB

BY FRANK STEWART

South dealer — N-S vulnerable

North

♠ K 8 3
♥ A 10 5
♦ A Q 9 4 3
♣ K Q

West

♠ J 10 9 7 4
♥ Q 8 4
♦ 6
♣ 8 7 5 2

East

♠ 6 5 2
♥ 9 6 2
♦ K 10 8 7
♣ 9 6 3

South

♠ A Q
♥ K J 7 3
♦ J 5 2
♣ A J 10 4

South

1 NT

West

Pass

North

6 NT

East

All Pass

Opening lead — ♠ J

Cy the Cynic says nothing is wrong with gluttony as long as you don't overdo it.

In my club's penny game, Cy was North, and South played at 6NT. He won the first spade with the ace and lusted after an overtrick by leading a diamond to dummy's queen. If West had happened to hold K-6, South would have had 14 tricks. But East took the king and returned a spade, and when South won and cashed his jack of diamonds, West threw a spade. Then South had to locate the queen of hearts to make the slam. He chose to finesse against East — and flashed some anger when West produced the queen.

I don't envy Cy his choice of partners. South's play was slothful as well as greedy. South is at risk only if East's diamonds are K-10-x-x, so South should lead to the ace at Trick Two and return the three. East must play low, and the jack wins.

When West discards, South leads a heart to the ace and lets the ten ride. He is sure of 12 tricks no matter which defender has the queen.

DAILY QUESTION You hold: ♠ A Q ♥ K J 7 3 ♦ J 5 2 ♣ A J 10 4. Both sides vulnerable. The dealer, at your right, opens one diamond. What do you say?

ANSWER: This situation is miserable. You have 16 high-card points but no satisfactory call. If you pass, you may miss a game, but you would prefer better spade support to double for takeout and a sure diamond trick to overcall 1NT. I would pass and hope for a convenient chance to act later. Expert opinions would vary.

ZIPPY "Stages vs. Stooges" by Bill Griffith

BIZARRO by Wayno & Piraro

MOTHER GOOSE & GRIMM by Mike Peters

ADAM@HOME by Rob Harrell

ROSE IS ROSE by Pat Brady & Don Wimmer

Today's Crossword Solution

E	Y	D		S	B	V	T	B		E	S	N	E	S
A	E	R		E	V	G	T	V		O	C	O	W	V
V	H	V		S	N	E	E	R	G	D	E	X	I	N
S	I	N	O	R		S	I	V	O		X	I	N
		G	R	E				R	E	E	N	V	P
D	N	E	E	A	I	S	N	E	E	F	E	D
R	V	F	A		E	M	I	W	H	V	R	O	I
E	R	I		Y	T	T	V	L	O	T	E	J	V
N	I	T	T	V		I	R	O	N		T	T	U	C
			T	T	V	A	D	F	N	A	T	K	V	W
S	D	R	V	O	B					T	I	N
L	T	V	B	A	B	A	T	S	V	A	D	I	R	F
P	I	D	D	N	A	S	P	I	H	O		R	O	F
O	H	V	D	I		L	E	S	A	E		P	M	U
H	C	R	O	P		S	E	I	R	A	S		G	A

Today's Sudoku Solution

8	6	9	7	1	9	2	4	8
4	9	7	2	8	3	5	1	6
2	1	8	5	4	6	3	9	7
1	5	6	8	2	7	9	3	4
7	4	3	6	9	5	1	8	2
9	8	2	4	3	1	6	7	5
8	3	4	9	6	2	7	5	1
6	7	9	1	5	4	8	2	3
5	2	1	3	7	8	4	6	9

TV CRITIC'S CORNER

BY LISA WEIDENFELD

This week: An Agatha Christie adaptation, Emmys, Lizzie Borden, and so much more

The summer can be a bit of a dry period for new shows. But now, as we head into the third week of September, I'm excited to say that TV is back, baby. I'll start out with a couple of returning shows: "Slow Horses" returns for its sixth season Wednesday on Apple TV, "South Park" is back Wednesday at 10 p.m. on Comedy Central, and "The Traitors: New Blood" debuts Thursday at 8 p.m. on NBC. Here's what we've got for new stuff:

There's no better way to kick off the new season of television than by honoring what worked last season. Watch Mariska Hargitay host the 78th Primetime Emmy Awards today at 8 p.m. on NBC, streaming on Peacock. Usually a comedian hosts this show, but we'll assume that after so many seasons starring on "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit," she's ready for a bit of comedy.

Stretch out your crime-solving muscles with "Agatha Christie's Tommy and Tuppence," out Tuesday on Britbox. The streamer is calling this the "first contemporary English language Agatha Christie adaptation," which is a lot of qualifiers! But if you're interested, it's about a couple who solve mysteries together, who Christie revisited several times over the course of their lives. Good job security for stars Josh Dylan and Antonia Thomas, though in the new series adaptation, they play a former couple, and she's married to someone else.

You know how there are a bunch of movies about Mario and Luigi from the Nintendo games? Now there's an animated series about the nearly-as-beloved (?) Sega Genesis adventure game "Golden Axe," out Wednesday on Paramount+. Reasons to check this one out: extreme nostalgia for the heyday of '90s console gaming, and the fact that current king of TV Matthew Rhys is doing a funny voice as one of the characters.

Fellow TV fans, should I watch "Reacher"? I haven't taken the plunge yet, but people really seem to love it. If so, please send me a nice email telling me why you like it, and I'll consider it. But if you're already a "Reacher" fan, chances are you're excited to see the spinoff series "Neagley," about a Chicago-based private investigator, out Wednesday on Prime Video. Maria Sten stars.

Ryan Murphy turns his serial killer series to a woman with some local notoriety in "Monster: The Lizzie Borden Story," which stars Ella Beatty (daughter of Warren and Annette Bening). Out Thursday on Netflix. Not to be confused with the 2018 Chloë Sevigny movie "Lizzie" or the 2014 Christina Ricci TV movie, "Lizzie Borden Took an Ax."

NICK WALL

Josh Dylan and Antonia Thomas star in "Agatha Christie's Tommy and Tuppence," out Tuesday on Britbox.

Rapper JAY-Z sits down with music producer Rick Rubin for an in-depth conversation in the docuseries "JAY-Zin 8," premiering Friday at 8 p.m. on HBO and HBO Max. Two episodes drop weekly.

Giovanni Ribisi stars in "American Hostage," out Sunday on MGM+, the true story of a hostage taker who demanded to be interviewed on air by a radio news reporter, played by Jon Hamm.

Lola Petticrew, riding high after a star turn in the critically acclaimed "Furious," leads "Trespasses," out 10 p.m. Sunday on PBS. The drama, set in Northern Ireland in 1975, follows the forbidden romance between a Catholic teacher and a Protestant lawyer. Based on the book by Louise Kennedy, and costars Tom Cullen and Gillian Anderson, queen of infinite accents.

My Horgan Homies (fan club nickname pending review), we're ready to feast. Sharon Horgan, she of "Catastrophe," "Bad Sisters," and a particularly piquant brand of mordant wit, stars in "Youth," out Sunday at 10 p.m. on HBO. She plays a divorcee dealing with romance, empty nesting, and aging parents. At least she can be comforted by a romance with a former Mr. Wickham, Rupert Friend (he was the cad in the 2005 "Pride and Prejudice," if you're not someone who has memorized that movie).

Lisa Weidenfeld can be reached at lisa.weidenfeld@globe.com. Follow her on X @LisaWeidenfeld and Instagram @lisaweidenfeld.

ASKING ERIC

Nasty bridge bully ruins game play

Q. I am a retiree in a bridge group. We have played together for many years. Because we have just enough for one table of players and play at the same person's house several days per week, we are subject to "house rules."

This person sees herself as the teacher even though I am very proficient. She constantly replays each hand when completed and during plays tells me what I should play. If I disagree, she tells me that I don't want to learn.

This has caused so much friction I finally gave up playing with these three women. The home hostess went off on me with a litany of cruel and nasty comments like we are in middle school, and she is the bully with her clique.

Now I have been refused play even during "open" play and have been threatened that if it happens again, I will not be allowed to play at all.

I don't know what the "it" is and feel anxious about returning in the fall when the season gets in full swing. I enjoy playing in the fall with others not including those three.

What suggestions do you have for me as the fall season is just around the corner? I want to be a friendly and accepted part of this snowbird group.

LOVE TO PLAY BRIDGE

A. If I'm reading your letter correctly, there is a larger community of bridge players with whom you can play, but for years you've played with this one cohort. If that's the case, it would be best to cut your losses and seek out other players with whom you have a better social connection.

It doesn't seem like the issue is your friendliness. It seems the hostess of your bridge group wants to exert a certain amount of control and that simply doesn't work for you. There's no reason to subject yourself to nasty comments or even rules that rub you the wrong way. The goal is to enjoy yourself in a social situation, so it won't do you much good to continue engaging with people who are unkind to you.

Q. I think my sister is trying to become a tradwife influencer. She makes videos about baking and homesteading and returning to a simpler time. She has a bit of a following. But it's all fake. She hates cooking and totally neglects her garden.

How do I know? Because I live next door and the garden that she's always filming is our shared garden.

I don't have TVs in the house, and my wife homeschools my kids. I actually do believe we'd be a lot better off if we had simpler lives. My sister, meanwhile, is addicted to reality TV and to her phone. She and her husband even have a cleaning woman who comes in a few times a week.

She's always lurked in my shadow but she's so critical of some of the decisions that my wife and I make. Which is why this whole tradwife persona is so confusing. Does she hate who we are, or not?

I don't want any influence. I don't even have social media. I'm not cut off from society by any means, but I'm not nearly as connected as she is.

I don't know what her problem is. Honestly, I get so mad when she makes a video showcasing a tomato I grew or a pie she "made" filled with fruit I harvested myself or a vase of flowers that she couldn't even name.

I'm tempted to just let the garden bolt and grow wild so that she has less to post about. Is that too petty?

WEEDING THE GARDEN

A. Letting your horticultural efforts go to waste seems like a case of cutting off your rose to spite your face, as it were. You're getting joy from planting, tending to, and harvesting fruits, vegetables, and flowers. Don't let your sister take that from you.

While she is using the garden's delights as props for her social media persona, you presumably continue to value them and to make use of them. It would be a shame to let all of that go. I also imagine it would have an impact on your family's meals.

It's probably best for you to just ignore what she does on social media. It's not hurting you. If you so desire, you can formally split the garden into your side and her side. But that may not stop her from claiming the stolen val- or of your plants.

The most important thing to remember is that whatever she's trying to get with these posts is not something that you desire. Keep your focus on your goals and your happiness and leave her to her quixotic deceptions.

R. Eric Thomas can be reached at eric@askingeric.com.

Monday September 14, 2026

	7 pm	7:30	8 pm	8:30	9 pm	9:30	10 pm	10:30	11 pm	11:30
2	WGBH PBS BBC News	R. Steves	Antiques "Vintage Dallas Hour 2"	Antiques Roadshow "Vintage Boston"	Antiques Roadshow "Vintage Boston"	Independent Lens "Ghost in the Machine" (N) (SP)
4	WBZ CBS Wheel (N) (SP)	Jeopardy! (N) (SP)	FBI "Crusader"	FBI "3 Up, 3 Down"	CIA "Blood Money"	News (N)	(:35) Comics
5	WCVB ABC News (N)	Chronicle	NFL Football Denver Broncos at Kansas City Chiefs (N) (Live)	(:15) News (N)	(:50) J. Kimmel
6	WLNE ABC Videos		Saturday Night Live	Saturday Night Live	Saturday Night Live	Saturday Night Live
7	WHDH (N) (SP)	Extra (N) (SP)	Family Feud	Family Feud	7 News at 9PM (N)	7 News at 10PM (N)	(:35) Inside
9	WMUR ABC Chronicle	News (N)	NFL Football Denver Broncos at Kansas City Chiefs (N) (Live)	(:15) News	J.Kimmel
10	NBC Boston NBC 10 Boston News at 7pm (N)		78th Emmy Awards (N) (Live)	Boston News (N)	(:35) J. Fallon (N)
10	WJAR NBC News (Live)	Extra (N)	78th Emmy Awards (N) (Live)	News (Live)	(:35) J. Fallon (N)
11	WENH PBS Week-ends	Rosendo	Antiques "Vintage Dallas Hour 2"	Antiques Roadshow "Vintage Boston"	Independent Lens "Ghost in the Machine" (N) (SP)
12	WPRI CBS Wheel (N) (SP)	Jeopardy! (N) (SP)	FBI "Crusader"	FBI "3 Up, 3 Down"	CIA "Blood Money"	12 News at 11 (N)	(:35) Comics
25	WFXT FOX ET (N) (SP)	TMZ (N)	Name That Tune "Brains, Brawn & Battles; Teachers, Tech & Tunes" (N)	Boston 25 News at 10PM (N) (Live)	News (Live)	(:35) News (N)
27	WUNI Rosa "Joyita de Jujo" (N)		Tan cerca "Limites y sospechas" (N)	Tierra de amor y coraje (N)	Corazón de oro (N)	Noticias Univisión	(:35) Noticiero
36	WSBE PBS R. Steves	Week-ends	Nature	Martin Clunes: Islands of America	TURN: Washington's Spies	PBS News Hour
38	WSBK Big Bang	Big Bang	WBZ News 8p (N)	Phantom Gourmet	Jeopardy! Perfect (N) (SP)	Perfect (N)	Flip Side (N) (SP)	Flip Side (N)
44	WGBX PBS Test Kitchen	Antiques	Midsomer "The Green Man: Part 2"	Inspector George Gently "Gently and the New Age"	Antiques	PBS News Hour (N)
50	WWJE Murder USA		Heartland Homicide	Killer Cases	Crime Stories	Unusual Suspects
56	WLVI CW Young Sheldon	Young Sheldon	All American "Find Your Way Back" (N)	Penn "Teller and the Big Dummy"	7 News at 10PM on CW56 (N)	Modern Family	Modern Family
64	WNAC FOX Family Feud	Family Feud	Name That Tune "Brains, Brawn & Battles; Teachers, Tech & Tunes" (N)	12 News on Fox Pr (N)	Seinfeld	Seinfeld
68	WBXP ION (:55) Chicago P.D. "43rd and Normal"		Chicago P.D. "The Devil You Know"	Chicago P.D. "I Was Here"	Chicago P.D. "Center Mass"	Chicago P.D. "Burden of Truth"
PREMIUM CABLE
Cinemax	(6:45) ★★ Won't Back Down ('12) Maggie Gyllenhaal.	(:45) ★★ Catfish ('10)	(:15) ★★ The Town ('10) Rebecca Hall, Jon Hamm, Ben Affleck.
Flix	(6:25) ★★ Comet ('14) Justin Long.	★★ Nine ('09) Marion Cotillard, Penélope Cruz, Daniel Day-Lewis.	★★★ The Doors ('91) Meg Ryan, Kevin Dillon, Val Kilmer.
HBO	(5:20) ★★ Les Misérables ('12)	Lanterns	Conan O'Brien	(:45) A K "Welcome to Topeka"	(:25) ★★ Deadpool 2 ('18) Josh Brolin, Ryan Reynolds.
HBO 2	(:15) ★★ Sicario ('15) Benicio del Toro, Josh Brolin, Emily Blunt.	(:15) ★★ Mortal Kombat II ('26) Adeline Rudolph, Jessica McNamee, Karl Urban.	(:10) ★★ Murder on the Orient Express
Paramount-Sho	(6:00) ★★ Edge of Tomorrow ('14)	Lioness (N)	★★★ 300 ('07) Lena Headey, David Wenham, Gerard Butler.	★★ 300: Rise of an Empire ('14)
Showtime 2	(5:55) ★★ The Score ('01)	★★★ Double Jeopardy ('99) Tommy Lee Jones.	(:45) ★★ Kiss the Girls ('97) Ashley Judd, Cary Elwes, Morgan Freeman.	(:45) The Mechanic
Starz!	(5:55) ★★ Michael ('26) Jaafar Jackson.	(:05) Fightland	★★ In the Grey ('26) Henry Cavill, Jake Gyllenhaal.	(:40) ★★ Hustle & Flow ('05) Terrence Howard.
TMC	(5:55) ★★ Blindness ('08)	★★★ Molly's Game ('17) Idris Elba, Michael Cera, Jessica Chastain.	★★★★ Dead Man Walking ('95) Susan Sarandon.
SPORTS
CBSSN	Course Record With Michael Breed (N)	Golf (N)	Club Life	My World With (N)	Poker Night (N)	Athletes Unlimited Pro Softball
ESPN	(6:00) Monday Night Countdown	NFL Football Denver Broncos at Kansas City Chiefs (N) (Live)	(:15) Monday	SportsC. (Live)
ESPN2	SportsCenter (N) (Live)	NFL Football Denver Broncos at Kansas City Chiefs (N) (Live)	(:15) Monday	SEC Storied
Fox Sports 1	MotoGP Racing	ARCA Menards Series Spruce 212 From Salem Speedway in Salem, Ind.	American Flat Track Springfield Mile 1	SPEED With Harvick & Buxton	GT4 America
Golf	(5:00) College Golf	Central (N) (Live)	PGA Tour	PGA Tour	College Golf
NBA	NBA Social Vol. 1	Hardwood Classics	Bask.	NBA Shot Clock
NBC Sports	(6:30) Early Edition	The Break	The Break	The Break	Boston Sports (N) (Live)	Boston Sports
NESN	Liverpool Fulham at Liverpool (N)	LFC Trending (N)	Chat (N)
FAMILY
Cartoon	Burgers	Burgers	Burgers	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	RickMorty	RickMorty
Disney	Big City Greens	Big City Greens	Phineas and Ferb	Phineas and Ferb	Vampi-rina	Phineas and Ferb	Phineas and Ferb	Kiff	Ladybug	Ladybug
Encore Family	(6:30) Big Trip 2: Spe...	The Snow Queen 2	(:20) Yellowbird ('14)	(:50) Street Fighter Alpha: Movie
Nickelodeon	Friends	Friends	Friends	Friends	Big Bang	Big Bang	Big Bang	Big Bang	Big Bang	Big Bang
Nick Jr.	PAWPatr...	PAWPatr...	PAWPatr...	PAWPatr...	Peppa Pig	Peppa Pig	Peppa Pig	Peppa Pig	PAWPatr...	PAWPatr...

Content Ratings: TV-Y Appropriate for all children; TV-Y7 For children age 7 and older; TV-G General audience; TV-PG Parental guidance suggested; TV-14 May be unsuitable for children under 14; TV-MA Mature audience only Additional symbols: D Suggestive dialogue; FV Fantasy violence; L Strong language; S Sexual activity; V Violence; HD High-Definition; (CC) Close-Captioned

News	Specials
	7 pm	7:30	8 pm	8:30	9 pm	9:30	10 pm	10:30	11 pm	11:30
BASIC CABLE
A&E	Live PD: Greatest Shifts "Episode 35"		Live PD: Greatest Shifts "Episode 31"		Live PD: Great. "Episode 36" (N)		Live PD: Great. "Episode 37" (N)		(:05) Live PD: Great. "Episode 34"
AMC	★★ Shooter ('07) Michael Peña, Mark Wahlberg.						★★★ The Fugitive ('93) Harrison Ford.
Animal Planet	Alaskan "Return to the Wild"		Alaskan "Welcome to Browntown"		Alaskan "Birdy Get Your Gun"		Alaskan Bush People "Pile It On"		Alaskan "On the Prowl"
BBC America	(6:00) ★★ Jack Reacher ('12) Tom Cruise. ★★ White House Down ('13) Jamie Foxx, Channing Tatum.
BET	Celebrity Family Feud Martha Hunt		Celebrity Fam. Maria Menounos		Celebrity Fam. Brooklyn Decker		Martin	Martin	Martin	Martin
Bravo	Below Deck Mediterranean		Below Deck Mediterranean (N)		Watch What (N) Next Gen NYC "Lady and the Train"		Below Deck "Chips on the Shoulders"		Housewives
CMT	Mama's	Mama's	Reba	(:35) Reba	(:10) Reba	(:40) Reba	(:15) Reba	(:50) Reba	GoldGirls
CNN	OutFront (Live)		Cooper 360		The Source With		CNN NewsNight		Laura	(Live)
Comedy Central	The Office	(:35) The Office	(:10) The Office	(:45) The Office	(:20) The Office		(:55) The Office	The Office	Family Guy	Family Guy
CSPAN	(6:00) U.S. House				C-SPAN Primetime			C-SPAN Primetime
CSPAN2	(6:00) Se.	Public Affairs Events			Public Affairs Events			Public Affairs Events
Dest. America	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront	Lakefront
Discovery	Behind Bars		Contraband (N)		Behind Bars (N)		Contraband: Seized		Contraband: Seized
Discovery Life	Dr. Pimple Popper		Dr. Pimple Popper		Dr. Pimple Popper		Dr. Pimple Popper		Dr. Pimple Popper
E!	(6:00) E! Live (N)		(:05) Coc. ★ The Waterboy ('98) Adam Sandler.				★★ 50 First Dates ('04)
Encore	(6:20) Scream 2		(:25) ★★ The Stepford Wives ('04)				Outlander (N)		(:05) Outlander (N)
Food	Halloween "The Boogeyman's Lair"		Halloween Wars "Spellbound"		Halloween Baking Championship "The Museum of Unnatural History" (N) (P)			Halloween Cookie Challenge
Fox News	Ingraham (Live)		Jesse (N) (Live)		Hannity (Live)		Gutfeld!		Fox News (Live)
Freeform	(5:50) ★★ Cruella ('21) Emma Stone.		Somebody (N)		Somebody (N) (SF)		The 700 Club
FUSE	Tupac & Biggie: Worlds Collide				Deadly Love: Bobby & Whitney		Elvis & Priscilla		Cheaters Cheaters
FX	(6:00) ★★ Thor: Ragnarok ('17)				Sunny Adults		★★★ Kingsman: The Secret Service ('15)
FXM	(6:50) ★ The Grudge ('20)		(:45) ★ The Grudge ('20)				(:40) ★★ Don't Breathe 2 ('21)
Hallmark	(6:00) Love, Fall & O...		Love Struck Café ('17) Sarah Jane Morris.				Gold Girls	Gold Girls	Gold Girls	Gold Girls
Hallmark Myst.	(6:00) Garage Sale		Garage Sale Mysteries "All That Glitters"				Murder, She Wrote		Murder, She Wrote
HGTV	Love It or List It "A Fixable Problem?"		Love It "Get Me Out of the Garage!"		House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters
History	History's Greatest Mysteries		History's Greatest Mysteries		History's Greatest Mysteries		(:05) History's Greatest Mysteries		(:05) History's Greatest Mysteries
HLN	Forensic Storage (N) (Live)		Forensic Storage (N) (Live)		Forensic Storage (N) (Live)		Forensic Storage (N) (Live)		Forensic Storage (N) (Live)
HSN	Storage (N) (Live)		Isomers (N) (Live)		The Real (N) (Live)		The Real (N) (Live)		The Real (N) (Live)
ID	Fatal Vows "The Ties That Bind"		Fatal Vows "Deadly Isolation"		Married to Evil "Killer Kin"		Married to Evil (N)		Fear Thy Neighbor "Mailbox Madness"
IFC	Raymond Raymond		Raymond Raymond		Raymond Raymond		Raymond Raymond		Raymond Raymond
Lifetime	NCIS "Reunion"		NCIS		NCIS		(:05) NCIS		(:05) NCIS
LMN	(6:00) Nanny Is Wat...		My Nanny Stole My Life ('24)				Beware the Night Nurse ('23)
MAGN	Maine		Maine		Maine		Maine		Maine
MSNBC	The Weeknight		All in (Live)		The Rachel (N)		Last Word (Live)		The 11th (Live)
MTV	Ridiculous		Ridiculous		Ridiculous		Ridiculous		Ridiculous
National Geographic	Fails "Super-Sized Collapse"		Fails "Charm City Catastrophe"		Fails "Implode, Ignite, Collapse" (N)		Fails "Cathedral Catastrophe" (N)		Fails "Charm City Catastrophe"
NatGeoWild	Dr. Oakley, Vet		Primal Survivor (N)		Primal Survivor (N)		Primal Survivor (N)		Primal Survivor (N)
NECN	News News		Dateline		Dateline		Rescue OpenHou...		1st Look Rescue
NewsNation	Vargas Report		Cuomo		On Balance		Katie Pavlich		Jesse Web
Ovation	Murdoch Mysteries		Hope Street		Murdoch Mysteries		Murdoch Mysteries		Murdoch Mysteries
OWN	Videos		Videos		Videos		Videos		Videos
Oxygen	Snapped		Snapped		Snapped		Snapped		Snapped
Paramount	(6:00) ★★ Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince ★★ Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 1
QVC	(6:00) PM Style (N)		Peace Love (N)		Menopause (N)		Get un (N) (Live)		Givencyh (N) (Live)
Science	Forbidden History		Forbidden History		Forbidden History		Forbidden History		Forbidden History
Sundance	NCIS "Last Man Standing"		NCIS "Agent Afloat"		NCIS "Capitol Offense"		NCIS "Heartland"		NCIS "Nine Lives"
SyFy	Twi. Zone		Twi. Zone		Twi. Zone		Twi. Zone		Twi. Zone
TBS	Big Bang		Big Bang		Big Bang		Big Bang		Office Office
TCM	(6:30) Too Many Girls				★★ Latin Lovers ('53) Lana Turner.			★★★ Madame X ('66) Lana Turner.
TLC	Last Resort				9★ Day: The Last Resort (N)			Last Resort (N) Double Lives
TNT	(6:30) Road House ('24) Jake Gyllenhaal.				High Value (N)		High Value Target		Road House ('24)
Travel	(6:00) Mysteries				Mysteries of the Unknown			Mysteries of the Unknown
TruTV	★★ The Karate Kid Part II ('86) Ralph Macchio.				★★ The Karate Kid Part II ('86) Ralph Macchio.
TV Land	Raymond Raymond		Raymond Raymond		Raymond Raymond		Raymond Raymond		(:10) King (:50) King
TV One	CosbySh.. CosbySh..		Fatal Attraction		Fatal Attraction (N)		For My Man		For My Man
USA	Law & Order: SVU "Russian Brides"		Law & Order: SVU "Educated Guess"		Law & Order: SVU "Theatre Tricks"		Law & Order: SVU "Official Story"		Pigeon "There's Always a Road"
VH-1	Chris		★ A Low Down Dirty Shame ('94)				★★ 30 Minutes or Less ('11)
WE	Criminal "L.D.S.K."		Criminal "The Fox"		Criminal Minds		Criminal "Derailed"		Criminal Minds	