

The Boston Globe

Serving our community since 1872

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3, 2026

Mayo pact alters health care terrain

R.I. collaboration brings clinical giant to region

By Alexa Gagosz
GLOBE STAFF

The Mayo Clinic, one of the biggest names in American medicine, is pushing into New England, home turf of health care powerhouses Mass General Brigham, Yale New Haven Health, and Dana-Farber, without buying a single hospital.

Its new entry point is South County Health, a struggling hospital in Rhode Island that is expected to unveil the clinical collaboration between the two next week. South County said the arrangement will give its physicians access to “world-class clinical expertise” and AI tools “at no additional cost for patients,” while keeping the hospital locally governed and owned, according to details obtained by the Globe.

South County will join the Mayo Clinic Care Network, a group of vetted independent hospitals with access to Mayo specialists, case reviews, and AI-

MAYO CLINIC, Page A10

With strike set, nurses and Brigham prepare for upheaval

Open-ended walkout to begin in 10 days; deal could still be reached

By Jonathan Saltzman and Marin Wolf

GLOBE STAFF

After a bitter months-long stalemate with hospital management, the union that represents 4,000 Brigham and Women’s nurses said Friday that they will go on strike starting Oct. 14. It would be the biggest open-ended walkout by nurses in Massachusetts history.

In contrast to the one-day strike by the Massachusetts Nurses Association at Brigham on July 8, this walkout is slated to be indefinite. That would make it far more disruptive to patients, the hospital, and nurses, who expect to forgo paychecks and lose Brigham’s contribution to their health insurance premiums.

Brigham handles an average of more than 2,000 outpatient visits per day and discharges an average of 130 patients per day, according to Massachusetts Center for Health Information and Analysis data from 2024. Nearly 60,000 patients visited the hospital’s emergency department that year.

The nurses’ dispute is largely over wages, though the union said it is also demanding the new contract provide more affordable health insurance options and limit the hospital’s use of temporary nurses.

A long-lasting strike could wreak havoc at Brigham, a Harvard-affiliated teaching hospital that attracts patients from around the world, and force its parent corporation, Mass General Brigham, to shell out millions of dollars for fill-in nurses. The strike date announcement came a week after union members voted overwhelmingly to authorize an indefinite walkout.

“We have repeatedly tried to get MGB to negotiate and avoid a second strike, but the billionaires who run MGB have shut the door on us,” said Kelly Morgan, a Brigham labor and deliv-

NURSES, Page A10

When the water isn’t there

PHOTOS BY DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF

With low levels at its reservoir along I-95, Cambridge may turn to its dry day fund

By Joshua Miller
GLOBE STAFF

REPORTER’S NOTEBOOK
WALTHAM — In a persistent drizzle, the rocky moonscape was stark: Where a large body of water should have been lapping at a tight shoreline, there were only boulders, ducks, a great blue heron, and mud — a mucky, exposed bottom land that stretched into the distance, not far from where cars were streaming along I-95.

The Hobbs Brook Reservoir has supplied the city of Cambridge with drinking water for more than a century. But depleted by a persistent drought, the largest reservoir in the city’s water system is running so low that, even with all the recent precipitation, Cambridge may soon have to buy a bunch of water.

“We’re not saving pennies for a rainy day,” said Mark Gallagher, the head of the Cambridge Water Department. “We’re saving them for a dry day.”

It will be an expensive day. And it could be coming soon.

I was on a tour of the city’s water system, from its reservoirs to its Fresh Pond water treatment plant, where the loud sound of mixers and pumps rang in my ears, and couldn’t help but feel lucky. Those of us who live, work, study, or play in Cambridge have a great deal: municipal tap water at a high enough quality and a low enough cost that most people don’t ever think about it.

The smooth operation of the system, however, is premised on precipitation as it used to be — not as it has become now. Storms around here are now fewer and more intense, with flash floods and flash droughts, officials say. And you can probably thank climate change.

Gallagher, the water department’s managing director, emphasized that while he’s not a climatologist nor a meteorologist, he

WATER, Page A6

The water level in the Hobbs Brook Reservoir (above on Sept. 28) is low. Cambridge officials said the reservoir was at about 20 percent of capacity. If it drops to 15 percent, the city will start buying supplemental water. Left, a gauge reflected the lower level.

2026 midterms look familiar

Voters’ feelings on president, war echo 2006

By James Pindell
GLOBE STAFF

Twenty years ago, Republicans redrew congressional maps ahead of the midterms. They used their majorities to build a ANALYSIS huge campaign cash advantage. They told themselves the midterm elections would be OK.

Then, of course, the American public soured on the incumbent Republican president and a war in the Middle East.

In the end, the story of the 2006 midterms wasn’t that Democrats really had any organic momentum, but that independent voters bailed on the Republican Party and a big chunk of the disillusioned Republican base passed on voting at all.

It was the classic definition of a Democratic wave year. The day after, President George W. Bush analyzed the results by saying, “If you look at race by race, it was close. The cumulative effect, however, was not too close. It was a thumping.”

No one election year is a perfect comparison to another. But a month out from the 2026 midterm elections, the parallels are almost uncanny, to the point where they are a useful frame of reference for what might happen in the closing days.

First, since midterm elections are typically a referendum on the sitting president, let’s start with presidential approval ratings. Recently, The Wall Street Journal compared presidential approval ratings based on their polling with NBC News for the period between Labor Day and the midterm election going back to 1990. Next to last on the list was Bush in 2006, with a 39 percent approval rating. Dead last: Donald Trump in 2026, with 37 percent. (A more

MIDTERMS, Page A7

New York Governor Kathy Hochul appointed Attorney General Letitia James to take over the investigation of rape allegations at Cornell. A2.

Leaders from the Group of 7 agreed to release diesel from their stockpiles. A3.

Michael Minogue spent more than $6.1 million last month in his bid to unseat Governor Maura Healey. B1.

A leading AI firm developing software for the legal industry is opening an office in Boston. D1.

Fall’s light

Saturday: Sunny, cooler. High: 65-70. Low: 50-55.

Sunday: Cloudy, breezy. High: 60-65. Low: 51-56.

Comics and Weather, D4-5. Obituaries, C9.

Citing ‘guidelines,’ T pulls ads critical of city’s schools

By John Hilliard
GLOBE STAFF

A controversy is brewing over a non-profit’s $1.5 million campaign that posted ads on MBTA subway cars blasting Boston’s public schools, after the T yanked the ads abruptly on Thursday.

The T said the ads violated a policy in its advertising guidelines. But they were removed the day after the Globe asked questions about them, and now the campaign organizers are accusing the T of censorship.

The ads, which carried the slogan “BPS IS FAILING HER” superimposed on an image of a child’s eyes, cited state data reporting that most of Boston’s third-graders are below grade level in math and reading.

“We can fix it, together,” the ads read. A Globe reporter spotted the ad Wednesday night on a Red Line train. After receiving inquiries about their origin, an MBTA spokesperson responded the next day that they were being removed from the T’s Orange and Red Line cars.

“These ads do not comply with the MBTA’s advertising guidelines and were placed in the system by our advertising contractor without the required MBTA review prior,” Maya Bingaman, a T spokesperson, said in an email Thursday.

The Globe sent an initial inquiry

BPS, Page A6

MARCELA RODRIGUES/GLOBE STAFF

An ad critical of Boston Public Schools was seen on a Red Line car Wednesday. The ads were removed by the T on Thursday.

VOL. 310, NO. 95

*

Suggested retail price
$4.00

0 947725 4

The Nation

Cornell rape case gets special prosecutor

N.Y. governor appoints state's attorney general

By Michael R. Sisak
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — The woman who accused members of a Cornell University fraternity of gang rape was “failed” by people obligated to protect her, including campus police and the county prosecutor, New York Governor Kathy Hochul said Friday.

Hochul said at a news conference that she decided to appoint Attorney General Letitia James as a special prosecutor to take over the investigation after learning “troubling details” about how authorities have handled the woman’s claims thus far, including that the district attorney closed the case without having anyone interview the accuser or anyone else involved in the alleged attack.

“In what world does the district attorney not even interview her, or anyone else involved, or even request the full transcript?” Hochul asked. “This woman, this young woman, had already endured something that is utterly unspeakable. And then at every turn, she was failed by people and institutions with an obligation to protect her.”

She also assailed the Cornell University Police Department for not fully conveying the woman’s story to prosecutors.

“After this young woman came forward, she spoke to the police. She sat for hours and told them exactly what happened to her. And according to new reports, she could not have been clearer that she was 100 percent confident that she had been raped,” the Democratic governor said. “Yet, shockingly, those words never made it into the account that the Cornell police sent to prosecutors.”

Hochul said Thursday that she appointed James to oversee the case because she had lost faith in the local district attorney’s ability to handle it.

Tompkins County District Attorney Matthew Van Houten, who was removed from the case, said Friday that he supports James’s appointment.

“I trust that she will examine the facts and apply the law,” Van Houten said in a statement. “It has become clear that we were not provided the full picture by the university. The focus has been and should continue to be on the victims.”

James didn’t say how long her investigation might take, but suggested it would take months.

“We will review the facts, gather evidence, interview witnesses and, if warranted, pursue prosecutions,” James said. “I know that you want answers. I do too. A comprehensive investigation of this nature takes time, but my office is committed to seeing it through.”

The investigation initially was closed without charges in 2024. Van Houten reopened the investigation on Monday after the woman filed a new lawsuit against seven former members of the Chi Phi fraternity, as well as Cornell and others.

Van Houten has defended his decision not to prosecute, maintaining that a sworn statement by the woman prepared

YUKI IWAMURA/ASSOCIATED PRESS

New York Governor Kathy Hochul (left), with New York Attorney General Letitia James on Friday, said the rape accuser was “failed” by people obligated to protect her, by police didn’t include the woman’s allegations that she was drugged against her will, incapacitated beyond the ability to consent, and forced into sex.

The case has roiled the Ivy League school and raised questions about its response and the larger issue of how sexual assaults are handled on college campuses.

The woman, identified only as Jane Doe in court documents, told campus police in November 2024 that she was sexually assaulted, then discussed it with the university’s internal investigators as part of Cornell’s disciplinary process.

Her lawsuit alleges that she was plied with drugs and alcohol, then subjected to sexual acts by a group of men while she was partially or entirely incapacitated. One of the men sent a social media message to other fraternity members alerting them to what was happening and inviting people to take part, according to the lawsuit.

Lawyers for two of the men she is suing have denied they participated in a sexual assault. One said his client didn’t touch the woman. Attempts to reach the other men or their representatives for comment have been unsuccessful.

Hochul also threw her support behind proposals to change an element of New York law that has long made it more difficult to prosecute people who have engaged in sex with someone who voluntarily became intoxicated to the point where their ability to consent was compromised.

Under the law, rape charges generally need to involve force or a clear refusal of sex, unless the victim is physically helpless due to being unconscious, or mentally incapacitated due to being drugged without their consent. New York is one of 19 states with such laws.

“If someone is too intoxicated to consent, it should not matter whether they chose to use drugs or alcohol. Voluntary intoxication is not a license for sexual assault or gang rape, period,” the governor said.

New York governors have turned to attorneys general and special prosecutors to oversee important cases in the past.

In 2018, then-Governor Andrew Cuomo appointed a Long Island district attorney to investigate Attorney General Eric Schneiderman, who resigned after women accused him of abuse. In 2021, James appointed two outside lawyers to conduct a non-criminal investigation into sexual harassment allegations against then-Governor Andrew Cuomo, leading to his resignation.

James’s office also handles other criminal work and has the power to investigate every death in the state involving law enforcement. But, typically, she can’t initiate a criminal investigation without a referral from a local district attorney, the governor, or a state agency.

James, a Democrat who took office in 2019, is perhaps best known for suing President Trump over allegations that he defrauded banks by overstating the value of his real estate holdings on financial statements. An appeals court overturned Trump’s fine, which ballooned to more than $500 million, but upheld a judge’s fraud finding.

Trump’s Justice Department, in turn, brought mortgage fraud charges against James last year as part of the president’s retribution campaign against political enemies, but a judge dismissed the case and a grand jury rejected another attempt to indict her. James denies wrongdoing.

DAILY BRIEFING

Ex-deputy cleared in killing of airman

A former Florida sheriff’s deputy has been found not guilty of manslaughter with a firearm in the killing of a Black Air Force airman shot at his apartment during a domestic disturbance call.

An Okaloosa County jury acquitted Eddie Duran, 38, on Thursday. Duran had faced up to 30 years in prison.

Duran, who is Hispanic, worked for the Okaloosa County sheriff’s department in May 2024 when he responded to Roger Fortson’s Fort Walton Beach apartment near Hurlburt Field, where the airman was stationed.

The sheriff’s office had said the deputy “reacted in self-defense after he encountered a 23-year-old man armed with a gun.” The shooting was captured on the deputy’s body camera.

The video shows the deputy banging on the door and stepping aside, seemingly out of view of the door. Twice he shouted: “Sheriff’s office! Open the door!”

Fortson opened the door and could be seen holding what appeared to be a handgun pointed down toward the floor.

The deputy shouted, “Step back!” and fired off shots. He then shouted, “Drop the gun! Drop the gun!”

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deaths may be linked to kratom

Federal authorities investigating the deaths of two University of Mississippi students have charged a store clerk and his son with selling an illegal kratom product, prosecutors announced Friday.

A drug task force in Mississippi had previously urged people to avoid kratom, an herbal substance that acts as a stimulant at low doses and a sedative at high doses, after authorities found packages of kratom derivatives while investigating the deaths on Sept. 21.

It is still not clear whether those substances contributed to either death, but federal prosecutors said both appear consistent with drug overdoses. Two state agencies were working to expedite toxicology reports for the students, Mississippi Governor Tate Reeves said in a statement last week.

Lafayette County Metro Narcotics said additional charges were possible.

Bank records show one of the students, Aidan Hamilton, made multiple purchases in September from a vape, tobacco, and beer store in Oxford, where the university is located, according to a federal court filing.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

SpaceX ferries four astronauts

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla.. — Four astronauts pulled up at the International Space Station on Thursday after launching on an eight-hour express that set a US speed record.

The fresh arrivals include a Canadian whose wife will give birth while he’s away.

SpaceX launched commander Jessica Watkins and her crew for NASA after a three-week delay to fix their Dragon capsule’s leaking fluid system.

Thick clouds threatened all morning to halt the countdown but in the end, the skies cleared enough to allow for a safe lift-off.

Although their stay at the station will last a long six months, the flight there was the quickest yet not only for Elon Musk’s company, but any American entity, including NASA. The space station’s convenient location when the astronauts launched enabled the fast transit.

With the late morning liftoff from Cape Canaveral Space Force Station, Watkins became the first Black woman to lead a crew to orbit.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

‘We as a campus community stand with victims of sexual violence.’

EESHAAN CHAUDHURI, the student body president, beginning the event by addressing the room

Students call for change at emotional public meeting

By Emma Goldberg
NEW YORK TIMES

ITHACA, N.Y. — There were fiery testimonies, voices lurching, and pleas for action from school leadership. There were fingers pointed angrily at Cornell University’s internal investigators, including by a woman who faced her student government representatives and said, emphatically: “I am also speaking as Jane Doe.”

Cornell’s student government convened a public hearing on sexual assault Thursday, and some 100 people turned out to share their raw emotions in a student union auditorium, Cornell flags and chandeliers hanging overhead.

Some broke down in tears, channeling the churning emotions of the broader campus. They walked forward, one by one, to offer testimonies, facing a semicircle of somber-faced student assembly representatives who were surrounded by backpacks and soda bottles.

“I cannot pretend this is a normal Thursday,” said Sophia Riley, a junior, remembering that as a freshman in 2024 she was shattered to hear that a student said she was assaulted at the Chi Phi fraternity house.

“I cried about it then, and I’m still equally devastated now.”

In the days since a lawsuit and rape allegations put Cornell in the national spotlight, the school’s Ithaca campus has been consumed by the news. The meeting gave students a chance to denounce administrators, saying that they had mishandled the allegations of assault, though few school leaders were in the room and the university president, Michael Kotlikoff, was absent.

Some students expressed rage about the fraternity culture cited in the lawsuit. The suit had prompted the Tompkins County district attorney to reopen the investigation into the claims by a woman known only as Jane Doe that she was sexually assaulted by seven men at a fraternity house.

University officials have de-

MATT ROURKE/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Students spoke about sexual violence on campus during a student assembly meeting Thursday at Cornell University.

fended their disciplining of the defendants in the lawsuit and denied that the consequences were not strong enough, saying that “false narrative” could make assault survivors feel less safe and less likely to report crimes.

None of the men accused in the lawsuit has been charged with a crime, and they all have denied any wrongdoing. Four said that they had consensual sexual contact with the woman at the party, and the others denied any participation. Two were expelled, and others received lesser penalties.

Along with the students, the forum brought together faculty members and a smattering of Cornell parents. Eeshaan Chaudhuri, the student body president, began the event by addressing the room.

“We’re absolutely ashamed of the events that happened on campus,” Chaudhuri said, before inviting members of the community to line up and make comments. “I think we’ve made it abundantly clear for the past couple of days that we as a campus community stand with victims of sexual violence.”

A stream of ideas and proposals followed from students, some of whom feel besieged by national media and eager to shift the focus to solutions. Students urged administrators to improve the required workshops and trainings that teach students about consensual sex. And they asked for their classmates to be supported if they can’t complete homework and exams this week because of distress about the case.

“Students should not have to choose between grieving and keeping up with their academic responsibilities as if nothing had happened,” said Riley, declaring that the campus is in a “mental health crisis.”

While the majority of the meeting was declared off the record so students could come forward and candidly share their reflections, a handful shared their stories in front of reporters gathered for the public portion.

Emotions heightened as a woman came to the front of the room and said she, too, had reported a sexual assault at Cornell and felt let down by the university’s Title IX process, which investigates complaints of sexual assault on campus. She saw her own experience reflected in the accuser’s reports, of having an assault claim mishandled.

“When I filed my Title IX case in the midst of all of my mental, physical, and emotional recovery from the assault,” Jane Wang, a junior, said, “I was also met with an abundance of paperwork, very little instruction on how to navigate it, and no follow-up from our Title IX office of an outcome.”

Wang said that for students like herself to feel comfortable coming forward to report assault, they need to know the institution will act on it. “Through this event, we have witnessed the complete opposite,” she said.

Christian Tarala, who serves on the student assembly, said the board has hosted forums on contentious issues, such as Cornell’s relationship with the Trump administration, but he can’t recall any that turned this emotional.

The World

OSCAR DEL POZO/AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

MADRID PROTEST — Tarps and tents filled Puerta del Sol square as demonstrations continued following an extraordinary parliamentary session to vote on a government housing decree Friday. Two bills introduced by the government to tackle the housing crisis were rejected, dealing a blow to socialist Prime Minister Pedro Sánchez.

FlyDubai pilot: ‘I was fighting for my life’

Hailed as hero for thwarting attack by copilot

By Sheikh Saaliq
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW DELHI — The Indian airline captain who helped thwart an apparent attempt to crash a FlyDubai flight described Friday how he fought for his life in the minutes after his copilot stabbed him and the plane began a steep descent.

Captain Smit Machchhar, recovering in an Abu Dhabi hospital, told Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi in a televised video call that he knew he had to get back on his feet to save his passengers.

“I had so many wounds. I had fallen down,” he said from the hospital, his head bandaged and tubes in his nose, before breaking down as he recalled the attack.

“I was fighting for my life. At one point, I realized that if I didn’t get up ... then passengers would lose their lives,” he told Modi.

Modi told Machchhar his “courage, patience, and presence of mind” saved many lives.

The attack raised questions about aviation security and further unsettling a Middle East already shaken by the US-Iran war. Nothing is publicly known about the motive of the copilot, who came close to crashing the aircraft and killing all 182 people aboard Wednesday’s FlyDubai flight from Dubai.

Machchhar, who is from Mumbai, was seriously injured in Wednesday’s attack but managed to open the cockpit door, allowing passengers to enter and restrain the attacker as the Boeing 737 descended sharply, witnesses and Israeli authorities said. He has been hailed as a hero, with world leaders saying he helped avert a disaster.

AFP VIA GETTY IMAGES

A sand sculpture at a beach in India Thursday depicted Indian pilot Smit Machchhar.

The flight, carrying 182 people from Dubai to Tel Aviv, was diverted to Tabuk in northwestern Saudi Arabia for an emergency landing. FlyDubai said Wednesday that the jet was secured by on-duty crew members “who diverted and landed the aircraft safely.” A regional official said the crew members were pilots in training.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the attacker, an Omani national, was arrested in Saudi Arabia and was undergoing interrogation there. The motive for the attack was not immediately clear.

Several Israeli airlines on Friday were preparing special flights to bring Israelis back from Dubai, United Arab Emirates, after a midair cockpit attack this week on a FlyDubai flight to Tel Aviv halted the only direct service between the two cities.

Thousands of Israelis are estimated to have remained in Dubai since the attack Wednesday, according to David Sasi, a spokesperson for Miri Regev, the Israeli transportation minister.

Machchhar said his flying experience allowed him to sense the plane’s steep descent even after he was knocked down by the attacker.

“I have been flying planes for 17 years and serving as a captain for the last 11 years. I can sense exactly what is happening with the aircraft even with my eyes closed. When I was down, I could feel that the aircraft was plummeting,” he said.

Machchhar said that during those difficult moments, he recited the Hanuman Chalisa, a Hindu devotional hymn dedicated to Lord Hanuman, the monkey god, and traditionally recited as a prayer for strength and courage.

Machchhar, who is married and has two children, has worked for FlyDubai for about four years, according to his LinkedIn profile. Before joining the airline, he spent 11 years with SpiceJet, an Indian low-cost carrier, where he served as a senior commander and line training captain. He logged more than 9,750 flying hours with SpiceJet.

Philip Kean, CEO of Mainland Air, the New Zealand flight school where Machchhar trained, said pilots are taught how to take over if a fellow crew member becomes incapacitated. But the training does not typically prepare them for a stabbing attack by a colleague, he told the Associated Press on Friday.

“I don’t think there’s much in the handbook for being stabbed,” Kean said.

“You’re friends and you’re flying together,” he said. “Nobody would expect ... a person to have a go at you like that.”

Dubai has been a popular destination for Israelis since Israel and the UAE established ties in 2020 as part of the Trump administration’s Abraham Accords to normalize ties between Israel and Arab countries.

G7 countries agree to release diesel reserves

US, allies move to ease high fuel prices from war

By Lisa Friedman
and Rebecca F. Elliott
NEW YORK TIMES

LONDON — Leaders from some of the world’s wealthiest nations agreed Friday to release diesel from their reserve stockpiles to help ease a growing crisis over record-high prices driven mostly by the war in Iran.

Under the plan, the Group of 7 countries — the United States, France, Italy, Germany, Japan, Britain, and Canada — will release 100 million barrels of diesel and crude oil from strategic stockpiles over the coming four months. That is equivalent to around one day’s worth of global oil demand. The effort will be coordinated by the International Energy Agency, a Paris-based multilateral organization.

Calling the plan “decisive, coordinated measures to stabilize immediate energy supplies” and curb price spikes, the G7 said they would also make a “substantial” release of diesel within 20 days.

The group did not specify how much of the fuel to be released would be diesel and how much would be unrefined crude oil. Diesel and related fuels make up roughly 28 percent of the world’s oil demand, according to the IEA. They have been in especially short supply because military strikes on energy infrastructure in the Middle East and Russia have severely damaged refineries, reducing the world’s capacity to turn oil into the fuels that consumers use.

The deal is the second time nations have come together for a major release of fuel since the United States and Israel launched military strikes against Iran on Feb. 28, triggering a global energy crisis. In March, the IEA announced that world leaders would tap 400 million barrels of oil, the largest coordinated release of stockpiled oil on record by members of the energy agency.

President Trump had threatened to impose a ban on the export of US diesel, a move that has drawn fierce opposition from US oil companies and European leaders. Retail diesel prices in the United States topped $6.50 a gallon in recent weeks, the highest ever, putting pressure on Trump and Republicans to find ways to lower prices before the midterm elections in November.

“Europe has just agreed to release a massive amount of their heavily stocked Diesel Oil,” Trump said on social media of the G7 announcement.

French President Emmanuel Macron, the current G7 chair, said Trump had committed to not impose an export ban on diesel fuel. Macron, who convened Friday’s teleconference, said he expected the release of emergency oil and diesel to cause gasoline and fuel prices to “drop at the pump as quickly as possible.”

Ursula von der Leyen, the president of the 27-nation European Union, said the bloc supported the G7 decision not to restrict exports.

ClearView, an energy research firm in Washington, said in a note to clients Friday that it would not “rule out export constraints governing destinations outside the G7, but odds now look lower.”

The price of diesel futures in the United States fell 6 percent Friday. Prices that consumers pay at the pump typically follow, albeit more slowly.

Hamad Hussain, a senior economist with Capital Economics, a research firm, said it could take as much as two weeks for retail prices to fall.

“We’ll see some of the future alleviated, but it won’t be immediately obvious for consumers at the pump,” he said.

A US export ban on diesel would be deeply damaging in Europe, which has become increasingly dependent on US fuel after banning Russian imports over Russia’s invasion of Ukraine in 2022. The continent has closed significant refining capacity in recent years because of high operating costs as well as climate regulations. That has exacerbated Europe’s vulnerability, making it even more reliant on imported crude and refined fuels from the Middle East, the United States, and other regions.

‘It won’t be immediately obvious for consumers at the pump.’

HAMAD HUSSAIN, economist with Capital Economics

Europe imports about 1.5 million barrels a day, with a third coming from the United States, according to S&P Global, a market data firm.

“Europe has been very reluctant to let go of their stocks because they are concerned about a prolonged disruption, and they wish to hoard the supplies they have,” said Robert McNally, president of Rapidan Energy Group, a research and consulting firm in Washington.

Tom Kloza, chief energy adviser to Gulf Oil, called the G7 release “underwhelming,” and said it amounts to barely half of the levels once imported from Russia.

Russia had remained a big exporter of diesel beyond Europe, but this year banned exports after Ukrainian drone attacks damaged refineries. It renewed that ban this week.

Another factor weighing on the diesel market is China, the world’s biggest crude importer and a big supplier of diesel to other countries, especially in Asia.

DAILY BRIEFING

Botswana OK’s killing of elephants

GABORONE, Botswana — Botswana’s government authorized the killing of 23 elephants for its independence day celebrations this week, drawing criticism from conservationists and one of its ex-presidents.

The licenses to hunt the elephants were issued in districts across the country, with each receiving a portion of the overall quota. The elephants would provide meat for needy rural communities, authorities said Friday in defense of the move.

Botswana has a large elephant population estimated at around 130,000, more than any other country.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Taiwan gets first shipment of US jets

BANGKOK — Taiwan on Friday received the first two of 65 F-16V fighter jets ordered from the US, the island’s air force said, following years of delays.

The two F-16V Block 70 jets landed at Chihhang Air Base in Taitung. There are 63 more to be delivered. The self-ruled island, which is also claimed by Beijing as part of its territory, placed an order for the F-16Vs in 2019.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Argentina offers ‘golden passport’

BUENOS AIRES — Argentina on Friday announced plans to offer citizenship to wealthy foreigners in exchange for cash contributions or investments in government bonds, as libertarian President Javier Milei seeks new sources of dollars for the debt-burdened nation.

Economy Minister Luis Caputo unveiled the so-called golden passport scheme at an investor event in Paris, saying applications are expected to open before the end of the year.

Applicants have two options: make a nonrefundable $350,000 contribution to the Argentine Treasury or invest $800,000 in a new government bond that must be held for seven years. Contributions would increase depending on family size.

Securing dollars is critical for Milei as he prepares to seek reelection next year. Argentina’s Treasury faces nearly $25 billion in foreign-currency debt payments coming due in 2027. But having narrowed its financing options by holding off on a return to international bond markets, the government is searching for alternative sources of revenue.

A consortium of investment firms advising the government estimated that the paid-citizenship program could raise up to $2.5 billion.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Protesters rally against ‘vote theft’

Widespread protests broke out across several cities in India on Friday, with demonstrators demanding the resignation of the country’s election chief over allegations of voter roll manipulation that have rattled the nation in recent months.

In Mumbai, the financial capital, thousands of people filled the streets around a prominent park, singing, clapping, and waving Indian flags as columns of police watched. In New Delhi, police moved in with force, detaining hundreds of protesters after barricading large parts of the capital’s center and restricting internet access.

The rallies were part of a call for nationwide agitation against an ongoing, contentious revision of India’s voter rolls that has resulted in the removal of more than 130 million names so far. Opposition groups have accused Prime Minister Narendra Modi of “vote theft,” claiming that his party is using the election commission to try and rig the rolls in its favor.

But the growing protests have also expressed a wider dissatisfaction with Modi, who has established an uncompromising grip on power over his 12 years as the leader of India.

NEW YORK TIMES

Ukraine reports first combat use of own ballistic missile

Longer-range version of weapon also in the works

By Andrew E. Kramer
NEW YORK TIMES

KYIV — President Volodymyr Zelensky said Ukraine had fired a domestically made ballistic missile in combat for the first time. It is a breakthrough in Kyiv’s push to field a powerful weapon that Russia has used against Ukraine to devastating effect.

Zelensky trumpeted the launch with a post on social media late Thursday that included a video of a missile blasting off. “Ukrainian tactical ballistics. FP-7. First combat use,” he wrote. The post did not say what was targeted, and Zelensky’s office declined to comment.

The FP-7, produced by the Ukrainian company Fire Point, is a short-range missile that can reach only border regions inside Russia. The weapon is not expected to significantly shift what has become an escalating air war between the two countries.

But Fire Point is also developing a larger ballistic missile, the FP-9, that would be able to reach Moscow and strategic defense industry targets. Ukraine says that missile, which analysts think has a greater potential to change the dynamics of the war, is expected to be ready later this year.

Ballistic missiles stand at the top of the weapons hierarchy for air attacks. They are hard to intercept, fly quickly to targets, and can carry a heavier payload than most of the exploding drones that Ukraine now uses.

The launch of the FP-7 returns Ukraine to a small group of countries producing ballistic missiles.

Decades ago, when Ukraine was part of the Soviet Union, it had a large military aerospace industry. Factories there built several models of intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Those production lines were shut down after the Soviet breakup in 1991, and the industry has since mostly withered.

Russia has been firing an array of ballistic missiles at Ukraine since the start of its full invasion of the country in 2022, including an intermediate-range missile that was designed for nuclear explosives but fired with dummy warheads.

Ukraine has fired US-made ATACMS tactical ballistic missiles at Russian forces in occupied areas of Ukraine and into areas of Russia close to the border.

The FP-7, the missile whose launch Ukraine announced on Thursday, has a range of 155 miles and can carry a payload weighing 440 pounds, according to Fire Point.

Military analysts say that a likely use for the missile will be counterattacks on Russian missile launchers, rather than strikes on strategic targets such as defense factories inside Russia.

“It will be a specialized weapon,” said Serhiy Hrabsky, a retired colonel and a commentator on the war for the Ukrainian media. “Ukraine cannot produce dozens of them daily.”

But the missile could help tip the economics of the missile and drone war more in Ukraine’s favor.

Targeting Russian missile

‘It will be a specialty weapon. Ukraine cannot produce dozens of them daily.’

SERHIY HRABSKY, retired colonel, on the use of Ukraine’s short-range missile launchers is more economical than trying to shoot down Russia’s ballistic missiles in flight with US-made Patriot interceptors, Hrabsky said. Patriot interceptors cost millions of dollars each and are in short supply globally.

Fire Point has said it is restarting ballistic missile production in Ukraine from scratch.

It says it is relying on new technologies adapted from modern consumer goods, such as a type of carbon fiber originally intended to make bicycle frames.

The war has increasingly turned to the skies as Ukraine has essentially fought Russia to a standstill on the ground.

Russian missile and drone strikes are intended to cripple Ukraine’s economy and raise the cost to European allies of supporting the country. The attacks also aim to demoralize the population with electrical blackouts.

Ukraine’s own long-range strikes, largely with drones, have focused on oil refineries, oil ports, and oil tankers to harm Russia’s economy.

Russia now has the upper hand in the drone and missile war, launching far more of both types of long-range weapons than the numbers of exploding drones that Ukraine has fired back.

In Ukraine, the FP-7 has been nicknamed the Pelican. On Sept. 20, Zelensky said in a statement that Ukraine had fired a weapon called the Pelican into Russia.

Confusion followed as Zelensky’s office later said he had been referring to a drone, not a missile.

Fire Point declined to comment after that launch. It has referred to its ballistic missiles as “ballistic drones” for legal reasons, because Ukraine is a party to a Cold War-era pact, the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty, that limits the range of ground-launched missiles.

Russia and the United States have withdrawn from the treaty. Zelensky’s post Thursday referred to a use of “tactical ballistics,” seemingly distinguishing the weapon from more destructive strategic missiles.

American University of Afghanistan loses its funding from US

Decision puts school, women’s education at risk

By Elian Peltier, Yaqoob Akbary, and Safiullah Padshah
NEW YORK TIMES

The American University of Afghanistan, one of the most potent symbols of America’s decades in the country, has lost its State Department funding, putting the education of hundreds of Afghan women at risk, the school’s president said.

The State Department on Tuesday denied the university’s application for $25 million in funding for the next two years, according to David Edwards, a professor and the interim president of the university. As a condition of remaining open, it must partner with the American University of Central Asia, based in Kyrgyzstan.

Edwards said he would work with the university in Kyrgyzstan, even though that campus does not offer remote instruction, the only way women in Afghanistan can receive higher education. The American University of Afghanistan serves about 1,000 students, all online, three-quarters of whom are women. About 90 percent of the students are in Afghanistan, with teachers in the country and abroad.

“We are the only venue for education for a whole generation of Afghans, and this point seems to be lost on the current administration,” Edwards said.

The State Department said in a statement that the US government would stop dedicating any funds to the university at the end of the year, citing a “history of repeated lack of accountability for millions of American taxpayer dollars.”

The university faced allegations of mismanagement in 2019, under previous leadership, when US officials said that more than $60 million had gone missing.

Edwards said the university had addressed those issues and that all of its audits have been clean since 2021.

The State Department described the university as a “private entity.” It said the United States remained dedicated to supporting Afghan women and girls’ education through remote education programs. “We are currently working to identify implementing partners who can responsibly administer these programs,” it said.

An anthropology professor who assumed the university’s interim leadership in March, Edwards visited British and German universities this summer to seek alternative funding and said he didn’t know how the university would finance the next semester.

The American University of Afghanistan was established in 2006 as a liberal arts college to train the next generation of Afghan leaders. Based in the capital, Kabul, it was one of the US Agency for International Development’s largest civilian projects in Afghanistan, receiving more than $225 million since its founding.

When the Taliban overthrew the US-backed Afghan government in 2021, the university’s foreign staff members were evacuated, and some students fled to Iraq, the United States, and other countries. Others remained in Afghanistan but went into hiding. The Taliban had condemned the university, calling it a place where Americans tried to corrupt the minds of Muslims.

A large portion of USAID funds had gone into building the university campus in the heart of Kabul. But the Taliban seized it and established their own institution there, the Afghan International Islamic University, where 1,000 students now study Islamic law, engineering, medicine, and other subjects.

All of them are men.

More than 2.6 million Afghan girls and women have been barred from formal education beyond sixth grade under the Taliban, according to UNESCO. Some study in secret schools that the Taliban tolerate but can close at any time.

The Taliban have allowed the American University to provide education to Afghan women as long as they study at home.

The university suspended operations for one semester last year after the Trump administration announced the dismantling of USAID. It also closed a satellite campus in Qatar. This year, it laid off more than 40 employees and downsized admissions because of funding cuts, Edwards said.

With the university’s future in doubt, students say they may lose their best opportunity to study in Afghanistan under the current Taliban government.

Sara, a computer science student, went back to her studies last year after an eight-year gap, when she started a family. She studies Python code, business, and Afghan history in the afternoon and at night, once she has put her 7-year-old daughter to bed.

“This is the only place where I see a future for myself,” said Sara, 26. Tuition fees at other online institutions are too high, she said, and most jobs are out of reach because she lacks an undergraduate degree.

Sara spoke on the condition of using only her first name, for fear of reprisal by the Taliban.

Katayoon Sultani, 28, said that the funding cuts at the university made her feel powerless. In the meantime, she balances five courses, including political science, accounting, and creative writing, while freelancing as a digital marketing consultant.

ELIA BORRAS/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Adama Sanoua, a deaf, nonspeaking Burkinabé dancer, participated in a physical training session in Bobo-Dioulasso in May.

In Burkina Faso, deaf dancers pursue dream

Music translated into vibrations and visual cues

By Elia Borras
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOBO-DIOULASSO, Burkina Faso — The music is turned all the way up, sending vibrations through the rubber-covered stage as Yaya Sanou translates the beat with his face and gestures for a small group gathered around in Burkina Faso’s western city of Bobo-Dioulasso.

The group of deaf and non-verbal dancers follow the rhythm and music through the vibrations and body gestures, part of a local technique created by Sanou to make it possible to follow music even without hearing it.

The Vibra-Signe technique has gained popularity in and outside Burkina Faso with its use by members of the Fientan dance company, which Sanou, a dance tutor and choreographer, founded a decade ago in Bobo-Dioulasso for deaf and hard-of-hearing dancers.

Vibra-Signe translates music into vibrations, touch, and visual cues. Dancing barefoot, performers feel the percussion through the floor, while taps, signs, gestures, and facial expressions communicate the tempo, transitions, and emotional intensity of the choreography.

With Vibra-Signe, Fientan won a gold medal for dance creation at the 2023 Francophone Games in Congo’s capital of Kinshasa. The group has also performed its latest production, “Adeptes de mon être,” which in English means “Devoted to my being,” in Germany and Ivory Coast.

In the West African nation, where government support is limited and resources are inadequate, Vibra-Signe has empowered the dancers and improved their social skills.

Even the group’s name is empowering, they say, as Fientan means “without disability” in the local Dioula language.

“This teaching method is an opportunity (for us) and also a solution to a problem ... that gives young people the possibility to express themselves and to say what they want to say,” Adama Sanou, one of the dancers, said in sign language.

Sanou, the tutor, began his time to master the technique to follow the rhythm, vibrations, and body movements, but that the result has been fulfilling for him and his students.

“With this project, we give these young people the possibility to express themselves and to say what they want to say,” he said.

There’s no recent data available on the number of deaf and hard-of-hearing people in Burkina Faso, but the 2019 census recorded about 46,500 people aged 2 or older who had significant difficulty hearing or could not hear at all.

The country of around 24 million people has adopted education programs and measures intended to improve living conditions for people with disabilities, including deaf and hard-of-hearing people. But rights advocates and experts say there are still shortages of teachers, sign-language interpreters, and support services.

Although American Sign Language is taught in schools, it doesn’t reflect the local languages spoken in homes. Moreover, many deaf children never get the chance to learn sign language until they enroll in school, sometimes not until they’re 10 years old.

Burkina Faso’s Institute of Social Sciences published a study showing that 58 percent of respondents have a “negative” perception of deafness because it is considered a “curse” or a “spiritual punishment.”

Vibra-Signe is a great way to improve inclusion for children with disabilities and could be modified to be integrated into other programs including education, said Philo Camara, a disability advocate in the country.

At the dance studio in Bobo-Dioulasso, members of Fientan have developed ways to identify themselves and communicate.

Souleymane Barro, a 24-year-old deaf dancer, introduces himself with a sign combining the “B” in Barro with the “S” in Souleymane. “As a deaf person, it is difficult to get ahead,” Barro said. “But I am working to become a professional and teach the younger ones to dance.”

‘This teaching method is an opportunity . . . that gives young people the possibility to express themselves and to say what they want to say.’

ADAMA SANOU, one of the dancers, said in sign language

Cultural and societal norms meant some of the children faced resistance from families when they talked about joining the dance group.

“When I suggested it to my father, he did not like it at first, but I kept dancing,” said dancer Sanou, who is not related to trainer Yaya Sanou.

At a recent rehearsal, curious children drifted in, captivated by the dancers. The music played nonstop as the tutor communicated with his hands, face, and body. The dancers repeated the movements, their eyes fixed on him.

Ouaramata Sanou, 26, once watched from the sidelines, but joining the group has opened up a new life, she said.

“Before, I watched people doing things, dancing, and I did nothing,” she said. “But now I dance, and I can travel.”

Woman on ventilator after failed execution, attorneys say

Independent review ordered by Tenn. governor

By Kim Chandler and Jamie Stengle

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christa Pike was placed on a ventilator and remained unconscious in a hospital in the hours after her failed execution in Tennessee, her attorneys said in a court filing Friday.

Hospital staff, her lawyers said, were working to save Pike's life and as of late Thursday were trying to clear the two doses of the drug that the state uses to execute prisoners.

The stunning failure in Tennessee's execution chamber on Wednesday has left both sides of the death penalty debate demanding answers. Tennessee Governor Bill Lee has ordered an independent review.

The court filing offered the first detailed account of Pike's condition after an ambulance carried her away from Riverbend Maximum Security Institution in Nashville on Wednesday night. Her attorneys said a day earlier that she was in critical condition.

Pike's attorneys said they believed problems with the IV lines caused the pentobarbital to flow into her body instead of her bloodstream.

"Apparently at no point did any member of the execution team realize that the IV lines were not correctly placed or that the veins had blown and that the pentobarbital was, in whole or in part, entering Ms. Pike's body," they wrote in the court filing.

Instead of "remedying this failure," they prepared and administered a second dose of pentobarbital, her lawyers said.

State officials have not offered any explanations about what went wrong.

Lee demanded a review of the execution procedures and indefinitely postponed Pike's execution and another that had been scheduled for this year. Republican Tennessee lawmakers said the state should review whether to stop single-drug lethal injections and consider other options to carry out death sentences.

The execution team worked

Protesters gathered for the planned execution of Christa Pike (left), Wednesday, in Nashville.

for an hour to administer the lethal drugs, said Pike's defense lawyer Randy Spivey, who counted at least seven needles in her left arm.

Neither the initial nor the backup dose of pentobarbital worked. Pike was still snoring when the execution chamber's microphone was cut off more than an hour into the attempt.

Pike's attorneys asked a state court to order the Tennessee Department of Correction to preserve all evidence from the failed execution.

GEORGE WALKER IV/ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Preserving this evidence is essential to understanding what happened, ensuring accountability and protecting Christa's legal rights," two of her attorneys said in a statement.

She was 18 when she and her boyfriend tortured and killed a classmate, Colleen Slemmer, in a jealous rage. She later became one of the youngest women to be sent to death row.

Following the killing, Pike was diagnosed with bipolar disorder and post-traumatic stress disorder, her attorneys said.

"It took me numerous years to even realize the gravity of what I'd done. Even more to accept how many lives I affected. I took the life of someone's child, sister, friend. It sickens me now to think I had the ability to commit such a crime," Pike said in an earlier clemency petition.

The mother of the 19-year-old woman Pike killed expressed frustration over the failed execution. "I didn't get justice for my daughter," May Martinez said Thursday.

Four years ago, Tennessee's governor ordered another independent review into capital punishment after abruptly stopping the April 2022 execution of Oscar Smith. Lee then paused all executions after acknowledging the state had failed to ensure its lethal injection drugs were properly tested.

Months later, a report found the state hadn't complied with its own lethal injection process since its revision in 2018, resulting in executions being conducted without proper testing of the drugs.

At the time, the state used a three-drug execution protocol of midazolam, vecuronium bromide, and potassium chloride. The state later switched to using just pentobarbital.

Pentobarbital has been used to carry out death sentences in multiple states and by the federal government.

The review, led by former US Attorney Ed Stanton, also found that the state's unidentified executioner had no formal health care training and learned the role mainly through on-the-job experience.

Wildfires require a new approach, California report finds

By Shawn Hubler

NEW YORK TIMES

LOS ANGELES — Wildfires have become so deadly and vast that urban areas need to rethink their approach to fighting them, an investigation into the fires that devastated parts of Southern California last year reported Friday. The study found that the protocols firefighters relied on as flames erupted in the Palisades and Altadena fires were overwhelmed by the disaster's "speed, scale, and complexity."

The analysis found that while several state and local agencies fell fatally short in their preparation and response, the clearest lesson was the extent to which climate-driven fires are outstripping modern firefighting.

"The Southern California fires got so large, so fast, that they outpaced the capabilities of the very people trained to fight them," Derek Alkonis, a senior research program manager for the Fire Safety Research Institute, said in a recorded news briefing. "Some of the most well-trained firefighters in the world" work in the state, he said, but their training and coordination have not kept up with the risk.

The review, commissioned by California Governor Gavin Newsom and conducted by UL Research Institutes, a public safety nonprofit, was the second part of a wide-ranging examination, and the latest in a series of local, state, and federal postmortems after the fires that erupted in and around Los Angeles starting Jan. 7, 2025.

At least 12 wildfires raged over that month across drought-parched Los Angeles and Ventura counties, driven by extreme winds. The two largest — in the coastal Los Angeles enclave of Pacific Palisades and the historic San Gabriel Valley community of Altadena — killed 31 people and destroyed more than 16,000 buildings. Thousands of survivors remain displaced.

Calls for accountability have been intense. Federal authorities have attributed the Palisades fire to buried embers that smoldered for days and then rekindled after Los Angeles city firefighters declared a small Jan. 1 brush fire extinguished. A 30-year-old man has pleaded not guilty to federal arson charges in connection with that initial fire.

Los Angeles County fire investigators have traced the Altadena fire to a transmission tower belonging to the utility company Southern California Edison.

But government agencies also have been accused of failing to do all they could to preempt the fires after meteorologists warned of an incoming windstorm, and to control the flames once the fires started.

The Los Angeles Fire Department failed to adequately deploy firefighters and equipment ahead of time in and around Pacific Palisades despite heightened fire risk, decisions that the department's internal review blamed on efforts to control spending and overtime. The Los Angeles Department of Water and Power has been sued over a disastrous loss of water pressure to fire hydrants in Palisades; survivors say the fire might have been mitigated had a critical city reservoir not been emptied.

Los Angeles County, which had jurisdiction over the Eaton fire in Altadena, has been sued over late evacuations in an area where at least 18 people died.

Friday's report found that Los Angeles city fire officials underestimated the fire risk, failed to deploy enough fire equipment ahead of time in Pacific Palisades, and disastrously opted against holding over a shift of firefighters.

BOSTON GLOBE MEDIA

1 Exchange Place, Suite 201
Boston, MA 02109-2132

The Boston Globe (USPS061-420) is published Monday–Saturday.
Periodicals postage–paid at Boston, MA.
Postmaster, send address changes to:

Mail Subscription Department 300 Constitution Dr.
Taunton, MA 02783

YEARLY MAIL SUBSCRIPTION RATES FOR NEW ENGLAND

Seven days$1,612.00
Daily (6 Days)$1,060.80
Sunday only$520.00

For all other mail subscription rates and information, call 1-888-MYGLOBE or visit www.bostonglobe.com/subscribe

Free newspaper reading service for the visually impaired: Contact
Perkins Braille & Talking Book Library at 800-852-3133 or www.perkinslibrary.org

From the Charles to Prospect Hill...

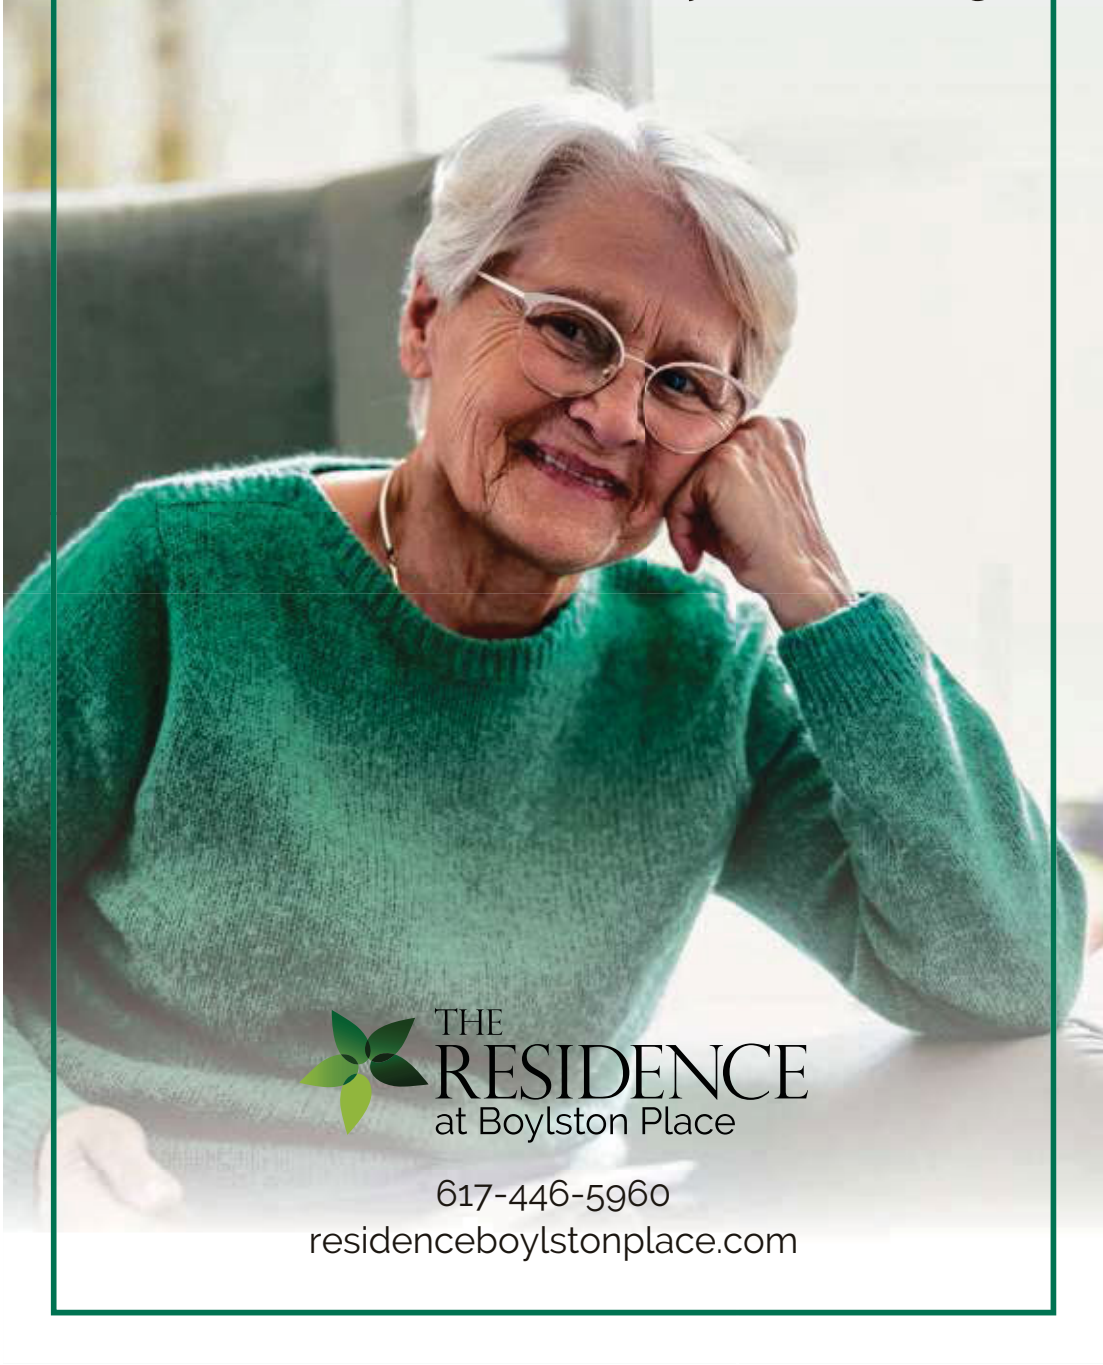

Curated by Camberville editor Joshua Miller, Camberville is your weekly guide to the interesting news, people, and events taking place in Cambridge and Somerville.

Sign up today at Globe.com/camberville

Where People Who Expect More, Already Live

Independent, Assisted & Memory Care Living

THE RESIDENCE at Boylston Place

617-446-5960
residenceboylstonplace.com

Cambridge may turn to its dry day fund

►WATER
Continued from Page A1

still sees the trends. Between 1965 and 2015, the city says, Cambridge experienced only three major droughts.

Since 2016, officials said, Cambridge has had five, including the drought that began in 2025 and continues to this day. And because Cambridge's reservoirs are not nearly as big as the ones that supply Boston, Somerville, and much of the rest of the metro area, they are more susceptible to long dry spells.

How'd we get here? Let's roll back the tape.

From the time the first Europeans settled in what would become Cambridge, residents got their water mostly from wells. But in the 1840s, Cambridge began to grow more quickly, and wells had trouble keeping up. Entrepreneurs founded the Cambridge Water Works in 1852, but building out the infrastructure was extremely expensive, said Charlie Sullivan, the longtime director of the Cambridge Historical Commission. The company moved relatively slowly, and in 1865, the city acquired it and sped up the effort to lay pipe across all of Cambridge.

There was good reason to move quickly: Boston, which had obtained a good supply of water through the Cochituate Aqueduct, would soon be absorbing municipalities such as Roxbury at a rapid clip, with its water supply as an important incentive.

Cambridge resisted the idea of being annexed by Boston. The prevailing sentiment was "Cambridge didn't want to be taken over and subsumed into a big city and lose its independent political voice," Sullivan told me. "Perhaps an early example of Cambridge exceptionalism."

In the late 1880s and 1890s, Cambridge secured a broader water supply. It created the Stony Brook Reservoir and the Hobbs Brook Reservoir in nearby towns, annexed land around Fresh Pond, and built a big reservoir at a higher elevation in Belmont.

And that, more or less, is still how water in Cambridge works. It flows from the Hobbs Brook to the Stony Brook, then through a gigantic person-sized pipe to Fresh Pond. There, it's treated and pumped up to Payson Park in Belmont, where gravity sends it to taps all across Cambridge.

Unless there's a problem. Like, say, a long drought.

When Cambridge needs extra

PHOTOS BY DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF

water, it calls up folks at the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. That entity draws from the Quabbin Reservoir, one of the largest human-made reservoirs in the world devoted solely to water supply. It's so big that despite significant demand from Boston and Somerville and Medford and a bunch of other cities and towns and even amid a drought, the system has plenty of water, MWRA interim executive director Stephen Estes-Smargiassi told me this week.

In the time since Cambridge has had access to the Quabbin system when needed, it hasn't used it that much, Estes-Smargiassi said. Yes, if it's a long dry spell, or if the city is doing major work on its treatment plant, or something breaks, but it's not a regular thing.

Still, he said, the climate is changing and the MWRA is projecting that Cambridge will need to buy more supplemental water in future years.

So when, exactly, does Cambridge need to make the call?

Right now, the smaller Stony Brook and Fresh Pond reservoirs are effectively full, while the Hobbs Brook is at about 20 percent of its capacity, city officials said. If it gets to 15 percent, the water department will start buying supplemental water. Gallagher said it could cost as much as $60,000 each day, depending on how much MWRA water Cambridge uses.

Above, signs were posted near the depleted Hobbs Brook Reservoir. Left, the Walter J. Sullivan Water Treatment Facility processes water for the city of Cambridge.

To that end, on Monday night, the City Council approved moving $2.25 million around to have cash available to purchase Quabbin water.

Even though Cambridge has made huge strides in reducing water use and its per capita consumption, "demand reduction alone can no longer compensate for climate-driven storage shortfalls," the city manager wrote to councilors.

So why not just scrap the old Cambridge system and buy MWRA water?

It would cost the city twice as much, Gallagher calculated — tens of millions of dollars more every year — in part because Cambridge would still have to maintain its reservoirs, even if it didn't use them.

The status quo is better, he argued. "We have our own 100 percent supply, but we also have 100 percent backup," he said. In 2010, when the MWRA had a catastrophic water main break and millions of people were under a boil-water order, "you should have seen the lines at Dunkin' Donuts here in Cambridge because we had our own water."

So the Cambridge exceptionalism of the 19th century will continue in the 21st. And if the weather continues to be way drier than normal, soon, someone from the city's water department will head over to one of three interconnection points with the MWRA, turn a valve, and Quabbin water will start flowing through city pipes.

"Nobody knows the difference," Gallagher said with a laugh — well, except for some of the big labs and Lamplighter, "the brewery right down the street, because they watch their water chemistry really closely."

It is Cambridge, after all.

Joshua Miller can be reached at joshua.miller@globe.com.

Citing 'guidelines,' T pulls ads critical of city's schools

►BPS
Continued from Page A1

about the ads to the T on Wednesday evening, and a follow-up around midday Thursday. After not receiving a response, the Globe sent a text message to a T spokesperson, which included a photograph of one of the ads displayed in a Red Line car.

The Globe also contacted the offices of Boston Mayor Michelle Wu and BPS Superintendent Mary Skipper on Thursday afternoon but did not immediately receive a response.

After those inquiries, a T spokesperson responded to say the ads were being taken down as of late Thursday afternoon. The spokesperson followed up with a copy of the T's "Guidelines Regulating MBTA Advertising," but would not say what specific provision the ads violated.

Local education advocate Mary Tamer, one of the leaders of the group that organized the ads, described the move as censorship.

On Friday night, another T spokesperson gave a reason for the removal: Generally, "the MBTA does not accept political advertisements or issue advocacy or endorsements," the T's Lisa Battiston said.

Outfront Media, which handles booking for ads on the T, did not respond to a request for comment Friday.

Veronica Yoo, a Wu spokesperson, said in a statement late Friday that neither the city nor BPS has had any communication with the MBTA regarding its decisions to either place or remove the ads.

She criticized the nonprofit for spending money on advertising to attack Boston's schools.

"If its funders are serious about supporting Boston students, those resources would be far better invested directly in the educational opportunities and resources our kids deserve — and that our families, educators, and school communities are fighting to deliver everyday," Yoo said.

Meanwhile, BPS spokesperson Sujata Wycoff said school administrators were aware of the ads.

"Our focus remains on improving the education for all of our students and ensuring each student is prepared for success

Generally, 'the MBTA does not accept political advertisements or issue advocacy or endorsements.'

LISA BATTISTON, MBTA spokesperson beyond the classroom," Wycoff said in a statement.

The nonprofit group, led by local education advocates Tamer and Vernee Wilkinson, calls itself Next Chapter Boston. Tamer declined to reveal a list of donors to their organization — including an unnamed out-of-state foundation. About seven or eight donors contributed $1.5 million, Tamer said. She named two: local philanthropists Rick Burnes and Michael Champa.

Tamer, a former Boston School Committee member appointed by former mayor Thomas Menino, declined to say what foundation supported the nonprofit because it operates anonymously. She said the foundation donates millions of dollars to causes and asks recipients to not disclose who they are.

Champa, a retired technology entrepreneur who has served as a Dana-Farber trustee, said in a brief interview that he supported the campaign because he's concerned about the quality of Boston's schools.

"Massachusetts has always prided itself as having one of the best education systems in the country, but when seven of 10 kids in the city of Boston can't read at grade level, that borders on a crisis," Champa said. "Boston educators and the mayor have to acknowledge that there's a significant problem, and then put a plan together to fix it."

Burnes, a founder of Charles River Ventures, has been a prolific donor to candidates and political causes, including $60,000 to the Coalition for Healthy Democracy, which is working to eliminate the state's current party primary system.

In 2024, Burnes donated $100,000 to a group that opposed a ballot question asking voters to eliminate MCAS as a high school graduation requirement, state records show.

Burnes did not respond to an interview request.

Tamer said the ads were created by an out-of-state agency and the children in the photographs do not attend Boston Public Schools.

In a statement, Lea Serena, the executive vice president of the Boston Teachers Union, criticized the campaign. The challenges facing Boston aren't unique, as test scores across the country and the world have declined since before the pandemic, Serena said.

"Perhaps if they really want to help local students, this group should funnel the money they're putting into subway ads toward restoring the funds that the Trump administration has taken away from public school students," Serena said.

But the public won't get to see the ads donors paid for on the T, at least not right away.

Tamer said the T granted approval for the ads weeks ago. She shared a screenshot sent by an Outfront Media employee that appeared to confirm the ads were in place on Thursday morning.

"Why is telling the truth about the poor outcomes in the BPS against the standards of the MBTA? This is a poor reflection on honesty and transparency in government and an attempt to squash a needed call to action for improvement," Tamer said. "This effort is about one clear goal: to see significant academic gains in student outcomes in the Boston Public Schools."

The nonprofit has already taken to publicizing data it says shows the Boston Public Schools' academic shortcomings online, on its website.

The district spent about $34,000 per student in 2024, the most recent state data available. But it serves some of the most vulnerable children in Massachusetts. Most BPS students are classified as high needs, including kids who are low income, are learning English as a second language, or have disabilities, according to the state.

The school system, which is the largest in Massachusetts, ranks in the bottom third of MCAS scores in grades 3 to 8 for school districts, according to state data.

Its most recent test scores, released by the state last week, showed that 29 percent of students in grades 3 to 8 met or exceeded expectations in English and math, while one-third of 10th-graders met that standard.

Those figures are below statewide statistics for both groups of students. But Boston's results are reflective of an overall decline in student achievement across the state since before the pandemic, test scores show, and indicate that students largely haven't improved much since last year.

There were some highlights. Boston officials, in a press release, pointed to a rise in math scores in grades 6 and 8 and an uptick on the eighth-grade science exam.

But Tamer and Wilkinson said that Wu, Skipper, and the city's School Committee are not spending enough time talking about students' poor academic outcomes, nor what they intend to do to improve them.

"This is the conversation that needs to happen, because you can't change a problem until you acknowledge its existence," Tamer said.

Marcela Rodrigues of the Globe staff contributed to this report. John Hilliard can be reached at john.hilliard@globe.com or on Signal at john_hilliard.70. Follow him on Bluesky at iamjohnhilliard.bsky.social.

Super PAC pulls ads out of N.C. Senate race

Sign of trouble for GOP candidate

By Shane Goldmacher and Theodore Schleifer
NEW YORK TIMES

The top super political action committee for Senate Republicans is canceling all the remaining ads it had booked in North Carolina as of Friday, shifting away tens of millions of dollars in a move that signals that Republicans no longer see a path to winning the state this fall.

At the same time, the super PAC, called the Senate Leadership Fund, is making its first investment of the cycle in Kansas — a sign of rising concern among Republicans in red states — with a new ad attacking the Democratic nominee there.

If Republicans lose North Carolina, it would give Democrats one of the four seats they need to flip the Senate in the fall — if Democrats hold all of their own seats.

Ad cancellations are a common, and very telling, move down the stretch of campaigns, as they reveal where national operatives see their best path to a majority. The cancellation of the North Carolina ads was first reported by Semafor and confirmed by two people familiar with the decision.

The North Carolina seat is currently held by Senator Thom Tillis, a Republican who is retiring. Democrats nominated Roy Cooper, a popular former governor who had served two terms. The Republican nominee is Michael Whatley, the former chair of the Republican National Committee.

The Senate Leadership Fund declined to comment.

"Undecided voters who break late decide the election in North Carolina, and the majority of those late-breakers typically go Republican," said DJ Griffin, a spokesperson for Whatley, adding he was "confident we have the resources to highlight career politician Roy Cooper's 40 years of failures."

Super PACs aligned with President Trump also do not have any future reservations for airtime in the North Carolina Senate race.

In Kansas, the new reservation shows that Republicans are worried about the reelection bid of Senator Roger Marshall, the Republican incumbent, who faces Adam Hamilton, the pastor of the largest United Methodist congregation in the country.

The new ad attacks Hamilton as a "two-faced extremist."

The full size of the Kansas spending was not clear, but as of midday Friday, the Senate Leadership Fund had booked $8.2 million worth of ads in the state, according to data from AdImpact, the ad-tracking service.

The Senate Leadership Fund had initially planned to spend $71 million in North Carolina. The group has spent more than $30 million of those funds, according to one of the people familiar with the decision. The group still had $18 million reserved for the final month just on broadcast and cable television, according to AdImpact.

Senator John Thune of South Dakota, the majority leader, has continued to back Whatley and attended a fundraiser for him virtually Thursday, the two people familiar with the decision said.

Cooper's campaign suggested Democrats should not be complacent, even as Republicans pulled back on their spending. "A Democrat has not won statewide federal office here in nearly two decades, and North Carolina is a 50-50 state," said Jeff Allen, his campaign manager.

In preparation for these cancellations, an increased number of Republican Senate candidates started their own dedicated super PACs, in part so they could insulate themselves from cuts from the Senate Leadership Fund. And yet Whatley's dedicated group, Old North Action, previously canceled ads as well.

Taxpayer funds went to ads praising Trump presidency

WASHINGTON — President Trump personally instructed his budget director to use taxpayer money for TV ads praising him and his presidency, setting in motion a $20 million contract that used funds from the Department of Homeland Security, according to people familiar with the matter.

The ads have run across cable and network television — on Fox News, CNN, and MS Now, with football games on Fox and with national newscasts on CBS, ABC, and NBC, including “Meet the Press.”

Trump was eager to see the laudatory ads on the air and told Russell Vought, the director of the Office of Management and Budget, to come up with the money from within the government, the people said. Mark Paoletta, the budget office’s counsel, and Will Scharf, the White House counsel, both said it would be legal to use DHS funds.

The president and Susie Wiles, the White House chief of staff, both spoke with Markwayne Mullin, the homeland security secretary, about the ads.

On Sept. 20, US Customs and Border Protection — which falls under DHS — awarded the contract to LMD, a Maryland marketing firm, federal records show.

The taxpayer-funded ads have been criticized by Democrats and even some Republicans as a possible violation of federal laws against using taxpayer dollars for “publicity or propaganda purposes.”

The White House has called the ads public service announcements and said they are appropriate because there is no “call to action” to vote for any candidate. Some of his aides also noted that Trump is not running for office now, in an attempt to blunt criticism of the ads as violating federal laws about the use of public money.

When pressed by a reporter Wednesday, Trump said: “If somebody said that that’s wrong, I’ll gladly pay the money. “But these are ads for the country,” he added. “You have to understand. I’m not promoting a candidate. I’m not promoting myself because I’m not running for office. I’m promoting the country.”

At least four spots have run so far, at a cost of about $5.5 million, and that is expected to grow, according to media tracker AdImpact and people familiar with the spending.

Such public service spots typically say which agency paid for them. In this case, all of the ads had an unusual tagline: “Paid for by the U.S. government.”

NEW YORK TIMES

Ruling halts border wall work in part of Texas

WASHINGTON — A federal court in Texas on Friday issued a ruling temporarily blocking the Trump administration from building a border wall and other infrastructure across the state’s Big Bend region.

The news marks a major win for landowners, businesses, and environmentalists in the region who have united to oppose the planned infrastructure projects, which are part of a $46 billion effort by the Trump administration to line the southern border with a mix of 30-foot-tall steel walls, vehicle barriers, roads, and surveillance technology.

Judge Kathleen Cardone said in her ruling that the plaintiffs were “likely to succeed on the merits of at least one of the claims in suit, that there is a likelihood that they will suffer serious, irreparable harm without an injunction, and that the balance of the equities and the public interest weigh in their favor.”

Customs and Border Protection and the Department of Homeland Security did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Opponents of the border wall project have argued that the Big Bend region of Texas is so remote and the landscape so rugged that it serves as its own deterrent to illegal immigration and that the administration violated the law when it issued a swath of waivers allowing it to bypass numerous regulations in order to speed up border wall infrastructure projects.

Laiken Jordahl, with the Center of Biological Diversity that brought the suit, called Cardone’s ruling a “total victory.”

“The bulldozers are going to be sent packing until she rules on the merits,” Jordahl said. “This is such a historic day for Big Bend and for Texas and the Constitution.”

The court’s decision comes just weeks after the administration erected the first border wall panels in the Big Bend sector in the middle of September.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kennedy Center Honors slated for D.C. arena

WASHINGTON — The Kennedy Center Honors will be held this year at Capital One Arena in Washington, the performing arts institution said Friday, as its future remained tied up in a court battle over President Trump’s $250 million renovation project.

The annual ceremony has been the marquee event for the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts since 1978, when it first honored a select group of artistic luminaries. It has since become a fixture of the Washington arts calendar, drawing celebrities, congressional members from both parties, and the president for tributes by performers like Aretha Franklin, Beyoncé, and James Taylor.

In Trump’s second term, the Kennedy Center has become a focus of his campaign to transform Washington’s cultural landscape, seeking to rid leading institutions of perceived liberal agendas and shape them to his aesthetic tastes.

As Trump pushes to close the center for two years of renovations, he is trading the ruby-red Opera House for the 20,000-seat home of the NBA’s Washington Wizards and the NHL’s Washington Capitals.

Like almost everything at the Kennedy Center, the honors ceremony has been upended by Trump’s takeover of the institution.

Last year, he personally approved the honorees and stepped in as the ceremony’s emcee, using part of the night to hail his signature policy bill.

This year’s ceremony is scheduled for Dec. 7. It is unclear whether Trump will return as host, but a “save the date” notice included a picture of him walking onstage last year to a standing ovation. The ceremony is typically broadcast on television at a later date.

The Kennedy Center is trying to persuade a federal judge to allow it to close.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ex-congressman receives 10-year prison sentence

MIAMI — A former Republican congressman and longtime friend of Secretary of State Marco Rubio received a 10-year prison sentence on Friday for concealing a $50 million lobbying campaign on Venezuela’s behalf during the first Trump administration.

David Rivera of Miami has been jailed since his conviction in May for conspiracy to commit money laundering and failing to register as a foreign agent for the government of Nicolás Maduro.

Rivera, 61, appeared stone-faced as Judge Melissa Damian denounced him for betraying his life’s mission. His many friends in Miami would surely judge him harshly had the millions of dollars come from Cuba’s communist regime instead of its allies in Caracas, she said.

“Nobody would accept that’s OK, and I don’t think this is different,” the judge said. “There’s no dispute this money came from the Maduro regime.”

The case offered a rare glimpse into foreign influence campaigns aimed at shaping US policy toward Latin America, highlighting Miami’s reputation as a magnet for both anti-communist crusaders and corruption among its sizable exile population.

President Trump’s secretary of state, Representative Pete Sessions of Texas, and a top Washington lobbyist all testified, saying Rivera had never mentioned his mammoth consulting contract with a US-based affiliate of Venezuela’s state oil company, PDVSA.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Voters’ feelings about president, war are reminiscent of 2006

►MIDTERMS

Continued from Page A1

recent Reuters/Ipsos poll put Trump’s approval rating at 32 percent.)

Then there is the war. In 2006, Americans were still debating the merits of going to war in Iraq in the first place, and many Democratic candidates were running firmly to end the war. In 2026, a similar war of choice sold as a way to prevent a different type of weapon of mass destruction was never all that popular. But seven months in, just 29 percent of Americans back it, according to a recent CNN poll.

Beyond the war and the sagging presidential approval ratings, there are also some structural parallels. On paper, Democrats initially faced long odds to flip the Senate in 2006. It required them to win six Republican-held seats. In 2026, Democrats must do the same thing in four Republican-held seats.

In the end, Democrats in 2006 ran the table and got their majority, earning a 51-49 majority with the help of independents Bernie Sanders of Vermont and Joe Lieberman of Connecticut. As for the House, Democrats flipped 31 seats — far more than the 15 they needed — and made Nancy Pelosi the first female speaker. Democrats this time need to flip just four seats, but with fewer competitive seats, in order to make

STEPHEN CROWLEY/NEW YORK TIMES/FILE

Nancy Pelosi became the first woman to be speaker of the House after the 2006 midterms.

Hakeem Jeffries the first Black House speaker. Jeffries currently serves as the Democratic leader.

Yet a wave is a wave is a wave. The current polling projection that Democrats have an eight-point advantage is similar to other wave years, like 1994, 2010, and 2018. But those elections had fundamentally different dynamics. In 1994, during Bill Clinton’s first midterm election, Republicans were campaigning on an affirmative agenda that was centered on Democratic majorities for decades. In 2010 and 2018, President Obama and Trump had higher approval ratings than Trump has today. Further, in 2018, Democrats faced the challenge of defending already-held Democratic seats versus today, when they have to go on offense.

What might be different in all of this is the aftermath. Typically, recent presidents were forced to work with the other party running Congress in order to get anything done. This led to the last balanced budget following the 1994 midterm and a bipartisan energy bill following the 2006 midterm.

It remains unclear whether Trump will make the same calculation to work with Democrats in his final two years. He did send an emissary to meet with Jeffries in August, potentially to see if there are areas of common interest. But it is fair to say that no one is holding their breath waiting for any deals to happen.

Though if there is one thing to watch for in the remaining days before the 2026 midterm election, it’s whether the Republican base does stay home. It certainly does appear to be on the minds of Republicans these days, as they are focusing on driving turnout among their own believers more than they are convincing independents to vote for them. It might also explain why Vice President JD Vance was recently campaigning in Kansas and why Trump is scheduled to be in Alabama on Friday night.

If Trump’s base stays home in spite of his efforts to remain the center of attention, the blame game for the loss could reshape Republican leadership and, potentially, the party in the post-Trump era.

James Pindell is a Globe political reporter who reports and analyzes American politics, especially in New England.

Trump puts on show for crowd that’s already sold

Okla. audience is not the one he must win over

By Katie Rogers
NEW YORK TIMES

DURANT, Okla. — During the first political rally of his monthlong midterm campaign season, President Trump dangled the promise of cash, played news clips, introduced former professional basketball player Dennis Rodman, presented infographics on his endorsement success rate, pulled supporters onstage, including one of his White House aides — all while asking his most faithful supporters to pretend that he is on that ballot in November.

It was over the top, even for a showman.

At stake, the president told the rapt crowd, was Republican control of Congress, a secure border and economic stability. Something else was at risk, too: “Pretend I’m running, please. If we don’t win, they’ll end up impeaching me,” Trump said shortly after taking the stage at a casino event center in Durant, Okla., on Thursday evening.

Trump served up reliable red meat, warning the crowd about socialists, open borders, and rising crime if Democrats take majority control of Congress in November. But he was largely preaching to his most fervent fans, not the voters he will need to elect or reelect a slate of Republicans fighting in states from Alaska to Maine. He knew it.

“It’s sort of about 35 races if you want to know the truth,” Trump said of the key House and Senate elections that will decide control of Congress this fall. “I’m here in Oklahoma and I’m really here because I love you people. I had to get here! I feel a little foolish, you know? I’m saying, ‘Go out and vote, go out and vote,’ but they’re going to win in a landslide.”

Still, Trump offered support to several of the state’s Republican candidates, including Mike Mazzei, whom Trump has endorsed for governor, but who has distanced himself from Trump’s decision to import beef from other countries.

Mostly, the president wanted to talk to the news cameras stationed at the back of the room. Trump again offered a cash prize of $5,000 to every American adult if his party keeps control, earning some of the loudest applause of the evening.

“Republicans can do it and Democrats can’t,” Trump said. “We’re taking in massive amounts of money through tariffs and record-setting economic success. Democrat policies won’t allow this to happen.”

In reality, the proposal for the $5,000 checks would be prohibitively costly, at more than $1.3 trillion. But Trump rarely concerns himself with details on the rally stage. He suggested that the money could come from investment revenue.

When confronting the matter of political survival, Trump has always returned to his political rallies, drinking in applause from an adoring audience like spiritual Red Bull. Trump hasn’t done these events much lately. He has been preoccupied for much of his second term with foreign conflicts and building a White House ballroom, and his advisers have said that there has been no need for him to rally, because there are no more races for him to run.

But Trump understands that the political landscape looks challenging for Republicans in the midterms, even as he rages against polling that shows his deepening unpopularity. Several candidates have distanced themselves from his decisions in recent weeks, voting to rein in his ability to continue the war in Iran without congressional approval. Others have criticized immigration enforcement policies that have separated families. Trump has responded by lashing out, accusing the news media of not reporting his accomplishments, and seeking to bar reporters from the White House.

During his rally in Durant, and during an earlier visit Thursday to an auto parts manufacturer outside of Dallas, Trump relished not having to play defense. In Texas, he focused on the economy before administering a backhanded compliment to Ken Paxton, the state’s attorney general and embattled Republican Senate candidate, who was caught telling a group of donors and lobbyists that Trump’s midterm convention might have been a drag on his campaign.

So Trump called Paxton “one of the most loyal people,” and also a “pain in the ass.”

Normally, an infraction like Paxton’s would result in a Truth Social tirade or set off a slow-motion excising from the Republican Party. But Trump needs Paxton to win. In Durant, Trump played a clip by the conservative site Newsmax. It featured two attendees saying that Paxton’s comments didn’t matter to them. Then he invited the two “studs” onstage.

JULIO CORTEZ/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Crowd members reacted as President Trump spoke at a rally at the Choctaw Event Center in Durant, Okla., on Thursday.

“I’m here to thank you for being so loyal to me,” Trump told the crowd. They got to their feet. They waved their hands and their signs and shouted at him, and for him. “Who would have thought that we could have this kind of love in the room, like the two guys that came up here?”

He wasn’t done: “You want to give them a big kiss — and I’m not at all physically attracted — though they’re very handsome people.”

Later, he coaxed a young aide onstage, praising her attractiveness, loyalty and kindness. He also gazed over at her mother and father: “I see why she’s good looking,” Trump said. “I believe in the racehorse theory. Fast horses, right?”

Beneath the variety-show veneer was a more serious warning from Trump: All of this fun would be over if Democrats control Congress.

“I never fail people,” Trump said. “I always come through.”

The most faithful of the faithful stood up and cheered.

RENÉE GRAHAM

In Washington, D.C., the people’s resistance challenges a ruinous president

I told myself that I wouldn’t look. Weeks before my flight to Maryland, I promised myself that I would avoid what I had done since my first trip to the Washington, D.C., area more than 40 years ago — take a peek out of the plane’s window to see the city’s iconic buildings and monuments. But as the plane made its final descent, perhaps I felt a need to bear witness to what, up to that moment, I had only seen in photos. I slid the shade up and caught a glimpse of the Capitol and the Washington Monument. From far away, they looked as they always have — striking and majestic. But also visible were imposing building cranes that would not have been there if not for the man whose malevolent presence has defiled that city and this nation. Given the bottomless ways that President Trump has ravaged this country, countless lives, and democracy itself, his desecration of the capital, including the John F. Kennedy Memorial Center for the Performing Arts and the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool, seems minor. But it is intended to evoke a very specific pain. Trump’s actions are the manifestation of a man who believes nothing is sacred unless it glorifies him or feeds his greedy hunger for vengeance. His hatred of the Kennedy Center dates back to Trump’s first term, when several 2017 Kennedy Center honorees, including legendary TV producer Norman Lear and acclaimed dancer Carmen de Lavallade, refused to attend a White House reception hosted by Trump because of his offensive rhetoric and policies. That snub left Trump seething. Now he is threatening to tear down what has been a “living memorial” to the assassinated president, unless his own name is added to it. With a deeply unpopular presidency, a war against Iran that he helped start but has no clue how to end, and the economy squeezing Americans’ wallets and savings, Trump is obsessed with installing shallow symbols of power and immortality in the home of this nation’s government. It’s the same pathetic logic that has compelled Trump to slap his name on everything from buildings to Bibles. He has embedded his name in as many corners of society as possible to make himself both omnipresent and unforgettable. Trump’s self-serving needs have exploded in his second term. Building a massive underground military bunker where the White House’s East Wing once stood — even Trump can no longer pretend it’s just a ballroom — and pushing for a tacky 250-foot arch complete with drones and snipers is all that seems to preoccupy Trump these days. Perhaps when he’s dozing off during Cabinet meetings and Oval Office press conferences, he’s dreaming of more garish structures to clutter up Washington’s once-elegant National Mall, parts of which are now closed to the public. Trump can continue to delude himself about his popularity, but he knows his presidency is a failure. With the increasing possibility of a significant Republican defeat in the midterm elections, he seems fixated on leaving a different kind of mark on the nation’s capital. It’s a page from the authoritarian playbook — wherever you go, he is watching. Think of North Korea, where Kim Jong Un’s face is plastered on murals all over the country he rules, a constant reminder that his citizens live under the ominous eye of their supreme leader. But it’s also a byproduct of Trump’s need to prop himself up with the trappings of great men, without actually being great. He is memorializing himself and his historically cruel and chaotic presidency in a manner that he believes will remain long after he is gone. I enjoyed my time in Maryland and Virginia, but my heart wept when I saw evidence of what Trump has done to Washington, at the taxpayers’ expense. But I also found hope. On the day I arrived, thousands surrounded the Kennedy Center to protest Trump’s demolition threats. Some formed a human chain around the building and made clear that that center belongs to the people, not a pathologically insecure man. Days later as my plane left Reagan National, I looked out of the window and saw a city wounded but resilient. Even as things inevitably get worse before they get better, what I want to remember are those who will never surrender and how the people’s resistance, in all of its many forms, can defeat a ruinous president.

Trump’s actions are the manifestation of a man who believes nothing is sacred unless it glorifies him or feeds his greedy hunger for vengeance.

This is an excerpt from Outtakes, a Globe Opinion newsletter from columnist Renée Graham. Sign up to get Outtakes in your inbox each Thursday.

Renée Graham is a Globe columnist. She can be reached at renee.graham@globe.com.

How many more Jane Does before Cornell acts on sexual assault?

By Donna Garlough

Donna Garlough is a former magazine editor, author, interior stylist, and owner of Monroe in Charlestown. She earned her BA in English from Cornell.

I left Cornell in 2002, decades before Jane Doe was there. The unnamed accuser, who last month filed a civil lawsuit against the university and others, alleges she was coerced and drugged in an hours-long gang-rape involving seven fraternity members in October 2024. My experience on campus ended long before the events of that night. But this week, as claims, denials, and comments about her alleged experience’s handling by the university and law enforcement reach a fever pitch, the unshakeable knowledge that troubles me most is this: Cornell knew it was a problem. It’s been a problem. And without a “good enough” reason, the university — and countless premier American institutions like it — has done nothing but the bare minimum to keep it from happening again. Like Jane, I attended fraternity parties up and down the famed Slope. I, too, walked hazily, alone and with friends, to houses full of men after visits to the Ithaca bars. I was lucky. I made lifelong friends, met my husband, and attended many, many parties. Some dates were friendly, others romantic. There were certainly nights when I was overserved and irresponsible, but I felt safe enough surrounded by these men — they’re smart and studious enough to get into this school, aren’t they? — to crash on a grungy frat-house sofa more times than I’d like to admit. I was luckier still that none of these men ever took the presence of a bleary woman in a party dress as license to entertain themselves at her shame and expense. Some mornings, I even woke up to find one of them had tucked a blanket tight around me, or set a glass of water by my coat. I was right that I was safe — but not because we were at Big Red, an institution founded in 1865 so that “any person can find instruction in any study.” Just because the halls were hallowed did not mean you didn’t need to be on the lookout for men without boundaries. In a 2025 Cornell Survey of Sexual Assault and Related Misconduct, nearly half of respondents (49 percent) reported experiencing sexual or gender-based harassment, up from 45 percent in 2023 and 44 percent in 2021. Academically, the Cornell I attended proved its promise to be true, boasting majors and career-exploration opportunities spanning architecture, engineering, communications, pre-med, even hotel administration. But where, among “any study,” is decency? Then and now, where is the commitment to releasing graduates who are not just capable of big jobs and titles but also capable and willing to protect a classmate being raped in a room full of others? To speak up and protect any person they see being compromised, violated, ridiculed, or defiled? Anyone who claims that decency is something only parents or a person’s faith can instill is missing the point. Not even Cornell assumes that every student arrives at university with all the knowledge and instincts needed to thrive and excel in the world. To put it into perspective: When you arrive on campus as a newly minted freshman, before you can sign up for any electives, you first have to prove you can swim. The university describes its reasoning: “The objective of the swim test is to ensure that the student is able to survive and make their way to safety in case they are in a drowning situation. “If we teach people how to swim and make it a life skill, that will in some ways help to break the cycle. ... Fear of the water, although unpleasant, can almost always be overcome.” Cornellians also have to complete a First-Year Writing Seminar, ostensibly because effective communication is table stakes for the higher-educated. To make this requirement more palatable, all flavors of writing seminars are on offer; this fall’s menu includes “Sports and Politics,” “Gothic Short Stories,” “Climate Change and Communications,” and more. But when it comes to sexual assault prevention, where is the mandate? This year’s student orientation at Cornell did include a presentation on consent, according to a current freshman interviewed by the media in the days following the lawsuit filing. Cornell Health has made workshops available, by special request, to educate groups on issues like harassment, empathy, and bystander intervention. A group must request a staff member to conduct a workshop two weeks in advance. Courses such as “Evidence-based Sexual Violence Prevention & Resistance,” offered for one credit, are opt-in. But even when the content manages to reach a student in this manner, a safety brochure or video is far too easy to ignore. And ignore they do. A Cornell lecture this year featuring Chanel Miller, the victim of a brutal rape by Stanford classmate Brock Turner in 2015, required 15 percent attendance from each fraternity on campus — many of whom spent the session scrolling their phones, according to a professor who attended the event. With the classic “if all your friends jumped off a bridge” warning ringing in your ears, it takes barely a nudge to fall into step with the hundreds around you, all of them also lacking a fully developed prefrontal cortex. (My first week at Cornell, I jumped off a bridge into Beebe Lake, bruising myself terribly for weeks.) Today, wrestling with Jane Doe’s alleged experience, my memories of campus culture, and the disturbing new knowledge that 35 percent of female Cornell students reported nonconsensual sexual contact since entering the school in the latest surveys, I ask: How many more nights like Jane Doe’s do we need for an institution to create a sexual assault curriculum that is mandatory, extensive, and effective? Because human decency should be a prerequisite for your illustrious alumni’s list of accomplishments — in addition to learning how to swim. Because up there on that hill, far above Cayuga Lake’s waters, yet another woman was left to drown.

Where is the commitment to releasing graduates who are not just capable of big jobs and titles but also capable and willing to protect a classmate being raped in a room full of others?

The Democrats’ ‘Big Tent’ problem ... and a solution

By Thomas J. Raleigh

Thomas J. Raleigh, a Democrat, is a retired US Army lieutenant colonel.

Stubborn inflation, sluggish job growth, high gas prices, war with Iran, and President Trump’s erratic behavior ought to portend a Democratic landslide in the midterms. But while the chances of flipping the House are high, regaining control of the Senate remains a challenge. How can this be, with Trump’s popularity at historic lows? The reasons are twofold. First, Democrats have failed to focus on the midterms, instead distracting voters with discussions of the 2028 presidential race. Last month Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez coyly declined to rule out a 2028 run but then extended speculation for additional news cycles by renewing her membership with the Democratic Socialists of America and granting an exclusive interview to The New York Times. Second, Democratic leaders have failed to describe what they will do if they win control of Congress. Their strategy appears to be “It’s Affordability, Stupid” and little more. Simply relying on populist catchphrases with no clear governing blueprint just won’t cut it. In short, Democrats find themselves with a “Big Tent” problem; they have failed to articulate a “center pole” of core policy positions to which both surging urban progressives, led by AOC, and more moderate and rural Democrats, like Representative Marie Gluesenkamp Perez of Washington state, can rally. It’s not too late for Democrats to fix this. But it will require taking a page from a past Republican playbook. In 1994, just six weeks prior to the midterms, the Republicans published their “Contract with America,” in which House Republican leaders Newt Gingrich and Dick Army succinctly outlined eight specific congressional reforms and provided a thumbnail of 10 pieces of legislation. Was it effective? Republicans gained 54 House seats and eight Senate seats, flipping both chambers.

Minority Leaders Hakeem Jeffries and Chuck Schumer should jointly publish a proposed legislative program if Democrats gain control of the Congress; their “Pledge to the People” perhaps. Skillfully smoothing the rough edges of democratic socialism, its central message might be “Capitalism with a human face.” Whatever they call it, however they describe it, it needs to be clear, concise, and specific. I offer a rough draft: THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY PLEDGE TO THE PEOPLE These are the things that Democrats will deliver to the American people should we win in November. Universal health care. Given the growing turbulence in the job market, we will pursue

$2 million, and 12 percent above $5 million. Border control and immigration. Controlling our borders is a national security necessity. We will ensure that the US Border Patrol is adequately funded to prevent illegal entry into this country. We will fund Immigration and Customs Enforcement sufficiently to apprehend and deport undocumented immigrants who break our laws, but we will not fund indiscriminate roundups. We will also pass comprehensive immigration legislation that will balance enforcement with fairness, and will include a path to citizenship for undocumented immigrants who obey our laws, honorably serve in our armed forces, or otherwise contribute to our communities. Fiscal responsibility. Our national debt cannot continue to grow unchecked. We will pass a “Pay-As-You-Go” budget rule that will require the Congress to offset the cost of any legislation that increases spending on entitlement programs or reduces taxes so as not to increase the deficit. Congressional term limits. The American people overwhelmingly support congressional term limits. We will pass a constitutional amendment to limit congressional terms: five terms for House members and three terms for Senate members. Campaign finance reform. We need to campaign less and govern more. We will pass legislation that will eliminate Super PACs. If we can eliminate PACs in a manner that will survive court challenges we will do that, too. Finally, we will eliminate the “continuous campaign” by passing legislation that will prohibit congressional and presidential candidates from forming campaign committees prior to January of the election year and will require that unused campaign funds be transferred to the US Treasury no later than December of the election year.

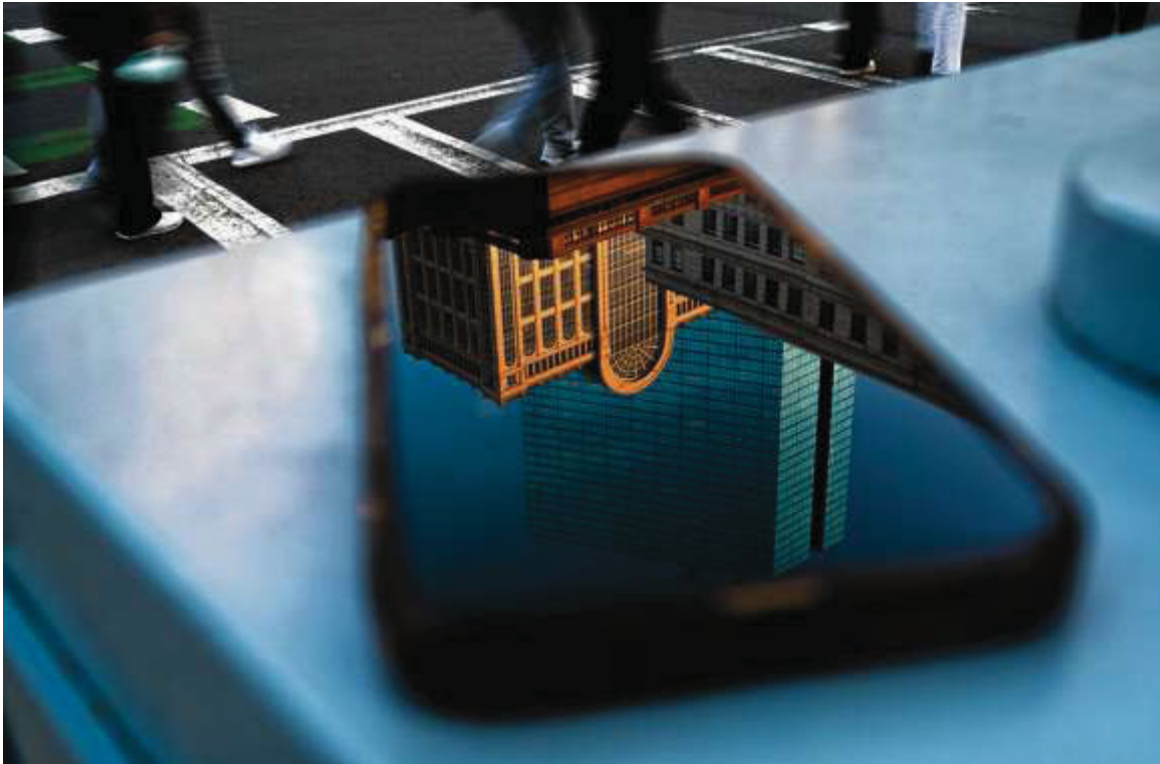

Leaders like Jeffries and Schumer may articulate an entirely different legislative program with different priorities. That’s fine. But they can’t leave voters guessing. If they fail to define what Democrats stand for, President Trump and MAGA Republicans will do it for them.

HEATHER HOPP-BRUCE/GLOBE STAFF; DEYAN GEORGIEV/ADOBE

universal health care as an economic necessity, providing workers with flexibility and peace of mind as they acquire the skills to adapt and thrive in a constantly evolving job market. National minimum wage. The national minimum wage has stood at $7.25 for more than a quarter century. We will raise the minimum wage for American workers 18 years and older to no less than $20 an hour. Middle-class tax relief. We will pass Maryland Senator Chris Van Hollen’s Working Americans’ Tax Cut Act, which will eliminate federal income taxes for individuals earning $46,000 or less and for married couples earning $92,000 or less. We will fund the initiative through a progressive surtax on millionaires, with rates of 5 percent on incomes above $1 million, 10 percent above

READERS’ FORUM

The John Hancock Tower (now 200 Clarendon) was reflected in a phone as pedestrians crossed near Boston Common in April.

FINN GOMEZ FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

The Hancock Tower: Boston’s enduring icon

50 years later, building’s mirrored glass reflects a vastly improved city

The Hancock Tower (now 200 Clarendon) has indeed become one of the most cherished icons in Boston, if not the most (“The Hancock Tower at 50: a ‘beautiful disaster’ turned icon of the Boston skyline,” Ideas, Sept. 27). Architect Henry N. Cobb deserves full credit for his visionary, timeless design, and the leadership of insurer John Hancock at the time must be acknowledged for affirming Cobb’s original design, and not altering it, when the chips were down and the building was a seeming construction and public relations disaster.

Also noteworthy is that our city and region are not easily impressed, and major changes to our built environment are often greeted with skepticism, if not downright disdain. After all, many, including the Globe, questioned whether the Rose Fitzgerald Kennedy Greenway — today a beloved urban paradise — would ever be fully utilized by residents and visitors alike.

The Big Dig that the Greenway covers was derided for massive cost overruns and construction flaws, yet it immeasurably improved the city, made downtown and the North End more vibrant, and enabled the build-out of the Seaport. It also improved traffic — its primary goal.

The Hancock Tower has been described as an enormous stand-up mirror plunked down in Copley Square. Today that mirror reflects a vastly improved, far more beautiful city than existed before 1976. How better off we are that an architect and an insurance company persisted.

DAVID A. BALL
Newton

He’s never gotten over the crash of the falling windows

Thanks for Ted Widmer’s article about the 50th anniversary of the Hancock Tower. It is a beautiful building because it reflects the beauty of the city around it, but I have never gotten beyond my memories of the days when the glass panes were flying and the plywood made the place look like a giant abandoned row house.

Widmer sees the building as a tribute to the resilience and creativity of the architect. I’m sure Henry N. Cobb was brilliant, and he did get the Hancock built, but his building was right up there with the great design failures of the 20th century in Boston (it had competition). Cobb’s friend, teacher, and partner, I. M. Pei, called the building a “clear and present danger” after examining the problem of falling windows. He was worried about passersby and the litigation in his future.

I will never forget walking in Copley Square near the Boston Public Library one evening. I think it was early 1974. An explosion shattered the night and had me and others scrambling for cover. A man on the street saw that I was startled and laughed. “No sweat,” he said. “That’s just another window hitting the ground,” and he continued on his way.

It is a miracle that the “beautiful disaster” never killed anyone.

KEVIN MURRAY
Roslindale

Capturing a shot of history

I moved to Boston in September 1974 to attend graduate school. Soon afterward, I met a beautiful woman who would become my wife (and with whom I celebrated 50 years of marriage this year). We were on Boston Common one day, and I was taking photographs of the Hancock. This prompted her to ask why I was taking pictures of such an eyesore.

“This is history,” I said. And so it was.

DAVE ESTEP
Beverly

Beholding the building’s many moods was the best part of the commute

The Hancock Tower is enigmatic. For 13 years I commuted across the Longfellow Bridge to Cambridge on the Red Line and the best part of the trip was looking at how the Hancock Tower reflected the light (dawn, dusk, clouds, sun, partial fog, rain). It never looked the same on the thousands of trips I took crossing the bridge.

BNIXON
BostonGlobe.com

A towering imposition

Ted Widmer’s love letter to the Hancock is overstated at best. Even to this day the building barely integrates with the neighborhood around it and instead is a sculpture, not a building for people. Similar issue with the Moakley Courthouse, which has impenetrable brick walls facing the neighborhood streets.

HILARY13
BostonGlobe.com

The view from the 45th floor

In the late 1970s I worked on the 45th floor of the Hancock Tower. I recall my friends questioning my wisdom of working there given the window problems. I was never concerned because by then all the windows had been replaced and the steel reinforcements installed. I had a desk by a window (many of my coworkers shunned them) and enjoyed the most spectacular sunsets you can imagine.

KAW272
BostonGlobe.com

Waiting, impatiently, for the US to step up on regulating AI

The threat of eventual human annihilation doesn’t seem to be enough to get lawmakers motivated to regulate artificial intelligence (“As Washington stalls, Massachusetts and other states must lead on AI safety,” Editorial, Sept. 30). Here’s what would work: Make it clear that in the wrong hands, AI could wipe out a given individual’s — yours, mine, Donald Trump’s — financial accounts.

Financial dissolution is, after all, a more credible threat than annihilation, and it has the advantage of appealing to people whose areas of concern can’t encompass anything beyond their own personal gain or loss.

JULIA GLENDON
Lumenberg

Regarding President Trump’s ideas about tech firms “self-policing” AI development: My eldest son called me Thursday to ask whether AI could really kill everyone he knows this decade.

This year he fell in love for the first time. He has a good job and is thinking of a home and children. He would make the best father. On the phone his voice wasn’t his normal voice.

He had just finished a book about the potential of AI to take over a wet lab to create a pandemic, or a gas, or a neurotoxin — so many other possibilities we cannot even imagine.

Because I am an activist, I know that taking action, especially with a group of others, can decrease fear and depression. I listed some actions: Write a letter to legislators or to a newspaper demanding a pause in AI development and guardrails for safety. Create social media to awaken others. Go to a demonstration. Find and support an AI safety nonprofit.

The United States is in the lead on AI. It’s our companies and materials. We are the ones who can push for change.

I told my son that taking action would make him feel better and could help safeguard all of us.

Let’s do it today.
AUDREY SCHULMAN
Cambridge

HEATHER DIEHL/GETTY IMAGES

Protesters demonstrated outside of the OpenAI DevDay 2026 conference on Sept. 29 in San Francisco.

The Boston Globe

Founded 1872

JOHN W. HENRY
Publisher

LINDA PIZZUTI HENRY
Chief Executive Officer

BRIAN McGRORY
Editor

JAMES DAO
Editorial Page Editor

DHIRAJ NAYAR President

CRISTINA SILVA
Managing Editor, Operations & Standards

CYNTHIA NEEDHAM
Managing Editor, News

JASON TUOHEY
Managing Editor, Digital Strategy

DEPUTY MANAGING EDITORS
Marjorie Pritchard Op-Ed
Anica Butler Storytelling
David Scharfenberg Ideas
Jeneé Osterheldt Culture, Talent, & Development
Heather Ciras Audience Engagement & Digital Strategy
Francis Storrs Special Projects & Enterprise
Tim Logan Local News

SENIOR ASSISTANT MANAGING EDITORS
Mary Creane Production
Alan Wirzbicki Editorial Page
Andrew Caffrey News & Enterprise
Chris Morris Living/Arts
Greg Huang Storytelling
Victoria McGrane Digital Platforms

SPOTLIGHT EDITOR
Patricia Wen

BUSINESS MANAGEMENT
Dan Krockmalnic Chief Operating Officer & General Counsel
Angus Macaulay Chief Commercial Officer
Anthony Bonfiglio Chief Technology Officer
Tom Brown Chief Consumer Revenue Officer
Josh Russell VP, Print Operations
Michelle Micone Chief Marketing & Strategic Initiatives Officer
Rodrigo Tajonar Chief People Officer
Matt Karolian VP, Platforms & AI
Chris Zeien Chief Financial Officer

Charles H. Taylor Founder & Publisher 1873-1921
William O. Taylor Publisher 1921-1955
Wm. Davis Taylor Publisher 1955-1977
William O. Taylor Publisher 1978-1997
Benjamin B. Taylor Publisher 1997-1999
Richard H. Gilman Publisher 1999-2006
P. Steven Ainsley Publisher 2006-2009
Christopher M. Mayer Publisher 2009-2014
Laurence L. Winship Editor 1955-1965
Thomas Winship Editor 1965-1984

CHRISTOPHER WEYANT

With strike set, nurses, Brigham brace for upheaval

►NURSES
Continued from Page A1

ery charge nurse who heads the union bargaining unit. “There is still time to reach an agreement that protects patient care and respects nurses.”

Brigham said in a statement that it is willing to meet with the MNA if the union is “ready to make meaningful movement toward resolution.” The hospital insisted, however, that the nurses are among the highest paid locally and nationally and that their demands aren’t financially sustainable.

“While we had hoped to avoid another strike, our teams have comprehensive plans in place, informed by our experience” in July “to support continuity of care across Brigham and Women’s Hospital,” the hospital said in a statement.

The union has proposed several phased-in pay increases, while the hospital counters that some nurses already receive step increases based on longevity. Starting salary is $86,700 annually, and nurses with 20 years of service earn $220,000, the top step in the pay scale, according to MGB. As of May, almost one-third were at the top step.

It’s still possible the sides could negotiate a contract agreement that averts the strike. In 2016, the MNA reached an agreement with Brigham the day before what would have been the first nurses strike at a Boston hospital in at least 30 years.

The stakes of this strike would be far greater than those of the walkout in July.

The MNA last authorized an open-ended strike at Tenet Healthcare’s Saint Vincent Hospital in Worcester in February 2021. It lasted 301 days and involved about 800 nurses.

Brigham patients and their families are processing what the strike could mean for their care.

Andrea Edmonston, 55, was on her way to visit her brother at a Brigham cardiac unit when she heard that the hospital’s nurses had set a strike date. Her brother had a major heart surgery and has been hospitalized there for two weeks.

Edmonston, who lives in Norfolk, said she loves the highly specialized nurses who have been caring for her brother. She’s worried that replacement nurses’ unfamiliarity with the hospital could affect his recovery.

“He’s been through hell,” Edmonston said. “I’m concerned because I want him to get the best care, and I know that travelers [nurses] go all over the country, from hospital to hospital.”

Brigham delivered more than 7,200 babies in 2025, according to a survey by the hospital watchdog The Leapfrog Group. (About 68,055 babies were born in Massachusetts from July 2024 to July 2025.)

Tahrae Jarrett, 29, who is due to give birth to a boy this month, has been receiving prenatal care at Brigham for several months. She and her husband, Nirael Davis, 30, visited the hospital on Friday and said they were nervous about the potential strike.

“I was like, ‘This is going to happen while I’m having the baby,’” said Jarrett, who lives in Dorchester.

Davis seemed sympathetic to the nurses. “Hopefully, they get what they’re looking for ... and hopefully it doesn’t affect the public too much,” he said.

Brigham representatives said

JOHN TLUMACKI/GLOBE STAFF/FILE

Nurses and their supporters picketed outside Brigham and Women’s Hospital during a one-day strike in July.

they were confident that care would remain top notch throughout the strike. MGB said it has been in touch with US Nursing, the company that supplied 1,300 temporary nurses in July, and most of those nurses have agreed to return to Brigham.

After the one-day strike ended, the hospital locked out unionized nurses for four days because management said it had to provide five days of work for the temporary nurses.

“While the hospital does not want a strike, we are fully prepared to manage through one, regardless of its duration,” MGB spokesperson Jessica Pastore said this week.

During the July work stoppage, MGB said, operating rooms continued at a busy pace and the hospital performed a successful heart transplant.

Union leaders said they hoped to avoid an indefinite strike but needed to stand up to the corporation.

“We’re not taking this lightly, but we’re at a point where the hospital wants to break our union,” Morgan said Tuesday. “All they have to do is sit down at the table and have an open and meaningful dialogue, and we could get an agreement.”

MGB counters that it has held at least 25 bargaining sessions with the union since November and that it informed the MNA at a session on Aug. 11 that the sides are at an impasse.

Higher wages are central to the dispute. The union wants a 3 percent raise for the first six months and a 4 percent raise for the next 12 months of the contract. The hospital isn’t offering any new across-the-board raise, but notes that nurses already receive a 5 percent “step” pay increase for each year of service until they reach two decades.

Over the past five fiscal years, Brigham said, nurses’ base wages have increased by an average of 55 percent.

Brigham nurses say the across-the-board raise is crucial because of inflation and the high cost of living in Greater Boston, and to retain highly trained employees. They noted that Dr. Anne Klibanski, MGB’s chief executive, received a 9 percent raise in 2024, for a salary of nearly $9.2 million. And MGB ended fiscal 2025 with a total surplus of $2.3 billion.

David E. Williams, president of Health Business Group, a Boston management consulting firm, said a strike isn’t always financially disastrous for a hospital — and the public may be surprised to learn how well the nurses are paid.

“Replacement nurses are expensive but may not be more expensive than Brigham’s permanent staff,” he said. “MGB is betting it can absorb the pain longer than the nurses can go without paychecks.”

Joe Markman, an MNA spokesperson, said the union can help nurses financially during a prolonged strike.

The union is also advising nurses what to do if the hospital stops contributing to their health insurance premiums, including going on COBRA, which lets people continue workplace health coverage for up to 18 months, getting on a spouse’s health insurance, or applying to the Massachusetts Health Connector.

Brigham is not the only Boston hospital facing labor strife. In September, Boston Medical Center nurses voted to authorize a three-day strike over pay and staffing concerns. They have not set a date for a walkout.

Jonathan Saltzman can be reached at jonathan.saltzman@globe.com. Marin Wolf can be reached at marin.wolf@globe.com.

Mayo deal alters health care terrain

►MAYO CLINIC
Continued from Page A1

enabled tools.

“We believe there is another path,” South County chief executive Aaron Robinson said in a statement, arguing that hospitals typically have had to sacrifice independence to gain the scale and expertise to compete.

Mayo spokeswoman Caroline Auger said the relationship does not represent a targeted expansion of the medical giant’s physical presence in New England.

But it is part of a broader growth strategy for Mayo, which is based in Minnesota and often touted as the top hospital in the world. It has built a relationship with independent hospitals, offering clinical expertise, technology, and supply chain. There are many community hospitals that, similar to South County, are struggling to survive on their own and can use the help of a well-known national name.

Executives at the major hospital systems in the Boston region “should be concerned,” said J.B. Silvers, a former Harvard faculty member who worked for the Joint Commission, a hospital accreditation body.

“They may like to say competition’s good, but they don’t really want competition, especially when it’s right in their backyard,” said Silvers, now a health care finance professor at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland. “That’s why they’ve all expanded themselves.”

A system such as Mayo can build a presence in a new market without taking on a hospital’s liabilities, buildings, and operating issues, said Kirat Kharode, a former hospital executive and founder of HealCo, which helps employers manage specialty health care costs. “Mayo’s expertise becomes an extension of the local clinical team when it’s needed.”

Robert Hackey, a Providence College health services professor, called the partnership a “branding strategy” that he believes could be effective.

South County Hospital has been seeking a larger partner for years. This collaboration “would offer an opportunity to take advantage of a national brand with an established reputation” and could be a way to “differentiate

BRE MCGEE FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

The Mayo Clinic, based in Rochester, Minn., is often touted as the top hospital in the world.

the hospital from other local institutions with deeper pockets,” Hackey said.

In return, the Mayo Care Network collects an undisclosed fee. The network has members worldwide, but only one other in New England: Middlesex Hospital in Connecticut, which joined in 2015. In practice, Middlesex physicians can consult directly with Mayo specialists when they think it would help a patient.

The logic is simple, said Errol Norwitz, former chief executive of MGB’s Newton-Wellesley Hospital, now executive director of a health and innovation center at Babson College in Wellesley.

Health care is a “$5.4 trillion pie, and systems want a bigger slice,” Norwitz said.

The South County deal is “quite strategic, but also a little opportunistic,” said Norwitz. With a larger commercial payer mix and lucrative specialized services, like orthopedics and cardiology, “they’re cherry-picking the best opportunities, as good businesses do.”

Mayo’s name has long had a thin presence in the region. It ran a lab in Andover for several years before closing it in 2016, saying at the time it wasn’t close enough to a Mayo practice. South County was selected to join the Mayo Clinic Care Network by demonstrating a commitment to quality and patient-centered care, the organization said.

South County, meanwhile, has been looking for a boost.

The 100-bed hospital has lost money on operations in each of the last three fiscal years, including $7.2 million on $237 million in revenue in fiscal 2025, with investment gains covering the shortfall, according to a bond offering document dated Sept. 22. Its share of adult inpatient discharges decreased, while Medicare’s share of patient revenue rose over the last two years. Management cites the “unfavorable change in payor mix” among the reasons for weaker results.

South County may also need “access to capital” from an unidentified partner, according to the filing, which is tied to a $73 million bond financing to fund energy plant upgrades, repay existing debt, and implement the a costly electronic patient records system.

Three health care executives in Rhode Island, multiple government officials, and others familiar with South County’s business dealings told the Globe the hospital also has been in talks with HumanityCorp, a Virginia-based private equity firm that has worked with Mayo to grow its business of sourcing supplies for other hospitals. In 2024, the two jointly launched Inspirity Health Partners, which works with independent community health systems on supply chain and financial operations.

Auger, the Mayo spokeswoman, said HumanityCorp is not part of this specific deal with the Mayo Clinic Care Network. Representatives with HumanityCorp and Inspirity did not respond to the Globe’s questions about the matter.

Matt Moeller, a spokesman for South County, declined to answer questions about HumanityCorp, saying, “We are only commenting on our clinical collaboration.”

Norwitz, of Babson, said he is optimistic about bigger players disrupting health care around New England. At the same time, he said, Mayo Clinic may face some challenges in the nation’s smallest state, one that has lower reimbursement rates and a more complicated landscape.

“What works in Cleveland, Chicago, or Miami doesn’t often work in Rhode Island,” Norwitz said. “It’s a smaller captive population. And, frankly, there’s two large health care systems that are already struggling. Rhode Island, for health care, is tough.”

Dan McGowan of the Globe staff contributed to this report. Alexa Gagosz can be reached at alexa.gagosz@globe.com. Follow her @alexagagosz.

Space station is floated as a contender for the Nobel Peace Prize

By Mark Lewis
ASSOCIATED PRESS

STAVANGER, Norway — Not-so-outlandish, prognosticators say: The Nobel Peace Prize this year could go galactic, with an award to the International Space Station. But terrestrial contenders loom too, including President Trump, Prime Minister Mark Carney of Canada, emergency teams in Sudan, children’s advocates in Ukraine and two top international courts, experts say.

The annual guessing game about who will win the prize, often called the most prestigious award on the planet, is revving up ahead of the Norwegian Nobel Committee’s Oct. 9 announcement of the winner in Oslo.

Predicting the outcome is inherently speculative. Some surprising and controversial choices have appeared over the years. The committee received 287 candidates for this year’s prize, and just over a quarter of them are organizations.

Experts say the committee, in its process of awarding the prize, typically focuses on the durability of peace, the promotion of international fraternity and the quiet work of institutions that strengthen those goals.

Haakon Gjerløw, director of the Peace Research Institute Oslo, is considered a top forecaster. He says the ISS — well, the organization behind it — is a rare symbol of global cooperation in a quest toward the heavens at a time when multilateralism is crumbling and many countries have retreated into narrower national interests on Earth.

The institute’s annual watch list is one of the sources that most informs pundits and puntation. And, frankly, there’s two large health care systems that are already struggling. Rhode Island, for health care, is tough.”

Trump has made no secret of his desire to win the prize, and has been nominated again, but could be viewed as a controversial choice after the United States, along with Israel, launched an ongoing war on Iran in February.

Canada’s Carney has made a mark internationally this year, in large part by standing up to Trump on issues like US tariffs.

Gjerløw’s list this year also features Ukrainian children’s advocate Mykola Kuleba and Save the Children; Sudan’s Emergency Response Rooms, a grass-roots relief network; and the Committee to Protect Journalists after the deadliest two years for reporters since record-keeping began nearly 45 years ago.

The International Court of Justice and International Criminal Court, jointly, also got a nod. The ICC has faced criticism and controversy among some, and respect from others, over its arrest warrants against leaders like Russian President Vladimir Putin and Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Experts say the committee focuses on the durability of peace and the promotion of international fraternity.

Trump has long criticized the ICC, and Secretary of State Marco Rubio in July announced a campaign to “dismantle the threat ... posed by the International Criminal Court to US sovereignty.” Later that month, the ICC’s chief prosecutor was removed from office over sexual misconduct allegations.

Gjerløw said the committee’s choice is complicated by recent turmoil after 2025 laureate María Corina Machado of Venezuela, in a symbolic gesture, presented her prize to Trump days after US forces removed Venezuelan President Nicolás Maduro from power.

This year’s peace prize comes in an era marked by the most war and conflict in decades, including in Sudan, Ukraine, Yemen, Iran, and the Middle East.

ADRIAN WALKER

‘Dark money’ targets BPS

The image is innocent enough to tug at anyone’s heartstrings: a child staring with the dramatic caption: “BPS is failing her.” That’s the advertisement attacking Boston Public Schools that briefly greeted riders on the Red and Orange Lines this week. The T’s management removed the ads after inquiries from the Globe, calling them a violation of the agency’s guidelines for advertising.

They are the work of a newly launched nonprofit called Next Chapter Boston. The education advocacy group claims its mission is to bring awareness to what it says is the sorry plight of the city’s public schools.

The group’s leaders — among them former School Committee member Mary Tamer and education activist Vernee Wilkinson — have zeroed in on lagging test scores to make the argument that nobody is paying enough attention to the disgrace staring us in the face.

“I don’t think there’s general awareness of that, at least not that people are attending to in an urgent way,” Wilkinson told me. She said the group’s aim is to spur more grassroots involvement in working on the schools.

That all sounds lovely, but there’s something about this group I find deeply unsettling. Though it is well-funded enough to afford a $1.5 million ad campaign, its leaders won’t identify most of the people bankrolling this effort.

A couple of donors have been identified, including venture capitalist Rick Burnes and philanthropist Michael Champa.

But many others have opted to go anonymous. Wilkinson and others claim those donors don’t want the inconvenience of public attention, a claim I find utterly ridiculous.

Here’s why: People who suddenly pour big money into something like that aren’t just trying to “raise awareness” — whatever that really means. They are trying to influence public policy. And the public has a right to know who they are, and what they really want.

Do they want more high-stakes testing? More charter schools? A new superintendent? A new mayor?

There’s no way to know any of that from an anonymously-funded ad campaign and a website.

For years, education policy in particular has been rife with big-money actors seeking to shape policy without public accountability. Some of them have pushed for vouchers, or charter schools, or other forms of defunding public schools.

And many hide behind a seemingly benign plea to “please think of the children.”

But these deep-pocketed, behind-the-scenes activists know how to avoid the hassle of actually dealing with public scrutiny. That’s the job of the staffs they hire, not the rich guys themselves.

Maurice Cunningham, a retired professor of public policy at the University of Massachusetts Boston, has been tracking and writing about the presence of “dark money” in public education for years.

This ad, he told me Friday, gives him great concern.

“It’s as undemocratic as anything I can think of,” Cunningham said.

“This is dark money in action. It’s permeated public policy, with the richest people in America hiding behind these organizations, and I think it’s bad for democracy.”

He noted that Next Chapter Boston will have to file a publicly available tax return, but not until late 2027. And even then, they won’t have to cough up the identities of their donors.

Wilkinson claims it is a big secret — that’s how she put it — that a city like Boston has underperforming public schools. I think it’s much more accurate to say it’s at odds with the image people around the country have of Boston, a place so closely identified with brainpower and name-brand universities.

And, it’s not a secret at all to daily riders of the Red Line or the Orange Line.

There’s a legitimate argument to be made there isn’t enough pressure to improve the schools, that more involvement might help move the needle faster. Nobody’s arguing against more activism, or defending mediocre (or worse) school performance.

But glossy ads and slick websites that hide more than they reveal won’t make this system better. Billionaires who don’t think we need to know what their agenda is aren’t going to fix the BPS.

Like so many would-be activists, they say they want a conversation. But that conversation had to begin with a basic commitment to transparency.

Tell us who you are, and what you want. Maybe then we can start talking about a “next chapter” for our schools.

Adrian Walker is a Globe columnist. He can be reached at adrian.walker@globe.com. Follow him @Adrian_Walker.

Minogue campaign spent $6.1m in Sept.

By Chris Van Buskirk
GLOBE STAFF

Michael Minogue, the largely self-financed Republican nominee for Massachusetts governor, spent more than $6.1 million last month in his bid to unseat Governor Maura Healey, a record sum for a gubernatorial candidate.

Minogue’s September spending — fueled by millions of dollars in advertising costs, according to a filing he submitted Friday — is roughly double what Healey or former Governor Charlie Baker has reported spending in a single month across their runs for governor, according to a Globe review of campaign finance filings.

Amount in bid to unseat Healey sets a monthly record for governor’s race

The gubernatorial candidate that’s come closest to his spending spree was Kerry Healey, the GOP’s 2006 gubernatorial nominee who dropped more than $4.4 million in October of that year against eventual winner, Deval Patrick, according to the Office of Campaign and Political Finance.

Healey, meanwhile, raised just over $623,000 last month but also pulled $2.9 million from a savings account to bolster her war chest, according to campaign spokesperson Kerry Lyons. Lyons did not immediately disclose how much Healey spent in September. She had yet to file a full report Friday.

Minogue’s spending in September, though, does not appear to be the most ever for a statewide candidate. Shannon Liss-Riordan spent $6.4 million in August 2022 in her unsuccessful bid for attorney general, records show.

Minogue’s wealth and willingness to spend it helped lift him to the GOP nomination and into the general election, where he’s both trying to introduce himself to a wider set of voters as a first-time candidate and press his case for ousting Healey, a well-funded and first-term Democrat

MINOGUE, Page B4

PHOTOS BY MATTHEW J. LEE/GLOBE STAFF

A TRADITION THAT CARRIES WEIGHT

Judges gave the thumbs up for the winning pumpkin during the 42nd annual All New England Giant Pumpkin Weigh-Off at the Topsfield Fair on Friday. The winner weighed 2,598 pounds and was grown by Woodie Lancaster of Topsfield. Andrew Hughes (left), a farmer from Georgetown who was helping with the lifting and measuring crew, inspected one of the 21 entries. The fair, which opened Friday night, runs through Oct. 12.

After acquittal on federal charges, Tompkins shakes up staff at Suffolk sheriff’s office

By Kelly Garrity
GLOBE STAFF

Suffolk County Sheriff Steven Tompkins has been back on the job for less than a month after his acquittal on federal extortion charges. He’s already getting to work remaking the office.

Tompkins is reshuffling the upper rungs of his leadership team following a year-long absence, bringing back several former employees while some senior staffers — including the man who ran the office in Tompkins’s absence — are now out or being reassigned.

In a letter to staff Wednesday, Tompkins’s office said Mark Lawhorne, whom Tompkins last year appointed as the “special sheriff” to fill Tompkins’s seat while he stepped away amid his legal battle, is “no longer with the Department.”

Meanwhile, Michael Harris, a former superintendent, has been reinstated as special sheriff, Rachelle N. Villarsen, the department’s director of human resources, wrote in the memo viewed by the Globe.

Lawhorne and another senior staffer, Michael Lally, were still listed on Tompkins’s executive team as recently as Sept. 3, according to an archived version of the department’s website. By this week, both names had been scrubbed.

Two people familiar with the situation said Lawhorne, who previously served as chief of staff at the Middlesex County Sheriff’s Office, was fired Tuesday. Lally, who had been listed as superintendent of the House of Correction, was reassigned to the department’s civil process division, said the people, who spoke on the condition of anonymity to share internal information.

Captain Dana Johnson is being promoted to the position Lally held, according to the memo, which did not address the latter’s current role.

The sheriff’s chief of Human Resources, Anthony Mosley, is also no longer working for the department, according to the memo.

It was not immediately clear why Lawhorne specifically was removed. Tompkins had hand-picked the then-assistant superintendent to lead the office in his absence more than two years after Tompkins first hired him. Lawhorne had also spent several years working for the city of Somerville before he joined the sheriff’s office.

Peter Van Delft, a spokesperson for the Suffolk County Sheriff’s Office, said that the department “does not comment on personnel

TOMPKINS, Page B4

Jury selection set to begin in trial of Matthew Farwell

By Laura Crimaldi
GLOBE STAFF

The high-profile trial of former Stoughton police detective Matthew Farwell, who is accused of killing Sandra Birchmore after sexually abusing her for years, is set to begin with jury selection on Tuesday at US District Court in Boston.

Here is everything you need to know.

Farwell, 40, is accused of strangling a pregnant Birchmore, 23, at her Canton apartment on Feb. 1, 2021, and then staging the scene to make it look like she killed herself.

Birchmore was eight to 10 weeks pregnant when she died and had told Farwell that he was the father. Federal prosecutors allege Farwell killed Birchmore to cover up that he had been sexually exploiting her beginning when she was 15, and he was 27, and other alleged crimes.

The FBI arrested Farwell on Aug. 28, 2024, and since then he’s been held without bail at a Rhode Island detention facility.

Testimony is expected to cover disputes over whether Birchmore was killed or died by suicide, allegations of child sexual exploitation and police misconduct, and questions over whether the initial investigation into her death was adequate.

Farwell and Birchmore met some time after she enrolled in the Stoughton Police Department Explorers Program in 2010, the year she turned 13. Farwell participated in the program as a youth and stayed involved as a volunteer instructor.

Farwell is charged with killing a witness, Birchmore, and causing the death of her unborn baby boy. If convicted, he faces life in prison.

Farwell has pleaded not guilty, insisting Birchmore killed herself, citing the state medical examiner’s initial ruling that

FARWELL, Page B4

JOHN TLUMACKI/GLOBE STAFF
Suffolk County Sheriff Steven Tompkins

CROSS WITH CAUTION

JOHN TLUMACKI/GLOBE STAFF

Mud and broken pieces of the sidewalk covered the intersection of Purchase and Summer streets across from South Station after a water main break flooded the area Friday.

Man seeks parole after killing classmate in 2007

Eligible for life sentence release after rule change

By Travis Andersen

GLOBE STAFF

A man who was 16 when he killed a classmate at Lincoln-Sudbury High School in 2007 will have a parole hearing next month as he seeks release from a life sentence, records show.

John Odgren, 36, will go before the state Parole Board in Natick on Nov. 10 for his initial hearing, records show.

The MetroWest Daily News previously reported that Odgren was seeking parole.

A Middlesex Superior Court jury in 2010 found Odgren guilty of first-degree murder in the Jan. 19, 2007, stabbing death of 15-year-old James Alenson.

Odgren had brought a kitchen knife to school that day and attacked Alenson, whom he did not know, inside a bathroom.

Odgren admitted through counsel that he committed the slaying but argued that long-term psychiatric issues, including depression coupled with Asperger's, made him psychotic at the time.

His attorneys later argued before the state's highest court that as a juvenile his brain had not fully developed and therefore he should not face trial, conviction, or sentencing as an adult.

The state Supreme Judicial Court rejected his arguments in a 2019 ruling, concluding that the jury was "made sufficiently aware of the impact that the defendant's age and various diagnoses might have had on his ability to form the requisite intent to kill."

While first-degree murder normally carries an automatic life sentence with no parole, Odgren became eligible to seek release when the SJC in 2024 struck down life sentences without an opportunity for parole for people who were younger than 21 when they committed their crimes.

He's currently incarcerated at North Central Correctional Institution, a medium- and minimum-security prison in Gardner, according to records.

In upholding his first-degree murder conviction in 2019, Justice Elspeth B. Cypher of the SJC wrote that a witness had provided harrowing details of the killing at trial.

"The witness heard a brief struggle between the defendant and the victim, during which he heard the victim exclaim, 'What are you doing? Stop that. Ow, ow. You're hurting me,'" Cypher wrote. "He then heard the victim leave the bathroom and noticed three or four drops of blood at the foot of his stall. The defendant, who was still inside the bathroom, repeated, 'Oh, my God. Oh, my God. What did I just do?' several times and, after a pause, say, 'Whoever is in that stall, I need you to go get help.'"

The witness opened the stall door, Cypher wrote, and saw Odgren "sitting on the floor with his arms wrapped around his knees, 'kind of clutched up in a fetal-type position,' and a large knife was on the bathroom floor."

Cypher wrote that when the witness returned to the area with help, he saw Odgren kneeling next to Alenson, saying "Don't let him die. It was all me. I did this. I just went crazy."

Alenson's family set up a scholarship fund in his name in 2010.

"James was passionate about football," the fund's website says. "He wore his #37 Rodney Harrison jersey from August through January as he watched games and managed his fantasy team. James cherished the holidays, the spirit of the season, and being with family. ... James had many wonderful qualities. We are most proud of how considerate he was of everyone he met. We encourage those who visit this website to perform an act of kindness in a loved one's memory."

Travis Andersen can be reached at travis.andersen@globe.com.

Officials ID woman fatally struck by car outside hospital

By Shannon Larson

GLOBE STAFF

Authorities have identified the woman killed by a vehicle when it barreled into a building on the campus of Brigham and Women's Faulkner Hospital in Jamaica Plain on Thursday morning.

Patricia McGrath, 68, of Dorchester, was sitting on a bench outside of the Belkin House when the car hit her, the Suffolk district attorney's office said Friday. She was taken into the hospital, but succumbed to her injuries.

Two people in the vehicle were injured and also received medical help at the hospital. The crash ruptured a gas line, prompting the evacuation of more than 30 people as a precaution while crews checked for damage.

The crash closed the building, forcing the hospital to redirect dialysis patients to another site, officials said.

The crash is under investigation and no criminal charges have been filed, the district attorney's office said.

The vehicle came to rest between the entrance to the parking garage and the front steps of the Belkin House, a standalone building that the hospital leases to a dialysis clinic.

Esmeralda Villar was leaving the hospital around 11 a.m. when she walked past the aftermath of the crash. She said she saw blood on the sidewalk outside the building. The driver appeared to be an elderly man, she said.

Villar said she was worried he may have hit the accelerator by accident.

The Belkin House remained closed Friday. The dialysis clinic redirected its patients to other sites, officials said.

"Brigham and Women's Faulkner Hospital is deeply saddened by this tragic incident," MGB spokesperson Kelly Mitchell said in a statement Thursday, adding that the hospital extends its condolences to those affected.

Shannon Larson can be reached at shannon.larson@globe.com.

This day in history

Today is Saturday, Oct. 3, the 276th day of 2026. There are 89 days left in the year.

Birthdays: Composer Steve Reich is 90. Rock 'n' roll star Chubby Checker is 85. Musician Lindsey Buckingham (Fleetwood Mac) is 77. Blues musician Keb' Mo' is 75. Baseball Hall of Famer Dave Winfield is 75. Baseball Hall of Famer Dennis Eckersley is 72. Rock drummer Tommy Lee is 64. Actor Clive Owen is 62. Film director Denis Villeneuve is 59. Singer-TV personality Gwen Stefani is 57. Pop singer Kevin Richardson (Backstreet Boys) is 55. Actor Neve Campbell is 53. Actor Lena Headey is 53. Rapper Talib Kweli is 51. Actor Tessa Thompson is 43. Actor-singer Ashlee Simpson is 42. Actor Alicia Vikander is 38. Rapper A$AP Rocky is 38. Actor Ayo Edebiri is 31. Actor Noah Schnapp (TV: "Stranger Things") is 22.

►In 1873, Modoc leader Kintpuash was hanged at Fort Klamath, Ore., after being convicted of his role in the deaths of US negotiators during the Modoc War, a conflict in which his people resisted relocation. Kintpuash was the only Native American leader charged and convicted of a war crime by the United States.

►In 1944, during World War II, US Army troops cracked the Siegfried Line north of Aachen, Germany.

►In 1951, the New York Giants captured the National League pennant by a score of 5-4 as Bobby Thomson hit a three-run homer off Ralph Branca of the Brooklyn Dodgers, which became known as the "Shot Heard 'Round the World."

►In 1974, Frank Robinson became the American League's first Black manager after he was hired by the Cleveland Indians.

►In 1990, West Germany and East Germany ended 45 years of postwar division, declaring the creation of a reunified country.

►In 1993, 18 US service members and hundreds of Somalis were killed in the Battle of Mogadishu — the deadliest battle for US troops since the Vietnam War. The battle inspired the film "Black Hawk Down."

►In 1995, the jury in the O.J. Simpson murder trial in Los Angeles found the former football star not guilty of the 1994 killings of his former wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman.

►In 2008, O.J. Simpson was found guilty of robbing two sports-memorabilia dealers at gunpoint in a Las Vegas hotel room. (Simpson was later sentenced to nine to 33 years in prison; he was granted parole in July 2017 and released in October of that year. He died at age 76 on April 10, 2024, after battling prostate cancer.)

►In 2011, an Italian appeals court freed Amanda Knox of Seattle after four years in prison, tossing murder convictions against Knox and an ex-boyfriend in the stabbing of their British roommate, Meredith Kercher. An Italian high court definitively vindicated Knox in 2015, throwing out the convictions once and for all.

►In 2013, a smugglers' ship packed with African migrants sank off the coast of a southern Italian island, killing more than 365 people.

►In 2023, the US House of Representatives voted to remove House Speaker Kevin McCarthy — the first time in US history a speaker had been ousted from the position. Though McCarthy had the support of many fellow Republicans, several hard-right detractors from his party essentially forced him out.

►In 2025, Sean "Diddy" Combs was sentenced to four years and two months in prison for transporting people across state lines for sexual encounters, capping a federal case marked by harrowing testimony and a forceful reckoning over one of hip-hop's most influential figures.

Inquest finds police justified in shooting death of armed man

Confrontation occurred in Cambridge

By Travis Andersen

GLOBE STAFF

A judge who presided over an inquest into the fatal police shooting of an armed man in Cambridge has determined that the officers were justified in opening fire, court records show.

A nine-page ruling on Sept. 16 from District Court Judge Holly V. Broadbent said two police officers, James Nestor and Donald Conrad, acted lawfully when they shot William Woodworth, 64, on the evening of Aug. 21 in Central Square.

Middlesex District Attorney Marian T. Ryan had requested the closed-door review of the matter by Broadbent, who heard from witnesses and reviewed 38 exhibits in reaching her decision. Ryan's office released a copy of Broadbent's ruling on Friday.

Broadbent wrote that a security guard at 675 Massachusetts Ave. had called 911 shortly before 8 p.m. on the night in question to report people loitering in a private lot behind the building.

Among the responding officers was Conrad, who approached the passenger door of a Jeep Compass and recognized the man sitting in the driver's seat as Woodworth, Broadbent said.

"Officer Conrad had previously stopped a car Mr. Woodworth had operated where a search of the car resulted in the discovery of a firearm in the driver's side door," Broadbent wrote.

In that matter, a charge of unlawful gun possession filed against Woodworth was dropped owing to "the unconstitutionality" of the stop, Broadbent wrote.

A month before Woodworth's death, Conrad had conducted a separate traffic stop "where Mr. Woodworth and another individual were inside a car in which police recovered crack cocaine and a double sided machete."

On the night of Aug. 21, Conrad ordered Woodworth out of the vehicle, and as he began to exit he "slid his right hand under the driver's seat and pulled out a firearm," Broadbent wrote.

She said Conrad ordered Woodworth three times to drop the gun.

"Woodworth ignored his commands, turned left as he exited the car, and pointed the firearm at Officer [David] Kerns, who had approached the driver's side door," Broadbent wrote.

Kerns immediately grabbed Woodworth's arms to disarm him, she wrote. Conrad then fired six shots at Woodworth through the lowered passenger window, while Nestor shot him once, she wrote.

Police began performing first aid, but Woodworth was pronounced dead at the scene, Broadbent wrote.

"The entire time elapsed from the beginning of Officer Conrad's interaction with Woodworth to the shooting was less than 60 seconds," Broadbent wrote, adding that an autopsy found Woodworth sustained "a total of five gunshot wounds: one to the head, one to the shoulder, and three to the back."

Broadbent said investigators recovered a .38 Special gun from Woodworth that was loaded with five rounds.

She said Woodworth's mother and sister both later told authorities that he'd been diagnosed with psychosis and bipolar disorder following a traumatic brain injury he had suffered in a motor vehicle crash when he was 18.

"Woodworth had been hospitalized multiple times throughout his adult life because of his mental health issues, and had on occasion been violent when he combined his prescribed medications with alcohol and illegal narcotics," Broadbent said. "Woodworth on one occasion told his sister that the best way to die would be to point a gun at someone else."

Broadbent said it was "objectively reasonable" for the officers to open fire in the face of the imminent, armed threat presented by Woodworth.

"Any reasonable police officer in their position would reasonably believe that both the officers and civilians were in imminent danger of being seriously injured or killed," Broadbent wrote. "The Court finds their actions were justified."

Ryan's office said the district attorney has "accepted the findings" and will not seek criminal charges.

Soon after his death, family members recalled Woodworth, of Watertown, as a handyman and artist whose mental health struggles dated back to childhood.

"I want people to know him how he was: A very lovely and loving person," his wife, Felicitia Woodworth, said during an August interview.

Travis Andersen can be reached at travis.andersen@globe.com.

The Boston Globe

News

CONTACTS, TIPS, COMMENTS
Switchboard: (617) 929-2000
(617) 929-7400
newstip@globe.com
comments@globe.com

SPOTLIGHT TEAM TIP LINE
(617) 929-7483

Customer service

PRINT AND DIGITAL
(888) 694-5623
customerservice@globe.com

Advertising

DISPLAY
(617) 929-2200
bostonglobemedia.com

CLASSIFIED
(617) 929-1500
boston.com/classifieds

	City	Retail	Other
7-day home delivery	$70.00	70.00	70.00
Sunday-only home delivery	$22.50	22.50	22.50
Daily single copy	$4.00	4.00	4.00
Sunday single copy	$6.00	6.00	6.00

Lottery

FRIDAY MIDDAY		1640
Payoffs (based on a $1 bet)
EXACT ORDER
All 4 digits	$5,632
First or last 3	$788
Any 2 digits	$68
Any 1 digit	$7
ANY ORDER
All 4 digits	$235
First 3	$131
Last 3	$131
FRIDAY NIGHT		3253
Payoffs (based on a $1 bet)
EXACT ORDER
All 4 digits	$4,673
First or last 3	$654
Any 2 digits	$56
Any 1 digit	$6
ANY ORDER
All 4 digits	$389
First 3	$109
Last 3	$109

MILLIONAIRE FOR LIFE
Oct. 1	12-16-32-33-56
	Millionaire Ball 2
	Jackpot: $1 million per year; no winners
MASS CASH
Oct. 2	9-16-19-23-25
	Jackpot: $100,000
MEGA MILLIONS
Oct. 2	Megaball
	Jackpot: $321,000,000
PREVIOUS DRAWINGS
	Midday	Night
Thursday	2540	9965
Wednesday	9671	1957
Tuesday	1512	3422
Monday	6411	1480
Sunday	6961	8427
FRIDAY NUMBERS
AROUND NEW ENGLAND
	Maine, N.H., Vermont
Day: 3-digit	136	4-digit 2935
Eve: 3-digit	721	4-digit 4410
Rhode Island

Waltham man charged with cyberstalking wife of Trump aide

By Tonya Alanez
GLOBE STAFF

A Waltham man has been arrested on allegations that he harassed Katie Miller, a conservative podcaster married to Stephen Miller, one of President Trump's closest advisers, in a series of menacing, expletive-laced text and phone messages, according to US Attorney Leah B. Foley's office and a social media post by Katie Miller.

John Anthony Proia III, 41, pleaded not guilty Thursday to a single charge of cyberstalking at an initial appearance and arraignment hearing in federal court in Boston, court records show.

Magistrate Judge Paul G. Levenson ordered Proia to surrender his crossbows, machetes, and passport, and to have no contact with the victim. He also restricted Proia's travel to Massachusetts, and directed him to continue mental health services, and undergo random drug testing, according to court filings.

Federal prosecutors did not identify Katie Miller by name, instead describing the victim as a former political adviser and prominent figure in the Republican Party who lives in the vicinity of Washington D.C. and is married to a high-level federal government employee.

Stephen Miller is the White House's deputy chief of staff for policy. Katie Miller is a former Trump administration official, where she served as an adviser and spokesperson for the Department of Government Efficiency, or DOGE, until May 2025 and launched a conservative podcast that summer.

In a post on X, Katie Miller thanked federal law enforcement officials "for keeping me and my family safe."

"Good to see a Boston grand jury indict this man," she wrote.

A federal grand jury handed up Proia's indictment on Thursday, court records show.

The White House did not immediately respond to a request

JOSE LUIS MAGANA/ASSOCIATED PRESS/FILE

Katie Miller worked for the Trump administration in the Department of Government Efficiency until May 2025.

for comment. A message was sent to Proia's attorney seeking comment.

Federal prosecutors allege that Proia made disturbing phone calls and sent text messages, more than 40 in all, from Aug. 3 to Sept. 23, to the victim and her parents.

In a call to the victim's mother, the male caller greeted her by name and asked if she was disturbed that her daughter was married to "such evil," charging documents said.

In a communication with the victim's father, Proia allegedly said, according to charging documents, "hope your daughter marrying a Jewish Nazi/white supremacist is working out for you ... Did you raise her to be trash or did that just happen naturally?"

According to Foley's office, Proia used "an ever-changing series of unfamiliar phone numbers" to harass the victim with multiple daily and late-night calls.

The caller's phone numbers were obtained through applications that provide free phone numbers via Voice Over Internet Protocol or VoIP. The applications allow a user to obfuscate their identity and easily generate new numbers, Foley's office said.

"As alleged in the indictment, the defendant repeatedly and relentlessly targeted the victim, her husband, and her family with deeply disturbing communications that profoundly disrupted their lives," Foley said in a statement.

"Cyberstalking can inflict real fear and harm, and we take these allegations extremely seriously," she said. "Those who use technology to harass, intimidate, or torment others should understand that attempts to anonymize their criminal conduct will not shield them from prosecution. We will find you, and we will hold you accountable."

Ted E. Docks, the FBI's special agent in charge of the Boston division, said in the same statement that Proia engaged "in a sustained campaign of harassment to frighten this victim and her family, inflicting significant emotional distress."

"Terrorizing someone isn't some sick game, it's a crime, which is why the FBI and our partners take it so seriously as we work to protect and serve everyone in our communities," Docks said.

Tonya Alanez can be reached at tonya.alanez@globe.com. Follow her @talanez.

Vt. Catholic Diocese seeks to dismiss its bankruptcy case

By Kevin O'Connor
VTDIGGER/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vermont's Roman Catholic Diocese is marking this week's second anniversary of its request for a Chapter 11 financial reorganization plan by asking a US Bankruptcy Court judge to dismiss its case, which so far has cost $2 million in legal fees "with no end in sight," church lawyers said.

The state's largest religious denomination had filed its initial call for help on Sept. 30, 2024, when it said a past series of nearly 70 priest misconduct settlements had reduced its monetary holdings by half — to about $35 million — with more than 100 other abuse claims dating as far back as 1950 yet to be resolved.

Two years later, attorneys for the church and its creditors — who include more than 100 claimants of clergy abuse — held private mediation sessions on Monday and Tuesday. At the end of those meetings, the diocese offered creditors a proposed $29.4 million collective settlement that would average $247,000 per claimant, it wrote in a court filing.

An official committee representing creditors declined the diocese's offer, its lawyers said, having learned over the weekend that the court was set to consider the claimants' related lawsuit seeking access to an additional estimated $500 million in local parish assets the church sheltered in trusts in 2006.

On Wednesday, the diocese responded by requesting dismissal of the Chapter 11 case, for which it has spent $2 million for its attorneys and, as required by federal law, counsel for creditors, court records show.

Burlington-based Judge Heather Cooper has set a hearing on the diocese's request for Dec. 8.

"The diocese does not believe continued mediation in this case will be productive or successful," church counsel wrote in its filing.

"Dismissal," it continued, "will preserve (church) resources and allow the diocese and the survivors to pursue resolution through alternative means, free from the mounting costs of Chapter 11 administration."

In response, creditors said they would oppose the move.

"The diocese is not being forced to litigate," committee counsel Brittany Michael said in a statement. "It is choosing to litigate every issue the hard way and then blaming the bill on everyone else."

Daniel Stack is one of several committee members whose clergy abuse claims were put on hold when the diocese filed for Chapter 11 protection.

"Two years ago, the diocese avoided accountability on the eve of my trial and said bankruptcy was necessary for survivors to be treated fairly," Stack said in a statement. Now, "the diocese wants to leave the process altogether. That is not the conduct of an institution acting in good faith, it is a second attempt to avoid accountability."

Under federal law, any financial reorganization plan requires approval by both the court and creditors. Ending the bankruptcy court proceedings without an agreement won't erase the diocese's challenging financial picture. Instead, it will revive the abuse lawsuits sidelined by the Chapter 11 filing and send the church and abuse claimants into a series of individual civil trials.

The judge had aimed to draw the case to a close this summer when she threatened to reject the church's bid to reorganize its finances if a viable plan wasn't submitted by this week's two-year anniversary of requesting help.

"My concern is that I don't want it all going to the professionals," Cooper said of church funds paying for lawyers. "I do think that the survivors probably would like to have something left over at the end of the day."

Then this past weekend, the judge signaled she was set to hear a lawsuit by creditors seeking access to not only the diocese's state-level bank and building assets but also an estimated half-billion dollars in local parish property and possessions.

"Unless settled," the judge has written of the contested assets of nearly 70 parishes, "there may be years of litigation ahead and millions of dollars spent in attorneys' fees and costs that could have paid (for) valid abuse claims."

The court also had scheduled an evidentiary hearing for November on the diocese's request to sell its flagship Rice Memorial High School in South Burlington to supporters for $4.3 million — or 14 percent of a church-commissioned appraisal of $30.5 million.

Both the lawsuit over local parish assets and request to sell Rice remain on the court calendar.

The Vermont church is one of 44 US Catholic entities to spend time and money seeking Chapter 11 protection since news of a nationwide priest misconduct scandal broke in 2002.

The Diocese of Rockville Centre in New York has reported the highest legal fees for such a case, at more than $100 million over four years before resolution in 2024, according to news reports. The Archdiocese of New Orleans is second at nearly $60 million over five years before resolution in 2025, while the Archdiocese of Milwaukee is third at $23 million over 4 1/2 years before resolution in 2015.

GLOBEDOCS FILM FESTIVAL

presented by  CROSS
INSURANCE

IN CINEMAS / OCT. 21 - 25
ON DEMAND / OCT. 21 - NOV. 1

30 Documentary Films

Buy tickets and see line-up at Globe.com/filmfest

Presented by  CROSS
INSURANCE

Sponsored by MFABoston

studio |  presents

Future of Medicine

The science of living longer is advancing fast. But it takes more than a breakthrough. It takes nurses, advocates, new technology, and communities working together. These are the people and ideas remaking medicine across New England.

Scan here to read more or visit Globe.com/FOM

Minogue campaign spent $6.1 million in September

► MINOGUE
Continued from Page B1

who’s led by wide margins in available public polling.

Jim Conroy — Baker’s former campaign manager who also advised Michael Kennealy, one of Minogue’s one-time primary opponents — said Minogue’s decision to spend large sums last month is part of the “sprint” in a state with one of the country’s latest primaries.

“And if you have the resources to do it, September and October are when voters are making up their mind,” he said. Voters consume entertainment in vastly different ways today, Conroy said, but TV ads are still a lifeblood of campaigns. “Broadcast TV is the biggest mover.”

Minogue is a former medical industry executive who made a small fortune when the business he ran, D a n v e r s - b a s e d Abiomed, was sold to Johnson & Johnson in 2022. He has used his vast wealth to self-finance his run for governor, pouring at least $15.8 million into his campaign in roughly a year.

In his pitch to voters, Minogue has pledged to cut taxes, remove clean energy-related fees from utility bills, and even try to reintroduce flavored nicotine pouches to store shelves in Massachusetts.

And he’s used his personal coffers to flood local TV channels with ads since last year — from spots boasting of Democrats backing his campaign to one featuring actors in a donut shop and another calling for relief from high gas prices to primetime hits during Patriots’ games.

In his latest filing, Minogue reported spending $4.9 million with AxMedia, a company that facilitates media buys for political candidates.

Minogue also reported raising $1.8 million last month, though it’s unclear how much of that was from his own money. He reported having $1.5 million in his campaign account at the end of September.

Elizabeth Hopkins, a spokesperson for Minogue, did not respond to questions on Friday about how much of Minogue’s own money he put into his campaign last month.

In a statement, Minogue instead attacked Healey, saying the governor “wants to focus on everything except the people across Massachusetts who are struggling with the rising cost of housing, energy, taxes, health-care, and everyday life.”

“Voters want a governor who will lower costs, put people ahead of politics, solve problems, and deliver results,” he said.

Wendy Wakeman, a local Republican political strategist, said campaigns often spend big in September as they ink advertising contracts with television stations in October.

“We’ve got 30 days left in the election,” she said. “We are in the home stretch, and if you haven’t spent most of your cash in

KEN MCGAGH FOR THE BOSTON GLOBE

Michael Minogue, Republican candidate for governor, spoke during a campaign event in Amesbury last month. He has put at least $15.8 million of his own money into his campaign.

September ... when are you going to spend it?”

Minogue, a first-time candidate for public office, spent millions of dollars in campaign cash over the summer, including $2.9 million in August ahead of the Sept. 1 primary, when he easily topped fellow GOP candidate Brian Shortleeve.

But the Hamilton Republican still faces an uphill battle ahead of the Nov. 3 election.

A MassINC/Commonwealth Beacon poll of likely voters in November’s general election, released this week, found that 54 percent said they would back or lean toward backing Healey, while 32 percent said the same of Minogue.

The survey also found Healey held comfortable approval ratings, with 52 percent of likely voters holding a favorable view of the governor. It was more mixed for Minogue: more either viewed him unfavorably (33 percent) or were undecided about him (27 percent) than the 21 percent who said they had a favorable view of him.

Lyons, the spokesperson for Healey’s campaign, cast Minogue’s record spending as an attempt “to buy this election.”

Healey has consistently sought to tie Minogue to Trump, for whom Minogue helped raise money in 2024. He also gave hundreds of thousands of dollars to a committee backing Trump’s successful 2024 run. Healey also made talking about Trump a center point of her reelection strategy, framing herself as a necessary bulwark to the Republican administration’s agenda.

Shawn Oliver, Minogue’s Republican running mate, reported raising just under $4,000 and spending $9,000 last month, state records show. Lieutenant Governor Kim Driscoll raised $349,000 last month and had $2.9 million cash on hand at the end of September, according to the Healey campaign.

Chris Van Buskirk can be reached at chris.vanb@globe.com. Follow him on X @byChrisVan

Jury selection set to begin in trial of Matthew Farwell

► FARWELL
Continued from Page B1

the cause of death was suicide. (In April, the medical examiner withdrew the suicide opinion and listed her manner of death as undetermined.) Farwell also argues that Birchmore had a history of suicide attempts and self-harm. DNA testing has excluded Farwell as the father.

Testimony is expected to take about a month. There are more than 100 possible witnesses and hundreds of possible exhibits, including thousands of text messages between Farwell and Birchmore.

Who was Sandra Birchmore?

Birchmore grew up in Stoughton, the daughter of a disabled single mother. Her grandparents and aunts helped to raise her, and she struggled after her mother and grandmother died in 2016 within about a month of each other.

Birchmore idolized law enforcement and military personnel, and in 2010 joined the Explorers Program.

There she met Matthew Farwell, his twin brother William, and Robert C. Devine, 54, a former Stoughton police deputy chief who previously led the Explorers group.

A Stoughton police internal affairs investigation found the three men engaged in “lies, deceit, and treachery” and had “inappropriate” relationships with Birchmore.

In 2022, the brothers resigned from Stoughton police and Devine retired. All three were stripped of their law enforcement certifications, though Devine, now an attorney, is seeking reinstatement. Devine and William Farwell are not charged with any crimes.

They deny wrongdoing.

On Dec. 28, 2020, Birchmore learned she was pregnant and told Matthew Farwell he was the father. He reacted angrily and told Birchmore she was the “worst person on the face of the earth,” prosecutors said.

Former Stoughton police officer Matthew Farwell is accused of killing Sandra Birchmore.

Prosecutors allege Farwell became enraged after he learned that one of Birchmore’s friends called Stoughton police on Jan. 20, 2021, to reveal the affair, and began plotting to kill Birchmore.

Who is Matthew Farwell?

Matthew Farwell grew up in Stoughton, where he and his twin brother, William, joined the Stoughton Police Department Explorers program as children.

He left Stoughton High School in 11th grade and joined the Army, where he trained as an explosives expert and deployed to Afghanistan in 2006.

In 2008, Farwell became a Wellesley police officer. The first time he applied for a job as a Stoughton police officer, the department turned him down.

He tried again in 2012 and made it onto the force.

By this time, Birchmore was participating in the Explorers program. Farwell was a volunteer instructor.

Federal prosecutors allege Farwell groomed Birchmore by tutoring her at the local library and sending her a Facebook friend request in October 2012.

Farwell is accused of initiating

LEFT: STOUGHTON POLICE VIA ASSOCIATED PRESS; RIGHT: FAMILY PHOTO

ing criminal sexual contact with Birchmore when she was at least 15 and too young to consent under state law.

Farwell married in May 2013 and had three children with his wife.

The youngest, a son, was born the morning after prosecutors say Farwell killed Birchmore.

A phone call made to Stoughton police

Birchmore’s friend called Stoughton police to complain that Birchmore owed her $248 for cosmetic nail strips.

The police call taker told the friend her complaint was a civil matter. Upset, the woman said Birchmore and Farwell were having sex.

The Stoughton police employee then told Farwell about the call. Prosecutors allege Farwell became angry and ordered his colleague never to speak of the call with anyone.

He texted Birchmore that he believed their relationship was a secret.

“I literally can’t believe this is even real life like what else do I have to worry about now?” Farwell wrote.

Prosecutors said the phone call convinced Farwell that he had lost control of Birchmore. They allege that’s when he decided to kill her.

Farwell denies this.

The night prosecutors say Birchmore died

Birchmore, a teacher’s aide, got home early from work because school was dismissed as a nor’easter bore down on the region.

Inside her apartment, Birchmore texted people, including Farwell, FaceTimed a friend, talked on the phone with her aunt, and ordered takeout, according to prosecutors.

They listed chores suggesting Birchmore was planning for the future: browsing baby supplies online, submitting a community college admission form.

She texted Farwell about the baby. She told him she received an early baby shower gift but didn’t want to have the celebration during the pandemic.

Farwell texted that he was “stressed.”

At 9:07 p.m., Farwell asked Birchmore in a text message if he could “come by for second.”

Farwell arrived at Birchmore’s apartment building at 9:14 p.m., wearing a hood and a surgical mask, a routine practice during the COVID-19 pandemic, but one that prosecutors said he “strongly resisted.”

Ten minutes later, a friend texted Birchmore photos of custom baby onesies, but she never opened or read the message, prosecutors said.

Security cameras recorded Farwell leaving Birchmore’s building at 9:43 p.m. He was the last known person to see her alive, the Stoughton police internal affairs report said.

What did state investigators say about Birchmore’s death?

State Police troopers in Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey’s office conducted much of the initial probe, which federal investigators described as “brief.”

Soon after Birchmore’s body was found, some Canton police officers and State Police troopers told the state medical examiner’s office that she killed herself, prosecutors wrote in court papers.

Photographs from her apartment show her flamingo pendant necklace had a broken chain, but police did not collect it, prosecutors said. A relative later turned it in to police while cleaning out Birchmore’s apartment.

Prosecutors said troopers, including one who previously worked as a Stoughton police officer, interviewed Farwell, but didn’t record the meeting or seek warrants to search his home or digital devices.

In May 2021, the state Office of the Chief Medical Examiner ruled Birchmore died by suicide. Federal prosecutors say Dr. María Del Mar Capó-Martínez reached her conclusion following a “dearth of investigative updates.”

The following year, Morrissey’s spokesperson said State Police and the state medical examiner “found no evidence of foul play.” Morrissey has never filed criminal charges in the case.

What did outside experts say about Birchmore’s death?

Two independent experts who reviewed evidence in Birchmore’s case determined she died by homicide.

Dr. William Smock and Dr. Michael Baden point to fractures in Birchmore’s hyoid bone, a small, U-shaped neck bone, and the position in which her body was found. Based on how Birchmore’s body was found, and the distribution of body weight — as well as Birchmore’s age and the flexibility of her hyoid bone — they suggest strangulation was more likely to have killed her than hanging.

Smock is known for testifying in the 2021 trial of Derek Chauvin, the former Minneapolis police officer convicted of killing George Floyd by pressing a knee on his neck for 9 1/2 minutes.

Baden is a former New York City medical examiner known for his work on high-profile cases. He testified for the defense at O.J. Simpson’s 1995 trial and attended Jeffrey Epstein’s autopsy, later saying some of the evidence suggested Epstein’s death was a homicide.

The prosecution experts further point to evidence that Birchmore struggled. Smock cited her snapped necklace with a flamingo pendant that broke along the chain and abrasions on her nose.

The defense plans to offer testimony from Dr. Thomas Andrew, a board-certified forensic pathologist and former chief medical examiner in New Hampshire.

He could not determine Birchmore’s manner of death but said he could not rule out the possibility she hanged herself, court papers show.

Laura Crimaldi can be reached at laura.crimaldi@globe.com. Follow her @lauracrimaldi.

After acquittal, Tompkins shakes up staff at Suffolk sheriff’s office matters.” Tompkins did not respond to requests for comment.

► TOMPKINS
Continued from Page B1

In a Facebook post Friday, Lawhorne described himself as one of the “casualties” of Tompkins’s decisions to make changes to the staff.

“He felt he wasn’t served well while I was in charge. I can tell you what I did during my tenure was to ensure the stability of our department, take care of the employees and ensure they had the tools to complete the mission,” Lawhorne wrote, later adding: “I am a loyal soldier, but my duty was to the department not one man.”

The shakeup comes just weeks after Tompkins returned to the job he had agreed to “step away” from last year at the urging of Governor Maura Healey and Attorney General Andrea Campbell as he faced federal charges of using his office to extort a cannabis company.

His acquittal and rapid return to office surprised some political observers, but Tompkins already weathered a series of controversies.

In 2015, the state Ethics Commission fined him $2,500 after finding he asked local store owners to remove his opponent’s campaign signs. Eight years later, he paid a $12,300 fine after officials said he created a job for his niece and repeatedly asked his subordinates to run personal errands for him.

The federal case was more serious. Federal prosecutors accused Tompkins of using his office to gain early access to an investment in a cannabis company, Ascend Wellness Holdings — and then trying to recoup his $50,000 investment after the company’s stock value tanked. A jury found him not guilty in late August.

Now he’s back, and wasting little time making his presence felt in an office he’s led since 2013.

Villarson’s memo to employees laid out a series of other personnel moves.

Sylvia Thomas, who state payroll records show worked as an assistant superintendent in the office up until 2024, returned as director of security, the memo said. And Abiezer Ayuso, who had been on the payroll as a superintendent in the office up until January of this year, returned as “community affairs liaison of external affairs,” according to the memo. A handful of other employees were promoted.

“Please extend warm congratulations to the newly promoted employees,” Villarson wrote. “Their work will undoubtedly further the mandate and mission of the Department.”

Kelly Garrity can be reached at kelly.garrity@globe.com.

SHIMMERING START

Rowers were out on the Charles River at sunrise Friday, taking advantage of the warm temperatures.

DAVID L. RYAN/GLOBE STAFF

Boston federal judge asks for ‘roadmap’ in student visa case

By Chloe Craft
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

The Boston judge presiding over a federal court case centered on a Trump administration plan to restrict international student visas asked both parties at a hearing Friday to file proposals for a “pathway forward.”

The hearing at the John Joseph Moakley Federal Courthouse in Boston was intended to clarify the status of the case, which involves a group of university leaders, nonprofits, and labor unions suing the federal government to prevent ending the long-standing policy allowing international students to remain in the US on valid visas for the duration of their studies without time constraints.

The move would mean international students may not be allowed to complete their studies in the US if doing so would require them to stay longer than four years.

Declining international student enrollment has already been a blow to state economies, which would be exacerbated by the new policy, experts say.

In September, Judge F. Dennis Saylor issued a preliminary injunction in favor of the plaintiffs — which includes the Presidents’ Alliance on Higher Education and Immigration, a coalition of US college and university leaders — one day before the rule was set to take effect, postponing it until the case is resolved. In his ruling, Saylor described the government’s rationale for the rule as “exceptionally weak” and that, if implemented, it would cause “catastrophic” damage to higher education institutions and to the national economy.

The Department of Homeland Security appealed the injunction, but the federal government is barred from implementing the rule while the case is ongoing.

At the Friday hearing, attorney Paul Hughes, who represented the coalition suing the federal government, suggested that Saylor end the case soon through a summary judgment or permanent injunction, decisions he said would simplify the appeals case.

A summary judgment would decide the winner of the case before a full trial, while a permanent injunction would take the form of a final court order to the losing party at the end of the lawsuit.

Attorney Michael Celone, representing the Department of Homeland Security, asked for the court to stay, which would pause proceedings as the appeal runs its course through the appeals court. He said that waiting longer instead of immediately issuing a summary judgment or permanent injunction would avoid administrative costs and affected academic pathways.

Celone said staying would also limit “the risk of inconsistent judgments” if the court “continues towards summary judgment with pending proceedings” in the court of appeals. He also said that the federal government is working to “expedite” the appeals.

Hughes argued that staying could complicate the case, causing unnecessary confusion down the road.

Saylor said he did not want to issue a decision on either party’s behalf “on the fly.” Instead, he requested that both sides complete simultaneous filings proposing a “roadmap” for the case by Oct. 9. He said the filings should cover what issues the parties still want addressed as well as what a final decision on the case, and time-tables for those decisions, could look like.

The federal government’s new rule, announced in July and set to take effect Sept. 15, caps visa holders’ duration of stay in the US at four years unless they receive an extension from US Citizenship and Immigration Services.

If allowed, the move would end the long-standing Duration of Status system, which allowed international students to stay in the country as long as they were making progress in their studies. The new rule also restricts international students’ ability to transfer schools or change their major without approval in their first year, and limits stays for foreign journalists and exchange visitors.

DHS Secretary Markwayne Mullin claimed that Duration of Status allowed for “immigration fraud,” and that the new rule would prevent international students from enrolling in additional courses in order to remain in the US.

It was one of a barrage of Trump administration attacks on international students in higher education. Previously, the federal government moved to raise the cost of visas, cancel active visas, and ban international students from enrolling at Harvard University.

Despite these efforts being shot down in courts, international student enrollment in the US has decreased by an average of 20 percent over the last year.

In July, the coalition filed a lawsuit in Boston challenging the rule, arguing that any changes to Duration of Status would weaken the country’s competitive edge in research and recruiting talent.

Chloe Craft can be reached at chloe.craft@globe.com.

BOSTON MAGAZINE'S

taste

• 2026 •

Join Boston magazine to enjoy dishes from the city's most notable chefs and restaurants.

Wednesday
November 4th

VIP: 5:30-6:30PM | GA: 6:30-9PM
ARTISTS FOR HUMANITY EPICENTER
100 W 2ND ST, BOSTON

TICKETS ON SALE NOW:
BOSTONMAGAZINE.COM/TASTE

STAT
SUMMIT
2026

Convening the year's biggest newsmakers in health & medicine

Join 400+ executives, policymakers, patients, advocates, and more — live in Boston Oct. 14 and 15.

Use promo code GLOBE
for 30% off your pass

Scan the QR code or visit statnews.com/stat-summit-boston to secure your spot

OCTOBER 14–15, 2026 ♦ BOSTON, MA & VIRTUAL

HOSTED BY

SPONSORED BY

LivingArts

PHOTOS BY MATTHEW J. LEE/GLOBE STAFF

Gorillaz, featuring frontman Damon Albarn (above) and his ever-expanding roster of collaborators (left), performed in concert at TD Garden Thursday.

By James Sullivan
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

In a dystopian future, we may be listening on our augmented-reality headsets to a steady diet of artificially designed biometric music. In this scenario (ugh), virtual bands will be as prolific as bacteria.

In 1998 — medieval times, in retrospect — Blur's Damon Albarn and the artist Jamie Hewlett, who drew the comic book "Tank Girl," co-conceived Gorillaz, a virtual band represented by four punky avatars who came together like a classic Saturday morning cartoon gang. In real life, Albarn and his ever-expanding roster of collaborators invaded TD Garden Thursday with their latest extravaganza, with the cartoon band appearing onscreen overhead.

"Invaded" is the operative word here: Albarn and many members of his entourage were decked out in camouflage, with the ringleader sporting a military beret. They were prepared for battle.

The battle was not with the very receptive full house, but the forces against human creativity. Gorillaz have yet to meet a musical style they don't want to annex — funk, trip-hop,

At TD Garden, virtual band Gorillaz flaunt very real chops

Afrobeat, new wave, electro. Their ninth album, "The Mountain," released earlier this year, dives deep into the mysticism of Indian raga.

The show opened that way, with Indian classical flute player Aya Prasanna sitting at the center of the sprawling band as a "Jungle Book"-style cartoon flickered on multiple screens.

The deeply sarcastic "The Happy Dictator" followed: "Oh what a happy land we live in," the choral refrain claimed.

Albarn then chimed in with his signature sound, the arch, compressed vocal effect he gets from using an old-fashioned citizen's band radio microphone.

MUSIC REVIEW

GORILLAZ
With Deltron 3030 and Little Simz. At TD Garden Thursday.

"No more bad news," he declared. "So you can sleep well at night."

The show opened nearly two hours earlier with a short but potent set from Deltron 3030. They're a Bay Area hip-hop trio with close ties to Gorillaz: The keyboardist known as

Dan the Automator produced Gorillaz's debut album, which is celebrating its 25th anniversary this year, and vocalist Del the Funky Homosapien returned to the stage at the end of the evening to rap with Gorillaz on one of the band's most recognizable songs, "Clint Eastwood."

Another frequent collaborator, the British rapper Little Simz, led her future-funk band through a half-hour set that included a thrilling nod to the late Nigerian superstar Fela Kuti on "Lion." Simz, too, returned to accompany Gorillaz midway through their set on "Garage Palace," a rapid-fire electro track from 2017.

Several times, Albarn stepped down from the stage and waded into the front rows of the crowd, offering hugs and autographs while the band percolated behind him. He played a bit of guitar and led several tunes by blowing on a melodica, the handheld keyboard that gives Gorillaz one of the band's signature sounds.

"All of us feel blessed to be in America at this time," Albarn said at one point. (He also noted that the first time he played Boston with his Britpop band Blur, in 1991, police officers escorted him offstage: "I was deemed too inebriated," he said with a laugh.)

The recent news that Blur's incorrigible British rivals, Oasis, have sold out three shows at Gillette Stadium that won't take place until next summer resurrects the 30-year-old debate about which of the two bands won the Britpop "wars."

When Posdnuos, representing De La Soul, stepped forward to take the rap verses on Gorillaz's biggest hit, "Feel Good Inc.," Albarn's "virtual" band made it clear that it bows to no men.

James Sullivan can be reached at jamesgsullivan@gmail.com.

Free events for October: from books to beer steins, and more

By Megan Johnson
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

With October here, Bostonians are dipping into sweater weather and are ready to see the foliage show off its stuff. Save your money for the cider doughnuts and check out a handful of free events below.

Catch a tune

MUSIC TO MY EARS: The Boston Symphony Orchestra kicks off its Community Chamber Concert series in October, and attendees will hear everything from Brahms to Dvorák. Tickets are free, but they must be reserved in advance at bso.org to ensure adequate seating for all guests. Accessible seating is available. Oct. 25, 3 p.m., Inquilinos Borricuas en Acción (IBA) La CASA, 85 W. Newton St. bso.org

BLOW YOUR HORN: The HONK! Festival, the 21st annual festival of activist street bands, is tooting its horn into Somerville. The outdoor street-level band concerts will take place on Friday and Saturday, while the "Reclaim the Streets for Horns, Bikes, and Feet" parade will travel from Davis Square to Harvard Square in Cambridge on Sunday. Oct. 9-11, Davis Square, Somerville. honk-fest.org

TAKE ME TO CHURCH: Vivo Performing Arts' fall live music season is in full swing. The schedule is robust, but to start off, check out Jonathan Gramling & Friends for some sweet tunes that explore the threads that link reggae, gospel, soul, and jazz. Seating is first-come, first-served. Oct. 3, 3 p.m. Twelfth Baptist Church, 160 Warren St, Roxbury. vivoperformingarts.org

KEEPIN' IT CASUAL: If a more relaxed scene is your family's vibe, hit up Tufts Community Day to see a variety of live performances spanning song, dance, music, and theater. There are also plenty of other unique activities, like the Somerville Highlanders' Robotics team's S'more Bot, which, as its name implies, will serve fresh s'mores. Free refreshments for all while supplies last. Oct. 4, 11 a.m.-2 p.m. The Green at Tufts University, Medford. communityrelations.tufts.edu

Raise a stein

MAKE IT LIKE MUNICH: Time Out Market is so excited for Oktoberfest that it's happening twice with Munich at the Market. There will be plenty of Oktoberfest photo-op props, a weight-class stein-holding competition, and live music that brings the energy of a Munich beer hall to The Fenway. Entry is free but tasting passes are available for $15. Oct. 3 and 17, 1-5 p.m., 401 Park Drive. time-out.com/time-out-market-boston

CUE THE TUBAS: Harvard Square gets in on the celebration with its 47th annual Oktoberfest. The family-friendly festival will feature plenty of live music, performers, and arts and crafts vendors. Don't forget your dirndl, but jeans may be more

EMERALD NECKLACE CONSERVANCY

Nature walkers at an Emerald Necklace Conservancy event. Below: The Boston Athenaeum opens its doors for "Discovery Day"; a horn player at last year's HONK! Festival.

DAVID L RYAN/GLOBE STAFF/FILE

PAT GREENHOUSE/GLOBE STAFF/FILE

comfortable. Oct. 11, 11 a.m.-6 p.m., Harvard Square, Cambridge. harvardsquare.com

SOUTHIE SPIRIT: Southie may be associated with the Irish, but it's bringing out the German spirit for its "Octoberfest" celebration. Those 21+ can hit the Sam Adams sample stations or get there early to be one of the first 500 attendees, since they can snag a free stein. Oct. 10, 2-6 p.m. The Grove at Lawn on D, 420 D St. thegrove-on.com/octoberfest

Art is everywhere

DRAW ME LIKE ONE OF YOUR FRENCH GIRLS: Join the Back Bay hotel's Atelier series for its "Art of the Cocktail" event, where you'll whip your brush against the paper and create a masterpiece with a cocktail as your muse. Or at least have fun while you're doing it. The experience, led by New Hampshire artist Maria DeVito Palmer, is open to both the public and hotel guests, and all art supplies will be provided. Oct. 22, 5-7 p.m., Mandarin Oriental, Boston, 776 Boylston St. mandarinoriental.com

NATURAL BEAUTY: Art is everywhere if you choose to see it that way. Lace up your shoes for the President's Walk of the Emerald Necklace, a 6-mile urban hike from Franklin Park in Dorchester to the mouth of the Muddy River in Charlesgate Park. Led by Conservancy President Karen Mauney-Brodek, you'll see plenty of natural beauty and historic features along the way. Registration is mandatory. Oct. 3, 9 a.m., Refectory Hill, Franklin Park. emeraldnecklace.org

THE ART OF FENWAY: It's so much more than the ballpark. Fenway's cultural institutions are opening their doors for the appropriately named Opening Our Doors Festival, the 25th annual edition of the free art and culture festivals. Hit up one of the museums and galleries, like the MassArt Art Museum (MAA.m.) and Tufts University Art Galleries at SMFA, and don't forget to check out the Interactive Aluminum Pour at MassArt between 11:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. Some programs will require advance registration. Oct. 12, 10a.m.-5 p.m., 20 locations throughout the Fenway fenwayculture.org/ood-2026-schedule

WHEN I DIP, YOU DIP, WE DIP: The Citizen in Fenway is hosting a free glass-dipping event with Maker's Mark before The Chicks show at MGM Music Hall. They'll hand-dip complimentary rocks glasses in the bourbon makers' signature red wax for guests to take home. Naturally, the booze isn't free. Oct. 9, 5-7 p.m., The Citizen, 1310 Boylston St. thecitizenboston.com

Turn the page

LITERARY LEGACIES: Book lovers, rejoice. If you aren't a member, the Boston Athenaeum's "Discovery Day" is the perfect opportunity to get a peek inside one of the country's oldest independent libraries. Visitors will have access to the library's first floor, including the Norma Jean Calderwood Gallery's two ongoing exhibitions, "Where's Boston? 50 Years Later" and "Imagined Nation." Oct. 12, 9 a.m.-7 p.m., Boston Athenaeum, 10½ Beacon St. community.bostonathenaeum.org/s/events

FULLY BOOKED: There's no better reason for a party than books. Join the Museum of African American History as it announces the winner of the 2026 MAAH Stone Book Award, an annual prize recognizing exceptional contemporary scholarship and writing in the field of African American history and culture. The first 100 people to arrive receive a free signed copy of one of the finalist books. Reservations are free but mandatory. Oct. 8, 5:30-7:30 p.m., Museum of African American History, 46 Joy St. maahstonebookaward.org

CAFFEINATION: Everyone knows the best companion for a book is a cup of coffee. Throughout October, George Howell Coffee will host free coffee education classes on topics ranging from how to make espresso at home to the history of pumpkin spice. Registration is free but mandatory. Dates vary, Boston Public Market, 100 Hanover St., and The Godfrey Hotel, 505 Washington St. event-brite.com

Details subject to change; check individual event websites for the most up-to-date information.

Megan Johnson can be reached at megansarah-johnson@gmail.com.

TV HIGHLIGHTS

College football: BC-SMU, 12 p.m., CW
Baseball playoffs: NL Division Series, Braves-Dodgers, 4 p.m., Fox
Baseball playoffs: AL Division Series, Yankees-Rays, 6:30 p.m., TBS
NHL: Bruins-Wild, 8 p.m., NESN
NWSL: Legacy-Thorns, 8:45 p.m., Ion
Listings, C7

Sports

C

THE BOSTON GLOBE SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3, 2026 | BOSTONGLOBE.COM/SPORTS

Braintrust still believes

Kennedy says, despite another early exit, Sox have faith in Breslow’s plans

By Alex Speier
GLOBE STAFF

NEW YORK — From the moment the 2025 Red Sox season ended, the team pronounced its desired trajectory. After the hors d’oeuvre of the team’s first playoff appearance since 2021 — a vanquishing by the Yankees in a three-game Wild Card Series — the Sox sought an entrée in 2026.

With that in mind, Red Sox CEO and president Sam Kennedy was asked on Tuesday — prior to the start of his team’s done-in-a-blink postseason — would success in 2026 be judged by the binary measure of whether the team advanced past the Yankees?

“I don’t define seasons as a success or a failure. That’s for other people to define,” Kennedy said. “But there always is disappointment when you don’t win the ultimate goal.

►End was worse than last year. Finn, C5.
►Judge’s status for ALDS uncertain. C5

“If we do not advance beyond [the Wild Card Series], the next round, the round beyond that, it will always be a disappointment. If you don’t win that last game in October, whether you’re in the LCS or the Division Series, Wild Card Series, one-game playoff, you are by definition extremely disappointed.”

The Red Sox thus enter the offseason in a state of extreme disappointment. For some — most notably first baseman Willson Contreras — that meant questions about the state of the organization.

Yet in terms of baseball leadership, the Red Sox already had confronted those questions and rendered judgment.

Chief baseball officer Craig Breslow’s job security became a constant topic during the 32-46 start, particularly after the shocking April decision to fire manager Alex Cora and six other staffers failed to yield immediate improvement. It was a time of organizational misery.

“We looked like the furthest thing from the playoffs for a while. For a long while,” said Kennedy. “It was humbling for all of us, and it was a terrible, terrible period. Our job is to not go through periods like that.”

During those months, the team’s owners scrutinized what had taken the team to the

RED SOX, Page C5

DANIELLE PARHIZKARAN/GLOBE STAFF

Red Sox owner John Henry (right), who also owns the Globe, exercised 2029 and 2030 contract options on Craig Breslow.

GARY WASHBURN
ON BASKETBALL

Mazzulla: Military milieu is worth trip

For the first time since Jayson Tatum’s rookie season, the Celtics will take their training camp on the road, practicing at The Citadel in Charleston, S.C., for three days before kicking off their preseason schedule next Thursday in Cleveland.

Of course, this is more than just an off-site opportunity to bond for Celtics coach Joe Mazzulla. He wants to use this trip to soak in a military environment, continue to spend time with his newer players, and foster chemistry.

This is a revamped roster. President of basketball operations Brad Stevens added three new contributors in Paul George, Mike Conley, and Mitchell Robinson. The departure of Jaylen Brown left a leadership void. Meanwhile, Jordan Walsh, Hugo González, Ron Harper Jr., and Baylor Scheierman are among those expected to take steps forward and emerge as veterans.

Jelling and developing cohesion off the floor is just as critical for Mazzulla’s team as it is on the floor. The team is changing its offensive approach to play faster. The players have to become familiar with their new teammates, and Tatum began that process by organizing informal offseason workouts last month in Los Angeles.

Several Celtics participated.

“Just trying something new,” Tatum said. “It’s the first time we’ve ever done that since I’ve been here. Getting in the gym in the summertime when we wouldn’t normally be around each other, play some golf and just hang out, just kind of build that chemistry.”

Robinson and George said they noticed how close the players were in their brief exposure to the Celtics’ culture. Mazzulla spent the summer visiting players in their hometowns to cultivate relationships.

Of course, the relationship Mazzulla has with 19-year-old first-round pick Chris Cenac is dramatically different than the one with the 38-year-old Conley, who is Mazzulla’s senior. The coach said he works to improve his communication skills every offseason to form a bond with every player. Fatherhood has

ON BASKETBALL, Page C5

SEEING RED

MARK STOCKWELL FOR THE GLOBE

Athaniel Urena (2) and Jeremiah Mateo Mora celebrated a TD as Central Catholic stunned Xaverian, 52-51, and (below) C.J. Cinella, Jr. dove in for a Melrose score. Schools, C6

BARRY CHIN/GLOBE STAFF

 NFL WEEK 4
PATRIOTS AT BILLS
Sunday, 1 p.m., CBS

Maye injury a hot topic for Vrabel

Coach: Patriots merely followed the NFL’s rules

By Nicole Yang
GLOBE STAFF

FOXBOROUGH — Mike Vrabel said Friday the team added quarterback Drake Maye to the injury report in order to comply with NFL rules.

“We’re just trying to follow the protocol exactly how it’s given to us, as it relates to the injury report,” the Patriots coach said. “The fact that it’s a quarterback, I think those things get looked at very closely. Again, we want to make sure we’re transparent, so we listed him on the injury report after he went through the normal game-day protocol postgame.”

The status of Maye’s shoulder has come under scrutiny this week, in the wake of his vague comments following last Sunday’s blowout loss against the Jaguars.

Vrabel, who initially said on Monday that Maye was not dealing with anything, said on Friday that listing Maye on the injury report was the result of something that happened in Sunday’s game, reiterating what offensive coordinator Josh McDaniels said on Thursday.

“I think that was something that came out of the football game,” Vrabel said. “Like normal, I would say, football procedures. Guys go through the game, much like [Christian Gonzalez] or somebody else that comes in sometimes Monday or even Tuesday, for that matter, and says, ‘Hey, thought this was something. Can you take a look at it?’ ”

The Patriots listed Maye as a full participant for all three days of practice, which means he took his

MAYE, Page C2

Gonzalez and Barmore out against Bills

By Christopher Price
GLOBE STAFF

FOXBOROUGH — Cornerback Christian Gonzalez and defensive tackle Christian Barmore will be out for Sunday’s game against the Bills.

► A new era awaits in Buffalo. On football, C2
► Tony Romo is out at CBS. NFL notebook, C2

Losing two established defensive starters creates an even larger challenge for a team looking to rebound from last Sunday’s ugly road loss, 35-6, against the Jaguars.

“That’s just what the situation is. I’m not sure there’s [anything] we can do about it,” Patriots coach Mike Vrabel said after Friday’s practice. “We can make sure that the guys [who] are playing are ready and that we continue to do the things that we know that are going to help us. But that happens every week in the National Football League. I’m looking forward to seeing the guys that are going to play in there.”

The 6-foot-1-inch, 205-pound Gonzalez started the season on an excellent note, working effectively against some of the league’s best receivers through three games. But a shoulder injury sustained against the Jaguars left the 24-year-old sidelined for the week. Ultimately, he missed all three practices.

Carlton Davis is the likeliest choice to move into Gonzalez’s spot. The Patriots also could opt to move slot corner Marcus Jones to the outside, or

PATRIOTS, Page C2

It’s two games, two game-winners for Peterka

By Jim McBride
GLOBE STAFF

Bruins 4 WINNIPEG, Manitoba
Jets 3 — Still perfect.
JJ Peterka scored with 1:39 left in overtime Friday night to give the Bruins a 4-3 victory over the Jets at Canada Life Centre.

It was the second straight game winner for Peterka, Boston’s prized offseason acquisition.

Trailing, 3-2, the Bruins (2-0) tied it on Elias Lindholm’s goal with less than two minutes left and Jeremy Swayman pulled for the extra attacker.

Boston lost a 2-1 lead when Kyle Connor connected 16 seconds after Lindholm was whistled for tripping early in the second period and Mario Ferraro struck with just 8 seconds left in the middle period.

Ferraro, the former UMass standout, ripped one from the blue line past Swayman while the arena’s clocks were not working.

With the barn at full throat from the get-go, Winnipeg struck first when Dylan DeMelo unleashed a bomb from the blue line that beat Swayman (30 saves) high to the stick side.

After a spirited bout between Boston’s Mark Kastelic and Tyrel Bauer (making his NHL debut), the Bruins found their legs and beat Winnipeg’s Stuart Skinner twice.

First, it was a Hampus Lindholm blue line knucker that handcuffed Skinner (26 saves) followed by James Hagens’s first career goal — a doorstep job set up by Kastelic.

The Bruins will be right back to work Saturday night against the Wild in Minnesota.

It was a Chamber of Commerce-type day in this Canadian prairie outpost.

Friday featured no snow, no stinging winds, and the only ice was the sheet found at the Canada Life Centre, where the Jets hosted the Bruins for their season opener.

It was a balmy 17 degrees Celsius (62 for Fahrenheit friends) with sunshine and blue skies as far as the eye could see.

That had Morgan Geekie, a native Manitoban, smiling.

“It’s always fun playing at home. It’s especially nice when you get here and it’s not December or January and you get to see that Manitoba’s not all that bad sometimes,” he said.

The 28-year-old was expecting to have his own cheering section for the game.

“Yeah, we’ll have some people here,” said Geekie, who grew up three hours west in Strathclair, a town known for producing wheat and hockey players. “I was talking to my dad the other day and [he said] there’d be a lot of people in the [wheat] fields, I think. So, if they can make it in, it’ll be good to see some people.”

BRUINS, Page C4

Pro football

This game vs. Bills is not like the others

BEN VOLIN
ON FOOTBALL

FOXBOROUGH — Josh McDaniels has coached a million games in Buffalo, give or take. It has been the most reliable trip on the Patriots’ travel itinerary — they know where to stay, where to enter the stadium, which way the wind blows, and, for the previous nine years, what to expect from the Bills’ defense under Sean McDermott.

But Sunday’s matchup will have a decidedly new flavor. It’s their first visit to the new Highmark Stadium, which opened this year and is holding just its third regular-season game.

“I hope in the locker room, this one’s a little bigger than the other one,” McDaniels said Thursday, referencing the notoriously cramped visitors’ space in the Bills’ old stadium.

The 3-0 Bills also enter Sunday’s game with a new look. Former offensive coordinator Joe Brady is now the head coach after the Bills fired McDermott after the playoff loss to the Broncos, bringing relaxed, player-friendly vibes to the locker room. And in a classic case of “if you can’t beat ’em, join ’em,” the defense is now run by former Broncos defensive pass game coordinator Jim Leonhard.

“It’s kind of a unique preparation,” McDaniels said. “For the first time in a long time, it’s not Sean’s scheme. You can feel the Denver influence from last year in terms of the way they try to play and how they try to stop you.”

It hasn’t been a seamless transition for Leonhard. The Bills are tied for 21st in points allowed (26.0 per game), allowing the Texans and Lions to score 31 each before holding the Chargers to 16 last week. The Bills rank 27th in pressuring the quarterback (31.2 percent).

But Leonhard, who played for the Ravens and Jets in the Rex Ryan days nearly 20 years ago, hasn’t blitzed much, relying more on his front four to get home. Defensive end Greg Rousseau leads the league with six sacks, becoming the first player in 28 years with multiple sacks in each of his first three games.

“Heavy emphasis on the guys that have their hand in the dirt and make a negative play,” McDaniels said. “Their fourth game in their new scheme, so I don’t know that we’ve seen everything they have.”

The 1-2 Patriots will also have to prepare for some new looks from the Bills’ offense. While the scheme generally has been the same since Brady, a Sean Payton disciple, took over as offensive coordinator in 2023, it has a new wrinkle — a heavy use of “13” personnel, or one running back, one wide receiver, and three tight ends. It’s usually for short yardage, but the Bills and Rams are at the forefront of using it in base situations — the Rams have used it 84 times this season, and the Bills are second with 59. The Bills used “13” personnel just 50 times all of last year, and 23 times in 2024.

Tight end Dalton Kincaid is thriving with 14 catches for 263 yards (18.8 average) and one touchdown. Fellow tight ends Dawson Knox and Jackson Hawes have mostly been used as blockers, but their presence has still helped open the field.

The challenges with “13” personnel are two-fold. In the running game, it spaces out the defense. James Cook has rushed 32 times for 172 yards and five touchdowns out of “13,” averaging 5.4 yards per carry.

“They want to stretch you horizontally — they’re from one opposite hash to almost midway to the numbers,” Patriots linebacker Robert Spillane said. “It really provides a lot of gaps in there, and they pretty much just give James Cook the ball and say, ‘Run where they’re not,’ and he does that really well. So they provide challenges, and we’re going to have to be really fundamentally sound with our defensive scheme.”

The “13” personnel also can present problems in the passing game. Defenses frequently counter with extra linebackers, who often aren’t as good in pass coverage. The heavy formation also lends itself to big passing plays with play-action.

Josh Allen’s passing stats are modest, completing 8 of 13 for 96 yards, a touchdown, and an interception out of “13.”

The Bills even used “14” personnel — one running back and four tight ends — on a couple of snaps last week, with Keleki Latu as the fourth.

“We have such a unique tight end room that everybody has so many different character traits,” Brady said. “The more that we’re getting those guys on the field, good things are happening, that’s for sure.”

For good measure, the Patriots will also have to prepare for a new gadget — receiver D.J. Moore, a do-everything weapon who has 11 catches for 167 yards and a touchdown after being acquired from the Bears.

But even with a new stadium, new schemes, and new weapons, not everything will feel different on Sunday.

“It’ll always feel like the Buffalo Bills with James Cook and Josh Allen,” Spillane said. “Those two have been back there since I’ve played them when I was with Pittsburgh, and they’re still rolling. So they are always a fun challenge to go up against.”

Ben Volin can be reached at ben.volin@globe.com.

2024 FILE/TONY GUTIERREZ/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tony Romo, following nine years at CBS, said he is planning to focus on his health and family.

CBS announces split with Romo permanent

By Chad Finn
GLOBE STAFF

Tony Romo is out at CBS, a little more than a month after the network’s lead NFL color analyst was put on leave following his July arrest in Milwaukee on suspicions of operating a vehicle while intoxicated. CBS announced in a brief statement Friday afternoon that the 46-year-old Romo would not be returning to the network.

“CBS Sports and Tony Romo have mutually agreed to part ways,” the statement read. “We thank Tony for his contributions over the past nine years and wish him the best moving forward.”

Romo released a statement in which he said he will take some time to consider his future.

“I’m proud of what I accomplished at CBS Sports over the last nine years. I approached my role as a game analyst the way I’ve approached everything in my life — with a desire to win and be the best that I can be,” Romo said. “I’m going to use this time to take a break, something I’ve never done before, and focus on my health and my family before moving on to my next opportunity. I am grateful for my time with CBS Sports and for the continued support of my family and friends, as well as the NFL community and fans.”

Romo’s departure is a somewhat ignominious conclusion to a run alongside Jim Nantz in the top booth that began with much fanfare in 2017.

Romo joined CBS upon retiring from a 13-year career as a quarterback for the Dallas Cowboys, and became an instant broadcasting phenomenon for his ease predicting plays before they happened.

In February 2020, Romo signed a 10-year, $180 million extension with CBS. But as his career progressed and new NFL players replaced many of the ones he played with or against, Romo’s casual style began coming across as a meandering lack of preparedness.

Romo, a Wisconsin native, was arrested on July 23 after he was pulled over on Interstate 43 in Milwaukee County following his playing in the Wisconsin Amateur Golf Championship.

Body-camera footage, first revealed by the website TMZ.com, showed Romo struggling through field-sobriety tests. Police found an open container of alcohol in his Jeep when the vehicle was being prepared to be towed.

Eight days after the incident, CBS released a one-sentence statement that read, “Tony Romo is on leave from his role at CBS Sports until further notice.” It was the first time the network had addressed his arrest.

CBS did not reveal Friday whether Romo’s contract, which had four years remaining, was bought out or settled.

J.J. Watt, who was elevated to the top team when Romo was put on leave, will remain there with Nantz and reporter Tracy Wolfson for the remainder of the season, the network said in the statement.

League bans 49ers owner York

The NFL suspended 49ers owner Jed York for six games following his arrest earlier this year in a prostitution sting in Ohio.

The league announced York also was fined $500,000 for violating the league’s personal conduct policy. York has not attended any games or league meetings so far this season and was credited with three games served. He is eligible to return on Oct. 20, following the 49ers’ game the previous night against the Commanders.

Mariota to start, Daniels to sit

Commanders quarterback Marcus Mariota will get his second straight start in place of the injured Jayden Daniels against the Colts at Tottenham Hotspur Stadium in London.

Head coach Dan Quinn announced the decision after practice at the team’s luxury hotel accommodations outside London. Daniels returned to practice this week after dislocating his elbow in Week 2 against the Cowboys.

Rams’ Donald out, Nacua returns

Aaron Donald will miss the Rams’ game against the Eagles due to a sore back, while receiver Puka Nacua will return after missing two games due to a hip and groin injury. Donald did not practice all week, and coach Sean McVay officially ruled out the 35-year-old defensive tackle who has four tackles, one tackle for loss, and one quarterback hit after ending his two-year retirement. Nacua had five receptions for 74 yards in the season opener against the 49ers but missed games versus the Giants and Broncos after hurting himself in practice on Sept. 17 . . . Eagles wide receiver DeVonta Smith will not play against the Rams because of a hamstring injury. Smith caught six passes for 65 yards while playing 100 percent of Philadelphia’s snaps in Monday’s loss at Chicago, but he did not practice this week . . . The Jets (1-2) ruled out four offensive starters for their game against the Bears. Coach Aaron Glenn said running back Breece Hall, wide receiver Adonai Mitchell, tight end Mason Taylor, and left guard Dylan Parham will sit out . . . The Vikings ruled out star receiver Justin Jefferson for their game against the Dolphins due to a sprained ankle, and Miami will be without rookie receiver Caleb Douglas for a second straight game as he nurses an ankle injury suffered in Week 2 . . . Ravens edge rusher Trey Hendrickson will miss Sunday’s game against the Titans because of a finger injury. Coach Jesse Minter said Hendrickson’s absence would be “very, very short-term” after he had a procedure to fix the issue. . . . Jeff Van Note, a six-time Pro Bowl center who spent 18 seasons with Atlanta from 1969-86 and was inducted into the team’s Ring of Honor, has died, the Falcons said. He was 80. No cause of death was announced.

Material from the Associated Press was used in this report. Chad Finn can be reached at chad.finn@globe.com.

Maye being listed on injury report hot topic for Vrabel usual workload and did not miss any reps. McDaniels previously said the injury is not significant enough to affect his play-calling in practices and games.

►MAYE
Continued from Page C1

“There were no limitations,” Vrabel said. “But we just felt like it was best to list it, just to make sure we’re doing everything we’re supposed to do from a protocol standpoint.”

Asked if Maye is receiving treatment for the injury, Vrabel didn’t answer definitively.

“I’m sure that he was in the training room, but I’m not really sure,” he said. “Again, if he’s on the injury report, I’m sure that at some point in time he got treatment.”

Asked about his shoulder on Wednesday afternoon, prior to the injury report’s release, Maye said it is not affecting his ability to throw the football — nor is it affecting his decision-making. He has not spoken to the media since getting added to the injury report.

The Patriots listed 10 other players on the report. Maye was the only one without a game-day designation.

The team ruled out cornerback Christian Gonzalez (shoulder) and defensive tackle Christian Barmore (shoulder), and listed seven other players — cornerback Channing Canada (hamstring), linebacker Christian Elliss (chest), fullback Reggie Gilliam (knee), edge rusher Dre’Mont Jones (shoulder), right tackle Morgan Moses (foot), tight end Eli Raridon (thigh), and safety Craig Woodson (shoulder) — as questionable.

JOHN TLUMACKI/GLOBE STAFF

The Patriots listed quarterback Drake Maye as a full participant for all three days of practice this week.

Safety Brenden Schooler (back), who opened the season on the non-football injury list, returned to practice this week as a limited participant but is not eligible to be activated to the 53-man roster until next week.

The Patriots already are without star wide receiver A.J. Brown (ankle), starting right guard Michael Onwenu (ankle), and backup right guard Greg Van Roten (thigh).

Asked about the barrage of injuries, Vrabel seemed to chalk it up to bad luck.

“We want to avoid soft-tissue injuries, but sometimes there are some injuries that happen through the course of playing,” Vrabel said. “Not sure how we could have prevented Michael’s right ankle from getting rolled up on by two players or Dre’Mont Jones’s shoulder getting smashed into the turf by the offensive lineman.”

Nicole Yang can be reached at nicole.yang@globe.com. Follow her on X @nicoleyang.

Gonzalez, Barmore ruled out

►PATRIOTS
Continued from Page C1

tab backup cornerback Charles Woods to start on the opposite boundary.

When asked how comfortable he might be stepping into Gonzalez’s role as No. 1 cornerback, Davis pushed back against “the narrative” of “CB1” or “CB2.”

“First and foremost, there’s no such thing as a CB1 or 2, so y’all can stop saying that,” he said. “Because when you get out there, you’ve just got to cover guys.”

“So, there is no, ‘Oh, I’ve got to step up or do this.’ Please cut that narrative. When [Gonzalez is] out there, he’s dominating his position. And when I’m out there, I’m trying to do the same thing.”

The 5-11, 185-pound Woods has played in all three games and has one pass defended and 16 combined tackles.

“I’m very, very confident,” Woods said after practice. “You know, playing them a couple times last year, and just against some experience this year, I’m very confident. Really understanding and knowing the defense. What we’re trying to accomplish each play, the intent in each play. I know my teammates trust me. My coaches trust me.

So, I’m very confident.”

“Love the guy,” cornerbacks coach Justin Hamilton said of Woods. “Super competitive, fearless. He plays the game the way that we like to see people play it, where he’s going to play fast first, and ask questions next.”

The challenge of filling the shoes of the 6-5, 315-pound Barmore (shoulder) — who has four combined tackles and one sack this season — also will be sizable. Leonard Taylor, Cory Darden, and DaQuan Jones are candidates to see an uptick in playing time with Barmore on the shelf.

The Patriots, who have had issues slowing the run, will be facing Bills back James Cook, who led the league in rushing last year and enters Sunday third with 346 rushing yards.

Defensive tackle Milton Williams compares Cook to the Chiefs’ Kenneth Walker, who ran all over the Patriots in Super Bowl LX (135 yards on 27 carries) as a member of the Seahawks.

“[Both] are real good, real patient,” said Williams. “Both are always looking for cuts, looking for holes anywhere up front. On any given run, they can cut and circle the defense, all this type of stuff. So, we’ve got to be good.”

The Patriots listed seven players as questionable for Sunday’s game: offensive tackle Morgan Moses (foot), fullback Reggie Gilliam (knee), linebacker Christian Elliss (chest), linebacker Dre’Mont Jones (shoulder), tight end Eli Raridon (thigh), safety Craig Woodson (shoulder), and cornerback Channing Canada (hamstring).

Moses and Gilliam missed Thursday’s practice but were back on the field for Friday’s workout. That bodes well for their availability Sunday.

For Gilliam, it’ll be a chance to return to Buffalo, a place he called home for the last six seasons before signing a free agent deal with the Patriots in March.

“I don’t know what to expect from the fans,” he said with a laugh. “Because, I mean, there was a point in time when they were all cheering my name, but I doubt that’s going to be the deal this time. But I’m excited to go back and see the guys, see my favorite coaches and all those guys. It’s going to be a good time.”

Christopher Price can be reached at christopher.price@globe.com. Follow him on Bluesky at christopherprice.bsky.social.

The Boston Globe

THE SCRUM

The morning briefing for people who run Massachusetts.

Massachusetts politics is a contact sport.

Get in the game with The Scrum — the Globe’s newsletter delivering the political coverage you won’t find anywhere else.

Sign up now at Globe.com/scrum

New conference, playoff format for the Fleet

By Emma Healy and Katie McInerney
GLOBE STAFF

As the Professional Women’s Hockey League expands to 12 teams for the 2026-27 season, a new conference and playoff format will be introduced.

The Boston Fleet will play in the Eastern Conference alongside four other original teams — Montreal, New York, Ottawa, and Toronto — as well as the expansion franchise in Hamilton, Ontario.

Eastern Conference teams will play 18 games against their five conference opponents and 12 against Western Conference teams (Minnesota, Seattle, and Vancouver; plus expansion franchises Las Vegas, Detroit, and San Jose). Each Western Conference team will visit Boston once.

With the addition of four teams, the league will expand the Walter Cup playoffs to now feature the top four teams in each six-team conference.

The 2026-27 schedule was released Friday, and as previously announced the Fleet will open the season on Dec. 6 at New York and will begin play at their new home, Agganis Arena, on Dec. 9 against Ottawa.

Boston will make its only West Coast swing early in the season, heading out for a week-plus of games at Vancouver, Seattle, Las Vegas, and San Jose over Christmas. The Fleet will head back out on the road for a five-game swing in the last two weeks of January before playing nine of their final 11 regular-season games at home.

The PWHL will continue its Takeover Tour, bringing games to neutral-site cities across North America. The Fleet have two home dates (Jan. 2 and Feb. 20) and two road dates (Jan. 26 vs. Montreal and Feb. 2 vs. Toronto) designated as Takeover Tour games.

There also is a Feb. 27 home game against the Vancouver Goldeneyes not yet slated for a venue. Vancouver recently signed Salem, N.H., native Caroline “KK” Harvey, the No. 1 pick in this year’s draft, to a three-year deal. Could the Fleet possibly hope to play at TD Garden once again? They sold out the venue last April, and Feb. 27th’s listed 7 p.m. faceoff would pair well with a scheduled 12:30 p.m. Bruins matinee against Detroit.

The PWHL will host its first All-Star event on March 7 in Toronto, and players will get about two weeks off. The season is set to wrap on April 17.

Emma Healy can be reached at emma.healy@globe.com or on X @ByEmmaHealy. Katie McInerney can be reached at katie.mcinerney@globe.com. Follow her on Instagram at @katiemac.sports.

DANIELLE PARHIZKARAN/GLOBE STAFF

Defender Haley Winn will be out to build on her PWHL Rookie of the Year season.

2026-27 Fleet schedule

All home games at Agganis Arena unless noted.
Sun., Dec. 6, at New York Sirens.....	3 p.m.
Wed., Dec. 9, vs. Ottawa Charge.....	7 p.m.
Sat., Dec. 12, at Toronto Sceptres.....	7 p.m.
Wed., Dec. 16, vs. Montreal Victoire.....	7 p.m.
Tue., Dec. 22, at Vancouver Goldeneyes.....	9:30 p.m.
Wed., Dec. 23, at Seattle Torrent.....	10 p.m.
Sat., Dec. 26, at Las Vegas.....	7 p.m.
Wed., Dec. 30, at San Jose.....	10 p.m.
Sat., Jan. 2, vs. Ottawa.....	noon (Takeover Tour, location TBA)
Sat., Jan. 9, vs. Toronto.....	2 p.m.
Wed., Jan. 13, vs. New York.....	7 p.m.
Sun., Jan. 17, at Ottawa.....	1 p.m.
Sat., Jan. 23, at Montreal.....	2 p.m. (Takeover Tour, TBA)
Tue., Jan. 26, at Hamilton.....	7 p.m.
Fri., Jan. 29, at Minnesota Frost.....	7 p.m.
Tue., Feb. 2, at Toronto.....	6:30 p.m. (Takeover Tour, TBA)
Sat., Feb. 6, vs. Detroit.....	7 p.m.
Wed., Feb. 10, at Hamilton.....	7 p.m.
Fri., Feb. 12, at Montreal.....	7 p.m.
Wed., Feb. 17, vs. Seattle.....	7 p.m.
Sat., Feb. 20, vs. Montreal.....	3 p.m. (Takeover Tour, TBA)
Sat., Feb. 27, vs. Vancouver.....	7 p.m. (location TBA)
Sun., March 14, vs. Minnesota.....	1 p.m.
Sat., March 21, vs. San Jose.....	3 p.m.
Sun., March 27, vs. Las Vegas.....	3 p.m.
Sat., April 3, at New York.....	7:30 p.m. (location TBA)
Thu., April 8, at Detroit.....	7 p.m.
Sat., April 10, vs. Hamilton.....	3 p.m.
Wed., April 14, vs. New York.....	7 p.m.
Sat., April 17, vs. Toronto.....	TBA

JOHN WOODS/THE CANADIAN PRESS VIA AP

Hampus Lindholm (left) celebrates with his Bruins teammates after his first goal of the season tied the Jets, 1-1, at 9:23 of the first period.

Peterka delivers again as Bruins trip up Jets

►BRUINS

Continued from Page C1

Bruins 4, Jets 3

At Canada Life Centre, Winnipeg, Manitoba
FIRST PERIOD
Penalty — Boston, Aspirot (cross check) 2:24
Winnipeg 1, Boston 0 — DeMelo 1 (Barron, Lowry) 4:52
Penalty — Boston, Kastelic, major (fighting) 7:08
Penalty — Winnipeg, Bauer, major (fighting) 7:08
Winnipeg 1, Boston 1 — H Lindholm 1 (Geekie, Borgen) 9:23
Boston 2, Winnipeg 1 — Hagens 1 (Zadorov, Kas-telic) 15:20
SECOND PERIOD
Penalty — Boston, El Lindholm (tripping) 1:34
Winnipeg 2, Boston 2 — Connor 1 (Viilardi, Perfet-ti) 1:50 (pp)
Penalty — Boston, Kuraly (roughing) 2:19
Penalty — Winnipeg, Bauer (roughing) 2:19
Penalty — Winnipeg, Bauer, served by Lambert (cross check) 2:19
Penalty — Winnipeg, Barron (tripping) 16:05
Winnipeg 3, Boston 2 — Ferraro 1 (Lowry, Con-nor) 19:48
THIRD PERIOD
Penalty — Boston, Aspirot (hi stick) 7:55
Winnipeg 3, Boston 3 — El Lindholm 1 (Pastrnak, Lohrei) 18:22
OVERTIME
Boston 4, Winnipeg 3 — Peterka 2 (Pastrnak, Za-dorov) 3:21
No penalties
SCORE BY PERIOD
Boston	2 0 1 1 — 4
Winnipeg	1 2 0 0 — 3
SHOTS BY PERIOD
Boston	9 8 12 1 — 30
Winnipeg	12 12 8 1 — 33
Power plays — Boston 0 of 1; Winnipeg 1 of 3.
Goalies — Boston, Swayman 2-0-0 (33 shots-30 saves). Winnipeg, Skinner 0-0-1 (30 shots-26 saves).
Referees — Eric Furlatt, Mike Sullivan. Linesmen — Brandon Gawryletz, Kiel Murchison.
Attendance — 15,209 (15,294). Time — 2:41.

“Everybody plays the game a little bit differently and I think those two work well off each other,” said Geekie. “So, I just try to find myself in spots where I can be an option for them. And being a righty, I’ll just try to find myself in the shoot-ing areas in the right side and just try to convert on those.”

Geekie has been picking the brains of Zacha and Mittelstadt as he adjusts his game to create chances.

“I think it’s easy in the fact that they know where they’re going to be. A little bit harder for me coming in sometimes just because you’re trying to fit in and you’re trying to play to how they like to play,” said Geekie. “But they’re two really smart players and think the game really well. So, it definitely makes it a little easier and they’ve kind of been pulling me along and we’ve been talking a lot on the bench and stuff about figuring some stuff out. So, we had some chances [in the opener] and hit a few posts, but we’ll just try to build off that.”

It’s a small sample size, but Marco Sturm, who started camp with Geekie on the top line before making the switch, likes what he’s seen.

“Zacha and Mittelstadt are very straightforward hockey players, and we want Morgan to be more like that too,” said the coach. “But in [the] offensive zone, just with that shot, he’s a very big weapon. I mean those guys, they will find him. So, they need a few more games, I would say, just to get used to [each other], but there’s a lot to like.”

Sturm stuck with his lineup from Game 1, including in net, where Jeremy Swayman was coming off a 24-save performance against the Rangers. The coach said he would decide after the game if Michael DiPietro would get the nod for the Wild game Saturday night in Minnesota . . . Matt Poitras (lower-body injury) made the trip and skated for an extended time with healthy scratches Mikey Eyssimont and Frederic Brunet. Poitras remains on injured reserve . . . Stuart Skinner got the start in the Jets’ net as the Connor Hellebuyck drama drags on. Hellebuyck, a three-time Vezina Trophy winner and Olympic gold medalist, has requested a trade and has subsequently been suspended by the team for failing to report to camp.

Jim McBride can be reached at james.mcbride@globe.com. Follow him @globejimmcbride.

RANGERS 2, RED WINGS 0

NY Rangers.....	1	0	1	—	2
Detroit.....	0	0	0	—	0
First period — 1. NY Rangers, Durzi 1 (Perrault, Cuyille), 5:12 (pp). Penalties — Danielson, DET (holding), 3:31. Vele-no, NYR (roughing), 5:38. Rasmussen, DET (roughing), 5:38. Kolesar, DET (roughing), 5:38. Smits, NYR (cross check), 12:38.
Second period — None. Penalties — Durzi, NYR (tripping), 0:47. Kasper, DET, major (fighting), 12:13. Sandin-Pelikka, DET (hooking), 12:13. Durzi, NYR, major (fighting), 12:13.
Third period — 2. NY Rangers, Tolva-nen 2 (Kartye, Fox), 18:44 (en). Penal-ties — Faulk, DET (slashing), 1:28. Shots on goal — NY Rangers 8-7-6 — 21. Detroit 11-9-2 — 22.
Power plays — NY Rangers 1-4; De-troit 0-2.
Goalies — NY Rangers, Garand 1-0-0 (22 shots-22 saves). Detroit, Gibson 0-1-0 (20 shots-19 saves).
Referees — Trevor Hanson, Kelly Sutherland. Linesmen — Kilian McNa-mara, Libor Suchanek.
A — 15,515 (20,000). T — 2:41.

CAPITALS 5, HURRICANES 2

Washington.....	3	2	0	—	5
Carolina.....	0	1	1	—	2
First period — 1. Washington, Tuch 1 (Dubois, Ovechkin), 6:33. 2. Washing-ton, Hutson 1 (Protas, AProtas), 11:53. 3. Washington, Tuch 2 (Dubois, Wil-son), 14:23. Penalties — Walker, CAR (roughing), 2:21. Dubois, WSH (rough-ing), 2:21.
Second period — 4. Washington, Chyhrun 1 (Strome), 1:36 (pp), 5. Car-olina, Aho 1 (Svechnikov, Blake), 16:50 (pp). 6. Washington, Leonard 1 (Strome, Chyhrun), 16:58. Penalties — Legault, CAR (slashing), 1:09. Dubois, WSH (cross check), 4:38. Chyhrun, WSH (tripping), 8:57. Hutson, WSH (in-terference), 15:30. , WSH, served by Ovechkin (too many men on ice), 18:21.
Third period — 7. Carolina, Stank-oven 1 (Miller, Carrier), 10:50. Penal-ties — Hutson, WSH (holding), 1:58. Fe-hervary, WSH (cross check), 7:17. Hall, CAR (tripping), 13:15. Sourdfir, WSH (cross check), 19:18. Aho, CAR (rough-ing), 19:18. Legault, CAR (misconduct), 19:18.
Shots on goal — Washington 15-9-3 — 27. Carolina 11-16-6 — 33.
Power plays — Washington 1-2; Car-olina 1-6.
Goalies — Washington, Thompson 1-0-0 (33 shots-31 saves). Carolina, Bussl 0-1-1 (27 shots-22 saves).
Referees — Gord Dwyer, Justin Kea. Linesmen — Ryan Jackson, Shandor Al-phonso.
A — 18,905 (18,680). T — 2:36.

JARED C. TILTON/GETTY

Alex Tuch had two goals in the Capitals’ 5-2 win vs. Carolina.

Wild thumbnails

- (2025-26 statistics)
- When, where: Saturday, 8 p.m., at Grand Casino Arena, St. Paul.
 - TV, radio: NESN, WBZ-FM (98.5).
 - Goals: Kirill Kaprizov 45, Matt Boldy 42, Ryan Hartman 23.
 - Assists: Quinn Hughes 48, Kaprizov 44, Boldy 43.
 - Goaltending: Jesper Wallstedt (18-9-6, 2.61 GAA), Calvin Pickard (5-6-0, 3.68).
 - Head to head: This is the first of two meetings. The Bruins went 1-1 vs. the Wild last season.
 - Miscellany: The Wild scored twice in the first period of a 3-1 win at Nashville in Thursday’s opener . . . Acquired in a trade from the Canucks last December, Hughes has informed his agent that he does not want to proceed with contract extension talks with the Wild . . . Minnesota allowed the fourth-fewest goals (235) in the NHL last season and went 33-6-6 when scoring first.

Winless a year ago, unbeaten UMass sold out for Saturday

By Amin Touri
GLOBE STAFF

For more than a decade, there have been few easier tick-ets to come by in FBS college football than at McGuirk Alumi-ni Stadium in Amherst, home of the UMass Minutemen.

Not this year.

With the Minutemen 4-0 for the first time since 2007, and seemingly hurtling toward their first bowl game, UMass an-nounced a sellout — around 17,000 fans — for Saturday’s game against Eastern Michigan, the program’s first capacity crowd since 2014.

Between the team’s hot start and the university hosting its annual Family Weekend, there’s enough demand that there’s even a resale market for tickets.

“It’s a lot of energy, a lot of juice right now on campus, which is, I think, certainly been earned by our guys to go out and start out 4-0,” athletic director Ryan Bamford said. “It’s been a fun first month of the year.”

The Minutemen have a chance to start 5-0 for the first time in half a century if they can beat Eastern Michigan (3:30 p.m., ESPN+). Five wins also would be a program record since the jump to FBS.

“I’m hearing that it should be a pretty packed house, which is pretty special,” coach Joe Hara-symiak told reporters Monday. “So now we’ve got to go focus and do our part.”

There’s been nothing fluky about this hot start for UMass, which followed up its Opening Night stunner at Rutgers with dominant wins over Sacred Heart, Stonehill, and Mid-Amer-ican Conference opponent Sac-ramento State.

That’s perhaps been the most

JOE HARASYMIAK

Impressive turnaround

startling piece of the turn-around — the Minutemen have looked very solid, very cohesive, very fast.

“I think Joe’s done a really good job with his staff of just drilling down, focusing in, kind of digging the program out,” Bamford said. “You could see it start to come together even after [going] 0-12. I think there was a pretty intentional resolve to get this thing flipped and to get off to a good start.”

The large crowd won’t be a complete shock to the school oper-ationally. More than 15,000 were in attendance for last year’s Family Weekend matchup against Buffalo, and a similar number were in attendance for this season’s home opener against Sacred Heart.

But after years of struggling to successfully lure students from the long-popular tailgates into the stadium for kickoff — instead of back up the hill to-ward the dorms and dining halls — UMass is contending with an unfamiliar issue: meeting stu-dent ticket demand.

“We hold a lot of student tickets, over 4,000, and we’ve been getting great student crowds. I think we had 5,400 for the first game against Sacred Heart,” Bamford said. “We’ve got to make sure that we’re fill-ing those student sections, but I’m a little worried that we’re go-

UMass in 2026

RESULTS (4-0)
At Rutgers.....	W, 37-21
Sacred Heart.....	W, 37-10
Stonehill.....	W, 36-14
At Sacramento St.....	W, 35-6
SCHEDULE
Oct. 3	E. Michigan..... 3:30 p.m.
Oct. 10	Miami (Ohio)..... 2 p.m.
Oct. 17	at Buffalo..... TBA
Oct. 23	at UConn..... 7 p.m.
Nov. 4	Ball State..... TBA
Nov. 11	at Toledo..... TBA
Nov. 18	Akron..... TBA
Nov. 28	at Bowling Green 12 p.m.

ing to get more than [the] 4,000-plus that we have held.

“So we’ve got some plans to do some things with standing room for students to give them some other places to congregate, to make sure that we’re doing our best, ideally, not to turn any students away.”

For Bamford, whose 11-year tenure has been largely viewed through the lens of the consis-tent failures of the football team, it’s a big weekend in Am-herst.

“It’s been a tough road,” he said. “It’s a privilege to be in games like this where you get to October and games matter . . . It’s an awesome thing. It’s great for our program. It’s great for our department, and I’m just happy that we’re here to support this program, this team, and make sure that they have the things that they need to ulti-mately continue this success on, not just this year but sustain it for future years, as well.

“That’s an exciting prospect for us and I’m excited for the op-portunities that lie ahead.”

Amin Touri can be reached at amin.touri@globe.com.

DANIELLE PARHIZKARAN/GLOBE STAFF

The Red Sox made Chad Tracy their full-time manager on Sept. 22, also announcing they had extended Craig Breslow.

Sox like long-term setup with Breslow

►RED SOX
Continued from Page C1

brink of a lost season. They didn't consider firing Breslow.

The Red Sox then experienced a historic reversal with a 32-5 run over a seven-week stretch. It convinced the organization to move aggressively at the deadline (especially in trading for catcher Adley Rutschman) while cruising toward the postseason. While some in the industry were surprised by the prospects the Red Sox sacrificed, others — including some members of the team — were excited by a willingness to make a bold bet meant to chase a title.

After the Red Sox clinched their playoff berth, they promoted Chad Tracy from interim to full-time manager through 2029 (with a team option for 2030). Additionally, the team announced it was exercising options on Breslow's contract for 2029 and 2030.

Breslow was told of the decision on him shortly after this year's trade deadline. Given he was already under contract through 2028, why then? Did they want their head of baseball operations to have a deal that ran beyond his manager's? Did Breslow's contract require a decision?

"We talked about it, [principal owner John Henry, who also owns the Globe; chairman Tom Werner; FSG president Mike Gordon] and I, throughout the course of June, July," said Kennedy. "We just felt it was the right time to establish continuity and clarity within baseball operations, and make that commitment to Bres and his crew.

"Something we've been striving for is baseball operations continuity and stability. I know that sounds a little odd, given that we made a change with the manager and coaching staff [with Cora's dismissal]. The hallmark of a good baseball organization is continuity, No. 1, at the ownership level. But with your baseball operation, we haven't had that for some time.

"So we wanted to do that, we were proactive with that, and we informed him midseason that we were picking up the option. There was no contractual need to do it, no mechanism. There was nothing that had to be done. We wanted to do that as a demonstration of commitment to stability and continuity."

Of course, stability is only valuable if it keeps in place a decision-making and operational structure the Red Sox believe is sound. What brought them to such a determination with Breslow?

"Certainly preparation and research and diligence. But also, [his] conviction and willingness to make really hard decisions, which I think is required, especially in Boston. That's really important," said Kennedy. "And then the history and background as a player, to me, that's one of the most underrated, least-talked-about aspect of Craig Breslow's tenure as head of baseball operations.

"[Members of the Red Sox front office] believe strongly in what they believe in due to the work they do on players and background. It's not just analytics. [His relationships and experiences from playing] was the most important thing about the hire when we brought Bres in. He had all the baseball operations chops of modern general managers. But very few have played the game. I just think that was a lot of the reason we hired him, and a reason for picking up the [options]."

That decision reflected not only appreciation for what the team has done over the last two years — the first back-to-back playoff appearances for the Sox since 2016-18 — but also its outlook moving forward.

"We're very well-positioned for the long term, but that didn't make April, May, June of this year feel any better," Kennedy said before the start of the series against the Yankees. "We have to continue to balance the now with [the future]. But I do think we are set up for hopefully a very good period."

Alex Speier can be reached at alex.speier@globe.com. Follow him @alexspeier.

CHAD FINN

Playing nine innings while wondering why not-ready-for-prime-time Chad Tracy thought it was a good idea to yank his two best starting pitchers after 4⅓ innings each ...

1. This lousy new wait till next year that the Red Sox stuck us with Wednesday night? It feels an awful lot like last year's season sayonara. Maybe even a little worse. In last year's wild-card round duel with the Yankees, at least the Sox won a game, with ace Garrett Crochet delivering a gem in Game 1. The 2025 Yankees won the next two in the silly best-of-three format, with Cam Schlichter and friends shutting out the Sox in a suspense-free Game 3.

This year? The Sox went down wheezing. Schlichter, the heavy favorite for the American League Cy Young Award, rendered them hopeless in a 9-0 Game 1 win Tuesday. The Yankees ended the Red Sox' season with a 9-2 pummeling Wednesday night, and you don't need a calculator to tally up a run differential between these teams. (Yankees, plus-16.)

The better team probably won last year. This year? There is no doubt. The Red Sox were outmanaged, outclassed, and, as usual since the start of September, outhit. It stinks to lose to the Yankees once, and it double-stinks to lose to them in back-to-back years.

2. But if we're being honest with ourselves, there is justice with this outcome. Red Sox chief baseball officer Craig Breslow did not build a good enough offense; we suspected it pretty much since their magical, improbable 32-5 stretch from late June through early August curved back to reality. And wouldn't you know it, their bats snoozed through another abrupt postseason stay. Yes, the Red Sox were stung by injuries. But deep retrospection is not required to recognize that they never quite had enough offense.

3. We have all winter to deconstruct this most peculiar, uneven season, but this we can declare now. Breslow must get at least one high-end bat, and preferably two, presuming the possibility of a lockout doesn't halt team-building long before the games begin.

Some marginal players had wonderful stretches for the Red Sox this season, but earth eventually called them back from the stratosphere.

For the last month, I've been wondering what this team would have looked like if Breslow had retained Alex Bregman (28 homers, .819 OPS for the Cubs) and signed Pete Alonso (an AL-leading 43 homers and 113 RBIs for the Orioles).

4. I don't understand any reaction to Roman Anthony's latest injury other than disappointment for him and deep concern that serious injuries are going to prevent him from becoming the superstar his talent suggests he can be.

Anthony was good for 3.3 wins above replacement in just 75 games upon coming up to the majors in June 2025 as a 21-year-old. An oblique injury — rotten to have as a hitter, as James Wood and Drake Baldwin, among others, discovered this season — ended his season abruptly.

Just more than six months ago, Anthony proved he belonged on stage with the best players on the planet during the World Baseball Classic. Hard to believe that was this calendar year.

5. Not much has gone right since the WBC, to put it mildly, and the vast majority of that is not Anthony's fault. He started slowly, which happens. A complicated hand/finger injury cost him four months this season, and another ended his season Tuesday night.

Yet in 126 career regular-season games, he has an .803 OPS and 126 OPS+ at 22 years old. It stinks that a player of such obvious promise keeps suffering legitimate injuries.

6. Oh, and it's borderline pathetic that a portion of the fan base — no doubt including a number of hot takers who think they should get a weekday gig at WEEI whenever the next lineup shakeup comes — have taken to calling Anthony soft or some other synonym.

It's not as if he's sitting out with a sprained hair follicle.

This is an alarming, recurring injury that makes you wonder if his immense promise will be fulfilled.

7. Turns out that Crochet, who hadn't pitched in a big league game since April 25 because of shoulder inflammation and then a lat strain, wasn't quite ready to get back on a big-league mound, let alone under win-or-go-home circumstances.

Crochet allowed four earned runs without recording an out in the sixth inning, though he should have had one — he struck out Spencer Jones, but a wild strike three evaded Adley Rutschman and allowed Jones to reach first base. A tip of the cap to Crochet, however, for giving it a shot.

8. Payton Tolle and Sonny Gray each left their starts after 4⅓ innings having allowed a single run. Those single runs each gave the Yankees a 1-0 lead that felt more like 5-0. They both did their jobs, and as noted above, their manager should have allowed them to do it a little longer. Tolle was the best thing about this season, wasn't he?

9. The Red Sox have not played a postseason game at Fenway Park since a 9-1 loss to the Astros in Game 5 of the 2021 ALCS. Their lineup that night included Kyle Schwarber, Rafael Devers, Xander Bogaerts, and J.D. Martinez. Five years later, the Sox could have used those guys in the lineup in this series. Yep, even Martinez.

Chad Finn can be reached at chad.finn@globe.com.

Judge's status for ALDS remains cloudy

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Yankees captain Aaron Judge remains uncertain for the AL Division Series against the Rays as he recovers from a calf injury.

BASEBALL NOTEBOOK

The three-time AL MVP, who hasn't played since Sept. 16, took live batting practice Thursday at Yankee Stadium and worked out Friday at the team's spring training ballpark in Tampa. New York must submit its 26-man roster to Major League Baseball by 10 a.m. Saturday, about 10 hours before the opener.

Tropicana Field has artificial turf, which factors into whether Judge will be ready to return to right field.

"It plays into it a little bit," Yankees manager Aaron Boone said Friday. "But we're looking at the days and so it's more is he going to be available at some point in this series, potentially, as a player?"

"I expect him playing right field, hitting third," Tampa Bay manager Kevin Cash said.

If Judge isn't ready for the outfield, he could be used as a pinch hitter. Ben Rice, the Yankees' top hitter in Judge's absence, is the designated hitter. New York would be unlikely to have Rice at first in place of Paul Goldschmidt, who is a superior defender.

Judge was sidelined by a fractured rib from May 31 to Sept. 8 and played in just seven games before straining his right calf on Sept. 16. He was limited to 66 games this season and hit .241 with 18 homers, 41 RBIs,

SATURDAY'S GAMES
.....2026.....			Team rec.			2026 vs. opp.....			Last 3 starts.....
Odds	W-L	ERA	W-L	IP	ERA	W-L	IP	ERA	W-L	IP	ERA
CHI. WHITE SOX AT CLEVELAND, 1 p.m.
Smith (L)	+130	3-3	1.29	1-1	3.18	5.2	3.18	0-0	5.0	0.00
Messick (L)	-150	12-9	2.56	18-14	2.1	25.2	2.81	0-0	14.0	3.21
ATLANTA AT LA DODGERS, 4 p.m.
TBA	+185	—	—	0-0	0.0	0.00	0-0	0.0	—	—
Skubal (L)	-225	12-7	2.72	17-9	0-0	7.0	2.57	3-0	19.0	1.89
NY YANKEES AT TAMPA BAY, 6:30 p.m.
Cole (R)	+115	10-9	3.61	11-11	1-1	18.0	2.50	2-1	16.0	5.06
Rasmussen (R)	-135	16-5	2.67	21-9	2-1	22.0	2.86	2-0	18.2	0.96
SAN DIEGO AT MILWAUKEE, 8:30 p.m.
Ray (L)	+170	13-8	3.59	18-12	0-0	4.0	4.50	2-0	14.1	5.65
Misiorowski (R)	-200	16-5	1.80	22-8	0-0	7.0	0.00	2-0	13.1
Team rec. — Record in games started by pitcher this season and an .871 OPS, including 174 with one homer and three RBIs in September.

"I've done my deep dive on Aaron Judge," Rays Game 1 starter Drew Rasmussen said. "I think we make the assumption he's in there until he's not."

Boone said he hasn't decided whether to include Giancarlo Stanton, who hasn't played since April 24 because of strained calf muscles in both legs.

Stanton was active in the Wild Card Series sweep of the Red Sox but didn't get in the games, which both turned into blowouts.

Gerrit Cole will start for the Yankees in Game 1. The 36-year-old righthander, a six-time All-Star, was 10-9 with a 3.61 ERA in 22 starts this season after recovering from Tommy John surgery that caused him to miss the 2025 season.

Yankees delayed

Plane problems caused a switch of airports that prevented the Yankees from landing at Tampa International Airport until 1 a.m. Friday.

The team arrived at Westchester County Airport, north of New York City, about 2:30 p.m. Thursday for a charter flight.

The Yankees wound up going by bus about 30 miles to LaGuardia Airport, near Citi Field in Queens. Their charter flight departed about 10 p.m.

"Hydraulics issue. Didn't have a tall enough ladder to fix it," Boone said. "I offered to go get my ladder at home. Declined."

Ohtani unsure

Even Shohei Ohtani isn't sure the extent of injuries to his right biceps, left knee, and neck that kept him off the mound after the All-Star break and landed him on the injured list for the first time with the Dodgers.

"I haven't been able to get a good grasp of the root cause of all this, so I think that process is going to happen during the off-season when I'm going to have a little bit more time to be able to address it," he said through a translator. "As of now, it's something I'm just going to have to manage."

Celtics hopeful that The Citadel can help new group jell

►ON BASKETBALL
Continued from Page C1

helped that process, especially when communicating with younger players. (The Celtics have four 22 or under.)

"I think that's part of why you go visit guys, is to meet them where they're at, have an understanding of what was our relationship like last year and what we're looking to bring in off and on the court," said Mazzulla. "Personally, that's part of where the personal development is, as environments change, as guys come in younger, different guys with different experiences. You have to be able to find different ways to connect. That's one of the things I enjoy doing the most is trying to build that connection with different guys."

Cenac is just a few years older than Mazzulla's stepson, Michael Harden Jr., a Xavierian senior receiver who committed in June to play football at Boston College.

"Being a stepfather has made me a better coach because I've had to build a different relationship with my oldest from a standpoint of, I can't just say something because I'm your father," Mazzulla said. "And respecting the relationship him and his father have had is the same as respecting a young kid [on the team] and having a relationship, and you're not just going to listen to me because I'm the coach. And that's humbled me and forced me to find different ways to connect with people at that age.

"It's interesting, the dynamics of being a stepdad is not much different than being a coach because you can't fall on the crutch of authority. You have to dig beyond the relationship aspect and get to the crux of we're in this together, and how can I try to motivate and inspire you and we can learn from each other."

Tatum also has put an emphasis on leadership. He's the senior member of the team, entering his 10th season, and the most accomplished player on the roster. Perhaps in past years he led by example, especially with the presence of Brown, Jrue Holiday, and Al Horford to take the leadership responsibility.

But now teammates, especially the younger ones, will look to Tatum for guidance. The blueprint for Tatum is to become more vocal, but within his reserved personality.

"I would say through experience, it's Year 10 and I've been through it all, the highs and lows, understanding that it's my 10th training camp," he said. "It's really about having awareness of myself and of the environment and knowing, just give the environment exactly what it needs."

The Celtics will travel to Charleston on Saturday for the next step of this journey. While Mazzulla's goal is to continue the on-court development and cohesion, he relishes the opportunity to put his team in a different setting and with increased time together off the floor. The goal is to expedite the growth process and be unified when the season begins.

"It's really been 10 years since we did it, a bunch of new guys, so just wanted to really take a step back, get away, and vibe with each other in a different environment," said Mazzulla. "It's always good to shake it up a little bit."

The Citadel being one of just six senior military colleges (SMCs) in the United States makes this trip exceptional and rewarding, especially for Mazzulla.

"I really enjoy military leadership," he said. "I learn from it a lot. I think it's important, so any chance that we'll get to do it, we'll try."

Gary Washburn is a Globe columnist. He can be reached at gary.washburn@globe.com.

MELECK ELDAHSHOURY FOR THE GLOBE

Jayson Tatum was a rookie 10 years ago the last time the Celtics took part of their preseason training camp on the road.

Schools

Smith, O’Keefe team up for Central classic

By Trevor Hass
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Central Catholic 52 WESTWOOD — Down by 2 with 56 seconds remaining at Xaverian, Central Catholic senior quarterback Caden Smith masterfully delivered the drive of a lifetime.

Smith, who torched the three-time defending Division 1 champion all night, had more than enough time to unveil his final act. He methodically directed the Raiders 68 yards before classmate Drew O’Keefe drilled a 29-yard field goal with five seconds left to seal a scintillating 52-51 Central Catholic triumph Friday night.

“That’s the top,” Smith said, when asked where this game ranks all-time. “There’s nothing better than a shootout like that. You can’t script it any better. That’s an unbelievable win for this team, for this program, and this school.”

The Bentley-bound Smith finished 16-for-22 passing for 237 yards and five touchdowns, and added 149 yards rushing and a score to fuel the sixth-ranked Raiders (2-2).

He traded blows all night with Penn State-bound Will Wood, who completed 13 of 22 passes for 259 yards and five touchdowns, along with 86 rushing yards and a TD for the No. 3 Hawks (2-2).

In a preposterous instant classic that featured 103 points, 11 lead changes, and more than 700 yards of offense, it felt like whichever team had the ball last would prevail. O’Keefe, a seasoned four-year kicker, delivered in the clutch to seal a win for the ages.

“I’ve never felt more pressure in my life, but I got it done,” O’Keefe said.

It became abundantly clear early on that neither team had much of a chance of stopping the other. The teams combined for nine touchdowns in the first half.

Xaverian struck first on a 6-yard touchdown

MARK STOCKWELL FOR THE GLOBE

Xaverian receiver Jackson Holmes was unable to elude a Central Catholic defender Friday, but it certainly wasn’t a night for the defenses as the teams combined for 103 points.

pass from Wood to Sargent Chizmadia, then Smith hit Jeremiah Mateo Mora for a 24-yard reception to tie it at 7 through one quarter.

Wood found Michael Kimmelmann for a 27-yard TD and Smith immediately answered with a 46-yard rushing score. Xaverian jumped back in front on a 45-yard scamper from Wood, yet once again, the Raiders responded as Smith and Athaniel Urena connected on a 26-yard strike to tie it at 21.

Xaverian senior Jonathan Santosuosso returned the ensuing kickoff 96 yards to the house. Smith, eternally unfazed, hit Mateo Mora for six more on a 28-yard pass.

A defensive stop finally came when the Raiders recovered a fumble off a high snap in the final minute. Smith fed O’Keefe in stride from 35 yards out on the next play to give the Raiders a 35-28 halftime advantage.

“The scoring just kept going back and forth, back and forth,” said Central Catholic first-year coach John Dubzinski. “It was two great high school football teams with two prolific offenses and two great quarterbacks.”

After a shockingly scoreless third quarter, chaos commenced in the fourth. Teddy Connolly drilled a 33-yard field goal for Xaverian, then Wood hit Richie Edgehill from 26 yards out. Central Catholic’s Cody Arsenault answered with an 83-yard kickoff return for a touchdown, then Wood found Kimmelmann on a 53-yard pass to give Xaverian a 45-42 advantage.

Smith delivered a dart to Peter Thomas from 6 yards out to vault Central Catholic ahead, 49-45, with 1:25 left. Wood and Chizmadia connected for a 51-yard strike to make it 51-49, Hawks, but a blocked extra point paved the way for Smith and O’Keefe’s heroics.

As exhilarating as it was, Smith said this was “nothing out of the ordinary” for the Raiders, who also outlasted Xaverian by a single point last year.

“Whether they’re the three-time state champs or the 15-time state champs, we go in with the same mind-set every game that we’re going to punch them in the mouth,” Smith said.

Trevor Hass can be reached at trevor.hass@globe.com. Follow him on X @TrevorHass.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL ROUNDUP

Fairhaven plays it perfectly

By Jonathan Darling
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Elliott Grant has practiced his favorite play over and over again, but Fairhaven coach Derek Almeida had never called his number in a game.

That is, until the biggest moment against West Bridgewater.

Clinging to a slim lead in the waning minutes of Friday night’s South Coast Conference clash, Almeida called a reverse to his 142-pound junior on third and goal from the 15. Elliott got the ball in space, took advantage of the confused defense, picked up a few blocks, and dashed to the end zone, lifting the reigning Division 6 state champion Blue Devils to a 22-13 victory, avenging their only loss last season.

“That’s my favorite play. When I heard it in the huddle, my ears lit up,” Grant said after Fairhaven improved to 4-0. “Every inch matters. I just saw blue [the end zone color] and gave it everything I had.”

West Bridgewater (2-2) took advantage of Blue Devils miscues and good field position to jump out to a 13-0 lead.

Andover 37, Methuen 34 — Marcus DeJesus punched in a clinching 10-yard scoring run in the fourth quarter, capping a 217-yard, three-touchdown performance for the Golden Warriors (3-1) in the Merrimack Valley Conference win at Methuen (3-1).

Bedford 35, Concord-Carlisle 30 — Down, 24-21, in the third quarter, Sylar Pimentel (two passing touchdowns, two rushing touchdowns) made a huge play to shift the momentum, ripping the ball from the ball-carrier’s hands and bringing it back 70 yards for a touchdown to take a lead that the Bucs (3-1) would never give back in a Dual County triumph.

Burlington 22, Wilmington 20 — The host Red Devils (2-2, 1-0) took an early 14-6 lead and held strong thanks to great defensive performances from freshman Tommy Wilson, and sophomores Owen Doody, Adam Bousalem, and Braden Murphy, but facing fourth and long in the shadow of their end zone, a botched snap gave Wilmington (3-1, 0-1) a safety to force overtime.

Chelmsford 28, Tewksbury 21 — Skyler DeJesus took a major chance on fourth and 15 by opting to run down the sideline instead of punting, but the senior not only picked up a first down, he broke a 65-yard TD run to give the Lions (3-1, 2-0) a 21-7 halftime lead. That proved enough cushion to hold off the No. 7 Redmen (3-1, 1-1) in a Merrimack Valley upset.

Everett 35, Malden 6 — Freshman Michael Walsh threw touchdowns of 37 and 21 yards, along with an 11-yard score on the ground as the Crimson Tide (3-1) came away with a Greater Boston win.

Falmouth 14, Nantucket 13 — With four seconds left, a potential winning field goal attempt from Nantucket (1-2) went wide, clinching a Cape & Islands victory for the visiting Clippers (1-3).

Mansfield 28, Natick 0 — Gio Scarpellini threw for a 60-yard touchdown pass to Darrian Sanders to open things up and later ran for a 1-yard score for the fifth-ranked Hornets (4-0) in a nonleague blanking of the visiting Redhawks (1-3).

Milton 35, Acton-Boxborough 14 — Senior Jayden Dubois was the player of the game, rushing for four TDs, including a 66-yard scamper for the host No. 14 Wildcats (3-1) in a nonleague triumph.

Newton North 29, Framingham 18 — Junior Connor Swanson threw for a pair of touchdowns (10 and 20 yards) and ran for two more (1 and 21 yards) to boost the Tigers (4-0) to a Bay State home victory.

Newton South 49, Boston Latin 14 — Jayce Coston hauled in four touchdown passes from Jack Nolan for the Lions (1-3, 1-0) in a Dual County League rout of the visiting Wolfpack (3-1, 0-1).

North Reading 21, Pentucket/Georgetown 7 — Michael Corvino connected with Ian Baker for scores of 63 and 26 yards through the air and found Lucas Cabral in the end zone for a third passing touchdown as the visiting Hornets (2-2) swarmed Cape Ann Kinney rival Pentucket/Georgetown (0-4).

Norwood 17, Medfield 14 — Jakoby Dalton ran for a 32-yard score in the third quarter to help secure a win for the host Mustangs (2-2, 1-0) over the Warriors (3-1, 0-1) in the Tri-Valley Large opener for both teams. A potential Medfield game-tying field goal went wide.

Scituate 49, Plymouth South 12 — Senior Grayson Foley took 18 rushes for 279 yards and four touchdowns and snared three passes for 76 yards as the host Sailors (4-0) steered past Patriot Fisher foe Plymouth South (1-3). Chrysto Brown ran for 51 yards and two scores.

Sharon/Dedham 21, Nauset 12 — Senior QB Brady Shuffain threw three TD passes to Joseph Seaman, who broke Sharon’s all-time receiving TD record with the 15th of his career in a nonleague win for the home Eagles (3-1).

Shawsheen 21, St. Mary’s 12 — Quinn Carbone rushed for two TDs and Hadi Sibay returned an 85-yard kick return for the Rams (4-0) in a nonleague win over St. Mary’s (2-2). Rowan Merryman rushed for two touchdowns for the Spartans.

Watertown 14, Stoneham 0 — Senior Coleman Keuchkarian-McKeen tossed touchdowns of 28 and 6 yards, hitting Shane Gray and Mason Lamacchia, for the Raiders (4-0) in a gritty Middlesex League home win.

Weymouth 36, Wellesley 0 — Brendan Flynn scored on rushes of 3 and 20 yards as the Wildcats (3-1) registered the Bay State Conference shutout.

Nate Weitzer, Trevor Sheehan, Inaaya Omer, Tony Gleason, Alex Yu, Ethan Kagno, Jake Levin, Matty Wasserman, Mukala Kabongo, and AJ Traub contributed.

BARRY CHIN/GLOBE STAFF

After taking a punt back 55 yards in the first half, Melrose’s Parker Siebel sprinted for a gain.

Barrington, Melrose snare key Middlesex League win

By Brad Joyal
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Melrose 35 MELROSE — Leading up to its Middlesex League interdivision showdown against visiting Winchester, Melrose game planned around its tight end, Conor Barrington.

The 6-foot-4-inch, 220-pound sophomore executed the plan Friday night, reeling in three catches from senior quarterback Nathan Geer for 70 yards and two touchdowns.

Paired with a stout effort from the Red Hawks’ defense, the duo connected for passing scores of 13 and 35 yards to help Melrose pull away for a 35-21 victory at Fred Green Memorial Field.

“All week in practice, we’ve been scheming around [Barrington],” said Geer, who completed 11 of 15 passes for two TDs and added another 1-yard score on a keeper late in the fourth quarter.

“We saw a ton of stuff throughout the film and at halftime, made some adjustments, and found him open down field.”

Barrington said he was “locked in” throughout the week, while Melrose coach Tim Morris described the performance as a “breakout” for the tandem.

“They found each other a bit,” said Morris. “We’ve been running the ball a lot, so I like getting that part of our game going.”

After taking a 28-21 lead following a 4-yard touchdown run by senior CJ Cinella Jr. with 8:49 remaining, Melrose (3-1) forced a three-and-out on Winchester’s ensuing possession.

The Red Hawks then chewed up 5:20 of clock before Geer plunged in with 2:03 remaining to seal the win.

“We’ve got to be way better in our execution — from quarterback to running back to line to receivers,” said Winchester coach Wally Dembowski after the Red & Black fell to 3-1.

“We didn’t block the perimeter. We didn’t do a thing right offensively.”

Winchester senior QB Peter Alexopoulos (6 of 18, 162 yards, 2 TDs, INT) threw touchdown passes to classmates Andrew Haigis (77 yards) and William Bolognese (25 yards) in addition to running for a 9-yard score.

Melrose junior Parker Siebel opened the scoring with a 55-yard punt return in the first quarter.

Marblehead mourns shocking death of football captain

By Nate Weitzer
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Owen Coyne, a three-sport athlete and cocaptain of the Marblehead High football team, has died, school superintendent John Robidoux announced Friday.

In a message to the Marblehead Current, Coyne’s mother, Angela Paradise, said that her son had died from a sudden brain hemorrhage that was not caused by an impact. He had played in Marblehead’s Week 3 contest at Scituate last Friday.

The high school is offering counseling from noon to 3 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday, and Marblehead’s Saturday morning football game at Danvers has been canceled. Marblehead has received an outpouring of support from other school districts in the region.

“The thoughts and prayers of the Mansfield High School community go out to the family of Owen Coyne,” wrote Mansfield football coach Mike Redding on X. “From all that knew him, he was a great athlete, captain, student and great friend to many. Hoping he is in a better place.”

“This is a sad day for our Marblehead community, and we ask that you send positive thoughts and prayers to the Coyne family and Owen’s friends during this difficult time,” Robidoux said in a statement.

“In the days and weeks to come,” added Robidoux, “we will be providing counseling support in an ongoing way during the school day for students and staff who want to avail themselves of the opportunity. We will share further information with the community as appropriate.”

Coyne played wide receiver and safety for the Magicians last season and committed in July to play football at Williams College.

He also starred on the baseball diamond, where he was a Northeastern Conference All-Star, and ran indoor track. Coyne came close to a state championship in the high jump last winter, and finished as a Top 10 sprinter in Marblehead track history, per coach Nolan Raimo.

Paradise wrote that her son’s “kindness, positivity, warmth, and humble nature left an indelible mark on everyone he met during his brief 17 years on earth.

“Owen loved Marblehead fiercely, and Marblehead loved him right back . . . His passing is a devastating loss for our family and we recognize that this is also a staggering loss for our Marblehead community.”

Nate Weitzer can be reached at nweitzer7@gmail.com. Follow him on X @nweitzer7.

HIGH SCHOOL CROSS-COUNTRY NOTEBOOK

Costello’s huge time drops fueling Newton North’s rise

By Aiden Barker
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

The Newton North boys’ cross-country team was not on anyone’s radar last fall. The Tigers were 4-4 in dual meets, placed sixth at the Bay State Conference championship, and struggled to produce a consistent top five.

This season is different. “[There’s] something about this year; we all have goals we really want to achieve,” said senior captain Ryan Costello. “We’re all going to hold each other accountable.”

First-year coach Ian Moloney was aware of Costello’s presence, and potential, after coaching his younger sister, Casey, on the middle school team in 2023.

Working together for the first time, the two have propelled Newton North to a 6-0 record.

“They’re working together, they have a great team camaraderie, they’re very driven,” said Moloney. “It starts at the top with [Costello] and the captains and it goes all the way down to the 22nd and 23rd guy on varsity.”

Costello’s rise is astonishing. As a junior captain, he took the time to recover from an illness that kept him from competing for six months as a sophomore.

In a dual meet against Wellesley last month, Costello blazed to a 5K victory in 15 minutes, 36 seconds, a full 80 seconds faster than his personal best. With his long strides, he’s like a metronome on the course.

“Ryan was a captain as a junior and that’s something that just doesn’t happen very often at a large school,” said Shawn Wallace, who oversees the Tigers’ track and cross-country programs. “That goes to show his leadership skills and the fact that another coach can come in and then they just click with them instantaneously.”

Costello began running in fourth grade with the Waltham Track Club. As his interest in team sports diminished, he turned toward the running community, putting his focus on three competitive seasons as a freshman.

He recalls experiencing a tough race with his teammates. He left the meet early, but once he got home and showered, he put on a change of clothes and drove back to cheer them on.

“To be able to look at those guys and look at coach Wallace and Moloney and look at all the people that are supporting me and that I support, that’s what drives me,” said Costello. “I really don’t think I’d be the runner I am if I wasn’t on this specific team.”

Cross-country followers statewide might already be familiar with Costello and the Tigers. He has been posting videos on his Instagram account, creatively highlighting the team and their meets. He has more than 3,700 followers and a video he posted Sept. 20 in which he shows he ran 137 seconds better at the same meet from last year has garnered nearly 180,000 views.

Costello started posting in January to help his college recruitment, but he’s been shooting video of his running since the sixth grade and plans to major in sports media in college. Teammates and coaches are featured in his videos.

Over the summer, Costello helped organize a Bay State Conference group run with a buddy from Wellesley. He was surprised to see 70 runners show up. Not only did it make a great video, but Costello was pleased to meet so many like-minded runners, who continue to flood his comments section with positive messages.

“It’s nice to see comments and get messages, but the real value in it is the relationships with other people who are waking up at 6 a.m. to run in the summer,” said Costello. “Personally, those are the best people I’ve ever met.”

Fellow senior captains Matthew Gallo and Alexander Daly help lead Newton North’s varsity contingent, and they’re determined to bring home a trophy.

“We’ve had a better start than we all expected, but there’s still no MIAA trophy,” said Costello. “We know what we’re capable of. We have a competitive team.”

Boys’ Globe Top 20

No.		Rec.	Last
1.	Cambridge	2-0	1
2.	Concord-Carlisle	3-0	2
3.	St. John’s Prep	3-0	3
4.	Brookline	5-0	5
5.	Lexington	1-1	4
6.	Newton North	6-0	7
7.	Xaverian	2-1	10
8.	Natick	4-3	8
9.	Reading	2-1	6
10.	BC High	1-2	9
11.	Belmont	3-0	16
12.	North Andover	4-0	11
13.	Latin Academy	0-0	12
14.	Arlington	2-0	14
15.	Catholic Memorial	1-2	15
16.	Oliver Ames	2-0	13
17.	Billerica	5-0	18
18.	Weston	1-0	17
19.	Lowell	5-0	-
20.	Andover	4-1	-

Girls’ Globe Top 20

No.		Rec.	Last
1.	Lexington	2-0	1
2.	Billerica	5-0	2
3.	Concord-Carlisle	3-0	3
4.	Newton North	6-0	4
5.	Winchester	3-0	5
6.	Westwood	3-0	6
7.	Needham	4-0	7
8.	Norwell	4-0	8
9.	Greater Lowell	4-0	9
10.	Bishop Feehan	1-1	10
11.	Notre Dame (H)	2-0	11
12.	Latin Academy	0-0	12
13.	Canton	3-0	13
14.	Central Catholic	5-0	14
15.	Milton	4-1	16
16.	Cambridge	2-0	18
17.	Weymouth	3-3	17
18.	Wellesley	4-3	15
19.	Natick	3-4	19
20.	Hamilton-Wenham	3-0	20

Hitting the trails

■ No. 1 Lexington and No. 2 Billerica are the Division 1 frontrunners, but third-ranked Concord-Carlisle has gotten off to a fast start.

The Patriots are 3-0 in Dual County League action and had an impressive showing in winning the nine-team Amherst Invitational on Sept. 19.

The Patriots are led by senior Maria Chopas, who won the Division 1B race (18:37.4) by 19 seconds and was fourth at All-States (18:26.4). Chopas won the Amherst Invitational (18:15.4) by 22 seconds, and senior Pelin Turner (19:31.3) was third.

“Lexington is very good; Billerica has been moving up. We want to be up there, so that motivates them,” said Concord-Carlisle coach Hanna Bruno. “They also don’t want to read too much into it and then sort of settle for, ‘Oh we’re only going to be third this year.’ ”

■ The MSTCA Frank Kelley Invitational, originally scheduled for last Saturday at the Wrentham Developmental Center, was postponed due to the nor’easter. The MSTCA weighed numerous options before deciding to reschedule the meet for Saturday as part of a doubleheader with the MSTCA Bay State Invitational.

Correspondent Matty Wasserman contributed to this story.

Schools

FIELD HOCKEY
CAPE & ISLANDS
Dennis-Yarmouth 7.....Nantucket 0
CAPE ANN
Lynnfield 3.....Pentucket 1
CMAC
Blackstone Valley 3.....Nipmuc 1
COUNTY
Amherst-Pelham 2.....Palmer 0
MERRIMACK VALLEY
Lowell 1.....Central Cath. 0
N. Andover 1.....Methuen 1
MID-WACH
Narragansett 1.....Littleton 0
MIDDLESEX
Belmont 4.....Lexington 0
Wilmington 3.....Burlington 1
Winchester 3.....Reading 0
NORTHEASTERN
Danvers 4.....Swampscott 2
Marblehead 6.....Peabody 0
Masconomet 3.....Beverly 3
NONLEAGUE
Agawam 2.....Westfield 0
Apponequet 2.....Dartmouth 0
Barnstable 7.....New Bedford 0
Bromfield 2.....Groton-Dunstable 0
Brookline 3.....Arlington 1
Concord-Carlisle 4.....Algonquin 0
Franklin Cty. Tech 8.....Mahar 0
Ham-Wenham 5.....Everett 0
Hopkinton 1.....Natick 0
Lincoln-Sudbury 4.....Nashoba 0
Maynard 2.....Tyngsboro 0
Mohawk Trail 0.....Hampshire 0
Monty Tech 11Worcester Tech/North 0
St. Paul 6, N. Dame Acad.-Worcester 3
Seekonk 1.....Dunfee 1
Southwick 3.....Suffield Acad. 0
W. Bridgewater 7.....Pembroke 0
Westwood 4.....Monroe/Bp. Feehan 3

FOOTBALL
AA
Springfield Central 45.....Westfield 21
BAY STATE
Newton North 29.....Framingham 18
Walpole 45.....Needham 12
BOSTON CITY
English High 26.....E. Boston 14
CAPE & ISLANDS
Falmouth 14.....Nantucket 13
CAPE ANN
Amesbury 46.....Manchester 8
Essex Tech 25.....Saugus/Port 6
N. Reading 21Pentucket/Georgetown 7
CATHOLIC CENTRAL
Abp. Williams 28.....Bp. Fenwick 14
Bp. Stang 35.....Arlington Cath. 12
Cathedral 18.....Card. Spellman 6
CMAC
Assabet 27.....Burncoat 20
Bay Path 21.....Northbridge 20
Blackstone Valley 26.....Millbury/Suit 14
St. Bernard’s 37, Blackstone-Millville 7
Worcester Tech 44.....Quabog 8
DUAL COUNTY
Bedford 35.....Concord-Carlisle 30
Newton South 49.....Boston Latin 1
Wayland 27.....Waltham 0
Westford 22.....Lincoln-Sudbury 15
Weston 21.....Cambridge 0
GREATER BOSTON
Revere 33.....Chelsea 0
HOCKOMUCK
King Philip 35.....Oliver Ames 0
North Attleboro 35.....Canton 14
INTERCOUNTY
Easthampton 30.....Greenfield 12
Franklin Cty. Tech 32.....Ware 28
Frontier 60.....Commerce 0
Mahar 21.....Athol 12
MAYFLOWER
Bristol-Plymouth 14.....Old Colony 0
MERRIMACK VALLEY
Andover 37.....Methuen 34
Chelmsford 28.....Tewksbury 21
Haverhill 55.....Lawrence 14
Lowell 26.....Dracut 20
MID-WACH
Grafton 19.....Shrewsbury 7
Leominster 34.....Wachusett 28
Tyngsboro 44.....Lunenburg 14
MIDDLESEX
Belmont 35.....Lexington 0
Burlington 22.....Wilmington 20 (OT)
Reading 47.....Arlington 9
Watertown 14.....Stoneham 0
NEPSAC CLASS C
Governor’s 20.....Nobles 6
NORTHEASTERN
Gloucester 28.....Winthrop 17
Swampscott 52.....Salem 14
PATRIOT
Hanover 15.....Pembroke 6
Hingham 28.....Plymouth North 1
Schuette 49.....Plymouth South 12
Silver Lake 21.....Whit-Hanson 13
SOUTH COAST
Fairhaven 22.....W. Bridgewater 13
Joseph Case 64.....Bourne 0
Somerset Berkley 55Gr. New Bedford 27
SOUTH SHORE
Cohasset 33.....Randolph 7
Mashpee 26.....Carver 0
Rockland 34.....E. Bridgewater 8
SUBURBAN
Norhampton 42.....Ludlow 0
Walcohah 44.....Taunton 18
TRI-VALLEY
Norwood 17.....Medfield 14
NONLEAGUE
Apponequet 34.....Dartmouth 24
Ashtand 13.....Algonquin 6
Auburn 39.....Leicester 24
Ayer Shirley/Littleton 30A, K. Foster 12
Belcherstown 37.....Monument Mtn. 8
Bellingham 37.....Holliston 7
Bp. Feehan 28.....BC High 9
Bridge-Raynham 26.....Attleboro 0
Cape Cod Tech 38.....Sandwich 15
Cath. Memorial 35.....Brocton 3
Central Cath. 52.....Xaverian 51
Dennis-Yarmouth 20.....Middleboro 14
Durfee 21.....Braintree 7
E. Longmeadow 43.....Longmeadow 36
Everett 35.....Malden 6
Foxboro 35.....Old Rochester 14
Gardner 24.....Narragansett 13
Gr. Lawrence 41.....G-Dunstable/NM 7
Hudson 34.....Clinton 7
Hull 53.....Bridgton 7
KIPP 50.....Latin Acad. 0
Lee 50.....Holyoke 6
Lowell Cath. 50.....Holbrook / Avon 12
Lynn Classical 42.....TechBoston 0
Lynn Tech 35.....Ham-Wenham 1
Malden Cath. 49.....Nashua (N.H.) 21
Mansfield 28.....Natick 0
Melrose 35.....Winchester 21
Milford 33.....Barnstable 20
Milton 35.....Acton-Boxboro 14
Murdock 26.....David Prouty 14
Nashoba 35.....Tantasqua 14
Nashoba Tech 42.....Gr. Lowell 13
N. Quincy 36.....Somerville 6
Norton 12, D.-Rehoboth/Bristol Aggie 7
O’Bryant 40.....Southbridge 0
Putnam 12.....Chicopee Comp. 6
Quabbin 41.....W. Boylston 0
St. John’s (S) 56.....Masconomet 6
Sharon/Dedham 21.....Nauset 12
Shawshen 21.....St. Mary’s 12
Shepherd Hill 32.....Fitchburg 8
South Shore 64.....Atlantis 12
Taunton 19.....Lynn English 18
Triton/Ipswich 21.....Ham-Wenham 0
Wakefield 43.....Woburn 13
Weymouth 36.....Wellesley 0
Whittier 24.....Middletown (R.I.) 7
Worcester South 43.....Uxbridge 21

GOLF
BOYS
BERKSHIRE
Lenox 175.....Mt. Everett 203
BI-COUNTY
Franklin Cty. Tech 154Westfield Tech 166
Pioneer Valley 173.....Turners Falls 193
Springfield Int’l 186.....Pathfinder 200
CATHOLIC CONFERENCE
Xaverian 215.....St. John’s (S) 230
CMAC
Tantasqua 140.....Barlett 225
SOUTH COAST
Apponequet 245.....Joseph Case 277
Gr. New Bedford 296.....Seekonk 251
TRI-VALLEY
Medway 272.....Bellingham 285
NONLEAGUE
Adv. Math & Sci. 158.....St. Paul 185
Easthampton 155.....S. Hadley 201
Ludlow 154.....Monson 179
W. Springfield 167Amherst-Pelham 183

SOCCER
BOYS
CAPE & ISLANDS
Falmouth 0.....Martha’s Vnyd. 0
Nantucket 2.....Sandwich 0
Rising Tide Charter 4Falmouth Acad. 1
CMAC
Nipmuc 5.....Adv. Math & Sci. 4
W. Bridgewater 3.....Bourne 2
SOUTH COAST
Apponequet 1.....Middleboro 0
St. John’s 2.....St. John Paul II 1
Auburn 4.....Worcester Tech 0
Burlington 9.....Arlington Cath. 1
Cohasset 2.....Excel Academy 1
Collegiate Charter 2.....Dracut 2
Douglas 4.....Whit-Hanson 18
Hanover 0.....Rockland 0
Longmeadow 2.....Minnechaug 1
Nauset 3.....Barnstable 1
New Bedford 4.....Brocton 0
Norwell 3.....Brocton 0
Peabody 0.....Chelsea 0
Pope Francis 2.....Monument Mtn. 1
Smith Voc. 1.....Commerce 1
Wellesley 2.....Hopkinton 6
Westford 3.....Chicopee Comp. 2
Weston 3.....Bellingham 1
GIRLS
BI-COUNTY
Franklin Cty. Tech 4 Smith Academy 0
CAPE & ISLANDS
Martha’s Vnyd. 1.....Falmouth 0
Rising Tide Charter 7Falmouth Acad. 0
Sandwich 4.....Nantucket 1
CAPE ANN
Lynnfield 4.....Ipswich 0
CHARTER SCHOOL ATHLETIC
S. Shore Charter 1.....Foxboro Charter 0
Gr. Lowell 5.....Whittier 0
EIL
Berwick 3.....Beaver CD 2

Scoreboard

	SAT 10/3	SUN 10/4	MON 10/5	TUE 10/6	WED 10/7	THU 10/8	FRI 10/9
		BUF 1:00 CBS
	MIN 8:00 NESN		OTT 7:30 NESN			UTA 7:00 NESN

	POR 8:45 Ion

Home games shaded

On the radio: Patriots, Bruins, and Revolution, WBZ-FM 98.5.

ON THE AIR

AUTO RACING
7:30 p.m. O’Reilly: Focused Health 302 CW

BASEBALL

1 p.m. Chi. White Sox at Cleveland TBS
4 p.m. Atlanta at LA Dodgers Fox
6:30 p.m. NY Yankees at Tampa Bay TBS
8:30 p.m. San Diego at Milwaukee FS1

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

12 p.m. Alabama at Mississippi St. ABC
12 p.m. BC at SMU CW
12 p.m. Michigan at Minnesota Fox
12 p.m. Middle Tenn. at Kansas ESPNU
12 p.m. Navy at Air Force CBS
12 p.m. Notre Dame at North Carolina ESPN
12 p.m. Stanford at Wake Forest ACC
12 p.m. Syracuse at UConn CBSSN
12 p.m. UCF at Houston ESPN2
12 p.m. West Virginia at Iowa State TNT
12:30 p.m. Michigan St. at Wisconsin Big Ten
12:45 p.m. Vanderbilt at Georgia SEC
3:30 p.m. Auburn at Tennessee ESPN
3:30 p.m. California at UNLV CBSSN
3:30 p.m. Florida at Missouri ABC
3:30 p.m. Louisville at N.C. State ABC
3:30 p.m. Ohio State at Iowa CBS
3:30 p.m. Virginia at Florida St. ESPN2
3:30 p.m. Wyoming at North Dakota St. CW
3:45 p.m. Marshall at James Madison ESPNU
4 p.m. Maryland at Nebraska SEC
4:15 p.m. Kentucky at South Carolina Big Ten
4:15 p.m. Purdue at Illinois Big Ten
6 p.m. Oregon St. at Colorado St. USA
7 p.m. Arkansas at Texas A&M ESPN2
7 p.m. BYU at TCU ESPN
7:30 p.m. Miami at Clemson ABC
7:30 p.m. Temple at South Florida ESPNU
7:30 p.m. Texas Tech at Colorado Fox
7:30 p.m. Utah State at Boise St. CBSSN
7:30 p.m. Washington at USC NBC
7:45 p.m. McNeese St. at LSU SEC
8 p.m. Indiana at Rutgers Big Ten
9:30 p.m. Fresno St. at Washington St. USA
10:30 p.m. Baylor at Arizona St. ESPN
10:30 p.m. E. Washington at UC Davis ESPN2
10:30 p.m. Texas State at San Diego St. CW
11 p.m. Cincinnati at Arizona Fox

GOLF

7 a.m. DP World: Dunhill Links Golf
12 p.m. Champions: Lehigh Valley Classic Golf
3 p.m. Korn Ferry: Compliance Championship Golf
5 p.m. PGA: Bank of Utah Championship Golf
8 p.m. PGA: LOTTE Championship Golf

PRO HOCKEY

7 p.m. Seattle at Edmonton NHL
8 p.m. Boston at Minnesota NESN

HORSE RACING

3 p.m. Breeders Cup Challenge Series NBC

MEN’S SOCCER

9:50 a.m. UEFA: Finland vs. Albania FS2
9:55 a.m. English: Bradford City at Reading CBSSN
11:50 a.m. UEFA: Estonia vs. Luxembourg FS2
2:30 p.m. UEFA: Spain vs. Czech Republic FS2
7 p.m. USL: Rhode Island at Brooklyn NESN+
9:50 p.m. CONCACAF: Belize vs. French Guiana FS2
10 p.m. Friendly: US vs. Mexico TNT

WOMEN’S SOCCER

4 p.m. NWSL: Utah at Louisville Ion
6:30 p.m. NWSL: Bay FC at Kansas City Ion
8:45 p.m. NWSL: Boston at Portland Ion

■ For updates, go to bostonglobe.com/tvlistings

Schools

SOCCER
GIRLS
PIONEER VALLEY
Easthampton 1.....Hopkins 1
SOUTH SHORE
Rockland 1.....Middleboro 0
TRI-COUNTY
Westfield Tech 7.....Putnam 1
TRI-VALLEY
Westwood 0.....Dover-Sherborn 0
NONLEAGUE
Acton-Boxboro 2.....Beverly 2
Amherst-Pelham 2.....W. Springfield 1
Austin Prep 6.....Concord Acad. 1
Bay Path 1.....Whit. Christian 1
Bp. Fenwick 2.....Danvers 2
Bristol-Plymouth 3.....New Bedford 2
Carver 4.....Dennis-Yarmouth 0
Cathedral/Cristo Rey 8Roxbury Prep 2
Cohasset 4.....Old Rochester 0
Douglas 3.....Adv. Math & Sci. 2
Drury 3.....Lenox 1
Gateway 2.....Pathfinder 2
Georgetown 2.....Haverhill 2
Holyoke 7.....Greenfield 4
Hopedale 2.....Uxbridge 1
Mahar 4.....Athol 0
Medfield 3.....Oliver Ames 0
Mt. Everett 4.....Commerce 1
Northbridge 1.....Millis 0
Notre Dame (H) 4.....Malden 0
Notre Dame Academy-Worcester 4St. Paul 1
Old Colony 2.....Wareham 1
Palmer 2.....Chicopee 0
Parker Charter 4.....Assabet 0
Smith Voc. 4.....Springfield Central 0
Springfield Int’l 1.....McCann Tech 0
Stoughton 5.....Brocton 0
Tantasqua 3.....Doherty 1
Tri-County 2.....Gr. New Bedford 1
Waltham 1.....Everett 1
Blue Hills 3.....Westport 1
Green Bay at Tampa Bay.....1
Wayland 2.....Westford 1
Westfield 0.....Longmeadow 0
Winthrop 5.....Revere 1

SWIMMING
GIRLS
BAY STATE
Newton North 96.....Needham 84
Andover 97.....Billerica 89
Chelmsford 98Methuen/Tewksbury 83

VOLLEYBALL
GIRLS
EIL
Beaver CD 3.....Berwick 1
ISL
BB&N 3.....Nobles 1
MAYFLOWER
Old Colony 3.....Norfolk Aggie 1
MERRIMACK VALLEY
Andover 3.....Tewksbury 0
MIDDLESEX
Burlington 3.....Wilmington 0
Melrose 3.....Stoneham 0
Winchester 3.....Reading 0
EIL
Beaver CD 3.....Berwick 1
ISL
BB&N 3.....Nobles 1
MAYFLOWER
Old Colony 3.....Norfolk Aggie 1

VOLLEYBALL
GIRLS
MERRIMACK VALLEY
Andover 3.....Tewksbury 0
MIDDLESEX
Burlington 3.....Wilmington 0
Melrose 3.....Stoneham 0
Winchester 3.....Reading 0
PATRIOT
Hanover 3.....Pembroke 0
Hingham 3.....Duxbury 0
Quincy 3.....Plymouth South 0
Silver Lake 3.....Whit-Hanson 1
NONLEAG

Remembered

SHARE YOUR MEMORIES ON OUR GUEST BOOK AT BOSTON.COM/OBITUARIES

BY CITY AND TOWN

BOSTON HULME, Phyllis G. (O'Keefe) LEACH, James	READING LEACH, James
BURLINGTON LEACH, James	SHARON HULME, Phyllis G. (O'Keefe)
CANTON HULME, Phyllis G. (O'Keefe)	WEST ROXBURY HULME, Phyllis G. (O'Keefe)
FOXBOROUGH HULME, Phyllis G. (O'Keefe)	WORCESTER DOOLEY, William Joseph
HANOVER DOOLEY, William Joseph	OUT OF STATE
LEXINGTON LEACH, James	NEW HAMPSHIRE LEACH, James

DOOLEY, William Joseph “Bill”

Age 83, of Hanover, passed away on September 24, 2026, surrounded by his loving family, after a long illness.

Bill was born on May 4, 1943, at Saint Margaret's Hospital in Boston, the fifth of seven children of John Stephen Dooley and Anna Bridget (Culhane) Dooley. He grew up in Dorchester and went on to become a skilled carpenter and woodworker. Over the course of his career, he helped build some of Boston's best-known landmarks, including the John Hancock Tower, Rows Wharf, the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library, and the Big Dig.

Bill and Martha married 55 years ago and settled in Hanover, where they raised their two sons and built a life together. In retirement, his love of wood never faded. He became an accomplished woodturner and was a proud member of both the Sarasota Woodturners Club and the South Shore Woodturners Club.

Bill will be remembered as a loving husband, devoted father and grandfather, talented craftsman, and loyal friend, and as a man with a wonderful sense of humor.

He leaves behind his dearly loved wife, Martha (McFarland) Dooley; and their two sons, William James Dooley and his partner, Olivia Dan of Londonderry, New Hampshire and Jon McFarland Dooley and his wife, Elizabeth “Betsy” Dooley of Grafton, Massachusetts. He was a proud grandfather to James, Clara, Samuel, Roger and Harper Dooley, who brought him tremendous joy, and he cherished the time he spent with each of them. Bill is also survived by his siblings, John Joseph Dooley, Margaret Mary Hoey and JaneFrancis Mary Zailskas; and by 21 beloved nieces and nephews. He was predeceased by his siblings, Anna Mary Stewart, Catherine Mary Thayer and James Joseph Dooley.

In lieu of flowers, Bill's family asks that you honor his memory by performing an act of kindness for someone else. When you do, simply think to yourself, “This is from Bill Dooley.”

Visiting Hours will be held on Sunday, October 11, 2026, from 4 to 7 PM, at Sullivan Funeral Homes, 551 Washington Street (Route 53), HANOVER. A Funeral Mass will be celebrated on Monday, October 12, 2026, at 11 AM, at St. Mary of the Nativity Church, 1 Kent Street, Scituate. The burial will be private, at a later date. All who knew and loved Bill are warmly welcome to join his family in celebrating his life.

Sullivan Funeral Homes
551 Washington St. Hanover, MA
781-878-0920

Funeral Services

ST. MICHAEL CEMETERY & CREMATORY

500 Canterbury St. The Respectful Way...
Boston, MA 02131 617-524-1036

www.stmichaelcemetery.com

CANNIFF MONUMENT
(617) 323-3690

800-439-3690 • 617-876-9110

531 Cummings Highway, Roslindale
583 Mt. Auburn Street, Cambridge
MON-FRI 9-9; SAT 9-5, SUNDAY 12-5

HULME, Phyllis G. (O'Keefe)

Of Canton, formerly of Foxboro, died peacefully, surrounded by her family and friends, on September 30, 2026. Beloved wife of the late Edward K. Hulme. Loving sister of Mary Guerra and her husband, Stephen, Elaine Lopresti and her husband, Arthur, and the late William O'Keefe and his wife, Fran, and the late Edward O'Keefe and his surviving wife, Patricia. Also survived by many nieces and nephews and grandnieces and grandnephews. Phyllis had a long career as a Vice President of State Street Bank. Following her retirement, she worked for the Foxboro School System, teaching elementary School. Phyllis was a beloved wife, daughter, sister, sister-in-law and aunt who was greatly loved by everyone. Visiting Hours will be held on Tuesday morning, October 6, from 9:00 am to 11:00 am, in The Robert J. Lawler & Crosby Funeral Home, 1803 Centre St., WEST ROXBURY. Relatives and friends are invited to attend. A Mass of Christian Burial will be celebrated in The Holy Name Church, 1689 Centre St., West Roxbury, Tuesday, October 6, at 11:30 am. Interment in St. Joseph Cemetery. Donations may be made in her memory to the Parkinson's Disease Foundation.

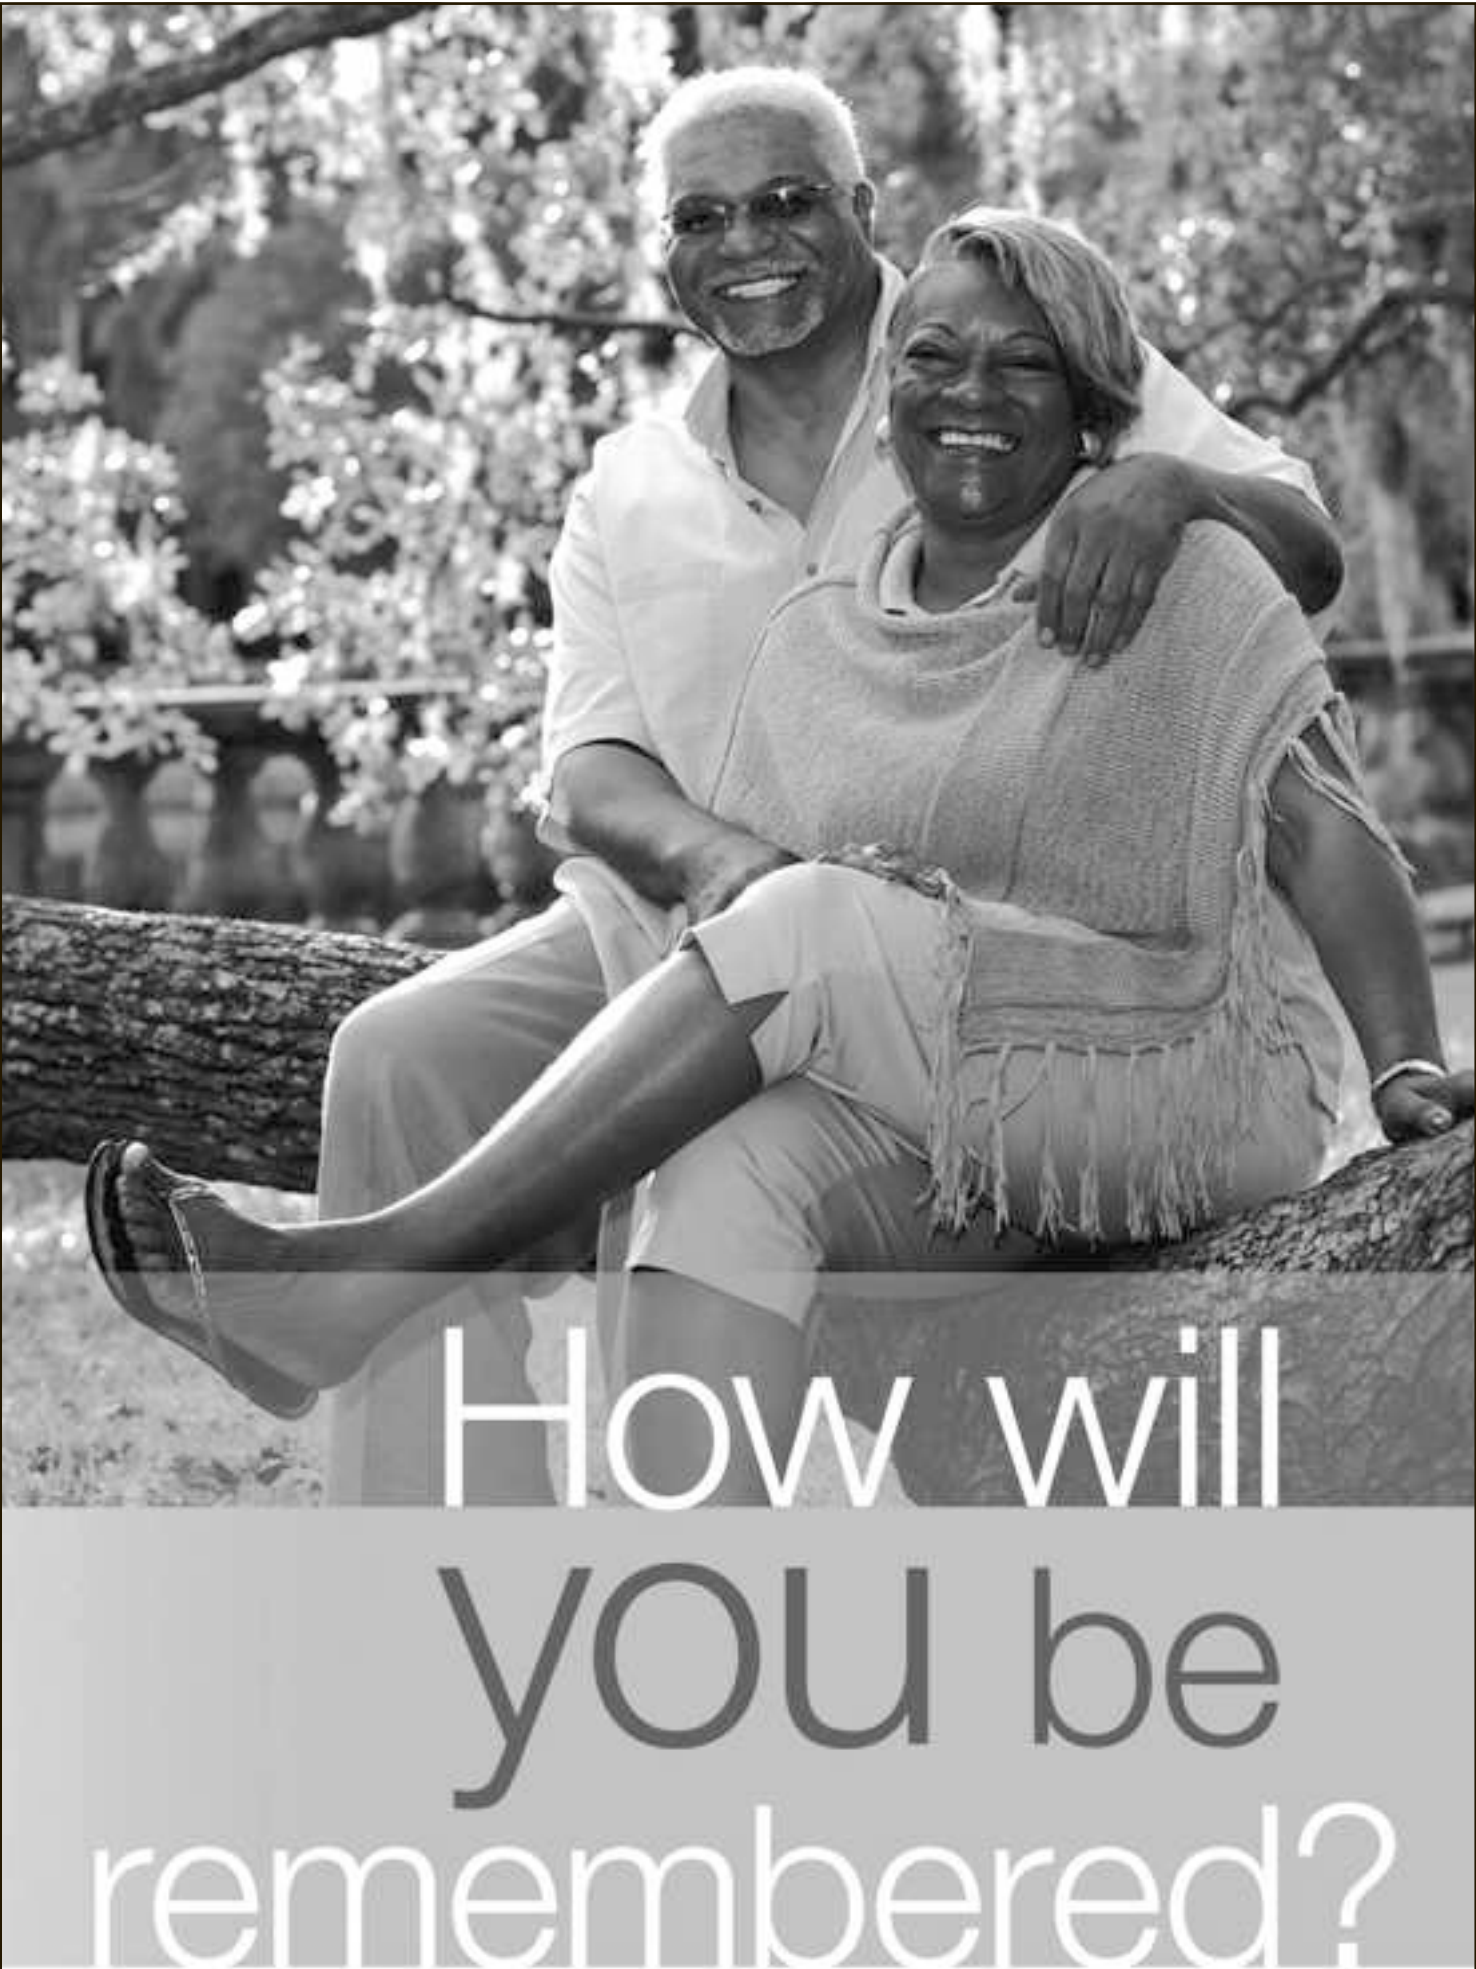

Lawler & Crosby Funeral Home
617-323-5600

LEACH, James “Jay”

Age 75, a long time NHL, AHL, and college hockey coach, passed away September 30, in Saco, ME, after a years long battle with dementia. He is survived by his children, Heather, Chris and Mackenzie; his wife, Sarah; his siblings, Chris, Maggie, Nancy, Mark and Stephen; and many dear in-laws, nieces, and nephews. He joins his father, Chuck; mother, Mary; brother, Jonathan; nephew, Andrew; and brother-in-law, Bob. Born in Philadelphia on May 24, 1951, Jay spent his childhood in Lexington, MA, attending Lexington High and playing hockey with his brothers and friends in the rinks, streets, and on frozen ponds. Jay's big personality and presence will leave an unfillable void for all of those that knew him, but we'll continue to live our lives with joy and comradery in his honor. Players loved playing for him. That old school mentality that makes the game so special, he represented that in the utmost way. Family and friends from all stages of life will celebrate Jay on Wednesday, October 7, at noon ET. The gathering will take place at The Barn at The Inn on Main in Wolfeboro, NH, 200 North Main Street, Wolfeboro, NH 03894. In lieu of flowers, consider making a donation in Jay's honor to support the Men's Ice Hockey Team at the University of Maine via the Black Bear Student Experience Fund. For obit/ guestbook, www.mcdonaldfs.com

Celebrate their lives

Honor your loved ones with a photo in the Boston Globe.
Ask your funeral director for details.

You talk about many things with your loved ones: from day-to-day details to big events. Sharing stories with those who matter most isn't just important today; it will be especially significant when it's time to honor and commemorate your lives.

Memorialization at the end of life is more than it used to be. It can reflect a person's life story and be transformative, healing and comforting.

Meaningful memorialization starts when loved ones talk about what matters most: memories made, lessons learned and how they hope to be remembered.

Download a free brochure and Have the Talk of a Lifetime today. It can make the difference of a lifetime.

talkofalifetime.org

Have the Talk of a Lifetime®

Massachusetts Funeral
MFA
Directors Association

Bring your memories to life

Capture them in a book, with the help of LifeBook Memoirs—the world's leading private memoir service.

Call 1-844-940-2719
or visit lifebookmemoirs.com

THE WORLD’S LEADING PRIVATE MEMOIR SERVICE

Bring your memories to life

Capture them in a book for your loved ones

As the world’s leading private memoir service, we have enabled thousands of people to read the life stories of their loved ones. We will listen to your stories in face-to-face interviews and turn them into a handcrafted, heirloom-quality book—a unique family treasure to be shared by generations to come.

Now is the time to tell your story.

Find out how—call us on

1-844-940-2719

or visit lifebookmemoirs.com

Obituaries

Lucien Lazare, 101; Jewish resistance fighter in France

By Adam Nossiter

NEW YORK TIMES

Lucien Lazare, a historian and teacher whose account of fighting in a little-known Jewish resistance unit in occupied France shed light on underground operations run by Jews during the Holocaust, died Sept. 22 at his home in Jerusalem. He was 101.

His death was announced by Yad Vashem, the Jerusalem Holocaust memorial; Mr. Lazare was a member of the memorial’s commission honoring those who aided Jews during World War II.

Like other French Jews who had escaped the Nazis’ dragnet, Mr. Lazare was living a semi-clandestine life when he was recruited by a member of the armed resistance in the late spring of 1944.

He promptly accepted the invitation, slipping deep into the French countryside to join what was known as the Marc Haguenuau unit, “a minuscule company of around 200, all of us green,” he later wrote. They liberated Castres, a city in southern France; received and distributed parachutes dropped from Allied planes; suffered severe losses in one particular clash with the enemy; and ambushed a German train as the Wehrmacht forces fled east in August 1944.

Seventy years later, Mr. Lazare recalled the feeling of victory after the ambush — when the German soldiers surrendered — in his memoir, “Le Tapissier de Jérusalem” (2015, not translated).

“There were 60 of them, lined up in the field, their hands in the air, their uniforms bloodstained, trembling like leaves,” he wrote.

“We marched triumphantly in front of them,” he continued, and he mocked them by shouting, “I am a Jew!”

Mr. Lazare’s resistance unit went on to join the French army under General Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, taking part in the fierce campaigns in eastern France — in the Vosges Mountains and in the liberation of Alsace. “Not exactly a cakewalk,” he wrote in his memoir.

It was his experience in combat that led to his pacifism in Israel, Mr. Lazare explained to interviewers. “The human condition is made up of paradoxes,” he told Le Monde in 2015.

As an Alsatian Jew, Mr. Lazare was part of a community that had been embedded in France for centuries and was confident about its rightful place in the national fabric.

But in 1942, after the Germans and their Vichy allies began to round up Jews in France, Mr. Lazare had to assume a false identity and procure forged identification papers. He joined a well-established Jewish scouting troop, the Éclaireurs Israélites de France, which operated semi-covertly during the war and became an “operational cog of combat,” he wrote in his memoir.

Later that year, after arriving in the city of Limoges, he enrolled in a newly established Jewish school there — a “crazy idea,” he wrote. By the end of the next year, with the Germans fully in control in the south and pressure tightening on Jews in Limoges, Mr. Lazare’s thoughts turned toward joining the rural resistance in the French countryside.

Several months later, in June 1944, after a perilous rail journey that involved dodging German soldiers, he arrived at the remote farm in south-central France where the Jewish unit was training. It was “an emotional moment,” he wrote, “as though I were returning to republican France. The return, in fact, was definitive.”

Lucien Léopold Lazare was born Nov. 24, 1924, in Strasbourg, France, the middle of three children of Maurice Lazare, a traveling salesman, and Renée (Weill) Lazare.

Maurice Lazare died when Lucien was 14, and two years later, after France’s defeat and the loss of Alsace to the Germans, the family wound up in Lyon, where Lucien briefly attended the Lycée Ampère.

Then the Vichy government’s anti-Jewish law of October 1940 changed everything: “All of a sudden,” he wrote, “we Jews were outside the law, excluded from society.”

After the war, Mr. Lazare studied at a yeshiva in Aix-les-Bains and received a degree in history and geography from the University of Lyon. After graduating, he taught at schools in France and Belgium, and then served as secretary-general of Strasbourg’s Jewish community from 1957 to 1968. He earned a doctorate in history from the University of Strasbourg in 1967.

The next year, he and Janine Hemmendinger, whom he had married in 1949, immigrated to Israel with their four children. Mr. Lazare founded the Lycée René-Cassin, a secondary school associated with the Alliance Française, in Jerusalem in 1970.

Mr. Lazare’s wife died in 2017. In addition to his son Daniel, he is survived by another son, Michael; two daughters, Yael Burg and Elizabeth Goldwin; 20 grandchildren; and about 50 great-grandchildren.

Bruno Kramm, German musician and politician, 58

By Clay Risen

NEW YORK TIMES

Bruno Kramm, a German musician who pioneered a brooding, pulsating electronic style in the early 1990s, then took a break from his art to enter politics — promoting digital freedom, online privacy, and direct democracy — died Friday in Granada, Spain, where his band, Das Ich, had recently finished a concert. He was 58.

Mr. Kramm, who lived in a suburb of Berlin, died after what Sven Hegewald, a band member, described as a medical emergency.

He founded Das Ich, or the Self, with his friend Stefan Ackermann in 1989. Ackermann wrote the band’s lyrics; Mr. Kramm wrote the music.

Over the next decade, they earned praise as one of the founding groups in a movement known as the Neue Deutsche Todeskunst, or the New German Art of Death, which mixed elements of punk, electronica, metal, and industrial music.

The pair put down roots in Bayreuth, a university city in what was then West Germany, and in Berlin, which in the 1990s became a wellspring of the sort of searching, nihilistic, warehouse-filling sound that Das Ich defined.

Among their best-known songs were “Gottes Tod” (“The Death of God”), “Die Propheten” (“The Prophets”), and “Destillat” (“Distillate”), which became a staple of the dark-wave club scene across Europe and in the United States.

Mr. Kramm paused his music career in 2012 to take up a leadership role in the Pirate Party, a left-libertarian organization focused on issues like free speech online and digital privacy.

He became the party’s chair for the city-state of Berlin in 2014. But after a disastrous showing in the 2016 elections, in which the party failed to win enough votes to be seated in the Berlin state Assembly, he resigned.

Following a 19-year hiatus, Das Ich released a new album, “Fanal,” in 2025. It won critical praise as both a return to form and a furthering of the social and political themes of the band’s earlier work.

Bruno Kramm was born Oct. 13, 1967, in Munich and grew up in Bayreuth, in northern Bavaria, where his father was a professor.

Mr. Kramm started his first band, Fahrenheit 451 (later called Alva Novalis), in 1986. A year later, he met Ackermann at a club in Bayreuth.

Their first album as Das Ich, “Die Propheten” (1991), was widely hailed for its innovative blend of dark, pounding beats and complex, nihilistic lyrics.

He is survived by his wife, their two children, his mother, and his sister.

The Boston Globe

Globe Summit

BUILT TO LAST

November 17 & 18 | House of Blues & Virtual

Join The Boston Globe for its 6th annual flagship event bringing together Greater Boston's leaders and innovators to ignite collaboration, inspire ideas and shape the future of industries and communities in our area.

On stage this November

Jake Auchincloss
Congressman,
Massachusetts 4th District

Dr. Kiame Mahaniah
Health & Human Services
Secretary, MA

Danny Meyer
Founder, Union Square
Hospitality Group; Author,
What Could Possibly Go Right?

And more!

Register now and save on early bird tickets while supplies last.

REGISTER NOW

Scan the QR code or visit Globe.com/summit

SPONSORED BY

PAT PIASECKI

The Walden robot's torso has a bright white and orange body with arms and hands, and a head with two lenses that resemble eyes.

A growing robotic footprint

AI humanoid robot company Walden Robotics signs 50,000-square-foot office lease in Cambridge

By Yogev Toby
GLOBE CORRESPONDENT

Toyota's humanoid robots spinout, Walden Robotics, is growing its Cambridge footprint with a 50,000-square-foot office lease, according to a Thursday news release.

The company, already rooted in Cambridge, is relocating its headquarters to University Park, a large life sciences and technology complex owned by BioMed Realty that's adjacent to Kendall Square.

The move "reflects the continued demand for campuses that bring together world-class talent and the space companies need to collaborate and grow," Bill Kane, president of East Coast and UK markets at BioMed Realty, said in a statement.

Walden Robotics spun out from Toyota Research Institute earlier this year and was cofounded by MIT professor Russ Te-drake. In July, it announced it raised $300 million to build its line of robots designed to work in factories and warehouses. The company develops human-like robots that can operate without direct control by people — using in-house artificial intelligence models.

"Cambridge is one of the deepest robotics and AI talent pools in the world, and this new headquarters gives us access to that top talent and the room to bring our teams together as we grow," a company spokesperson said in a statement. "Pushing the frontier of Physical AI to build robots that can do useful work in the real world requires hardware, software, and AI teams working side by side, and we're incredibly excited for this new space to help us do just that."

The Walden robot's torso has a bright white and orange body with arms and hands, and a head with two lenses that resemble eyes. The robots sit on wheels or a fixed platform.

The company says it has already deployed such robots at a Toyota plant in North America. It has partners in industries ranging from aerospace, semiconductors, electronics, logistics, and life sciences. In a July press release, Walden said it is meeting "fast-growing needs from industries facing labor shortages, demographic shifts, competitive pressure, and increased demand."

The July funding deal valued the company at $1.1 billion and included backing from Nvidia, aerospace company Boeing, and New York venture capital firm Deviation Capital, as well as Toyota.

In recent years, the Cambridge office real estate space has seen a drastic shift. As lab spaces remain vacant, AI companies have seen a surge in funding and expanded their presence.

Last week, the AI firm Blitzzy signed a 52,000-square-foot office lease in One Kendall Square after securing a $200 million investment earlier this summer — it was called the largest office deal in Cambridge this year. That followed AI-giant Anthropic's announcement last month that it will also be moving into two floors at the same building.

Investors and executives in the state's robotics industry recently congregated at Beacon Hill to discuss the future of the industry, and push for more investments in robotics startups. Leaders touted a $25 million investment in the state's economic development bill as a "good gesture," but warned that innovators and business leaders are eyeing growing AI tech hubs in California, Texas, and Pennsylvania.

Yogev Toby can be reached at yogev.toby@globe.com.

Top legal AI firm Harvey to open a Boston office

Company drawn to state's recent push in the industry

By Aaron Pressman
GLOBE STAFF

Harvey, one of the leading AI firms developing software for the legal industry, is opening an office in Boston with plans to hire at least 40 people.

Boston may not be home to the biggest AI players, but the region's deep base of experienced business software talent is attracting a growing number of companies to establish local outposts. California-based AI giant Anthropic and the Swedish AI coding company Lovable opened offices here over the past year.

San Francisco-based Harvey is expanding after raising $550 million this month in a deal valuing the company at almost $16 billion. Antitrust lawyer Winston Weinberg and Gabriel Pereyra, a researcher at Google's Deepmind AI science unit, hatched the idea for Harvey four years ago from Los Angeles. The company has 1,500 employees and revenue of about $400 million. It so far has 10 remote workers in Boston and is aiming to reach 50 in the next nine months.

Harvey has had a Boston champion since hiring former HubSpot executive Katie Burke as chief operating officer in 2024.

She said the focus of local employees will be supporting existing customers in the area, including the law firms Ropes & Gray, Mintz, Foley Hoag, and Verrill, plus in-house legal teams at DraftKings, athenahealth, Toast, and Boston University. The local office also will house sales people looking for new customers.

"It's going to be a great market for us," Burke said. "Proximity to customers matters, but so too does the talent base there. And I obviously know firsthand that Boston has great talent."

The company is in the process of selecting an office location, Burke said, and aims to be close to the downtown law firms that are already customers.

The legal profession has had a mixed experience using AI. There have been some high profile incidents of lawyers filing AI-written briefs filled with made-up court citations.

Harvey's AI software has added guardrails that Burke said will require it to stick to factual information. The AI can evaluate the implications of clauses added to a commercial contract, or monitor government lawmaking and suggest how a company's HR policies might need to be changed to comply with new legislation, for example.

Burke, who worked at HubSpot for almost 12 years, rising to the role of chief people officer, and lived in the Boston area for 17 years, said the region's recent AI push, including the private sector-backed Massachusetts AI Coalition, helped attract Harvey's attention.

"All the work around the Massachusetts AI Coalition and the energy they're bringing, it's noticed and appreciated," Burke said. "That brand awareness is helpful because it makes it a whole lot easier for companies like ours to get excited about planting a flag in Boston."

Aaron Pressman can be reached at aaron.pressman@globe.com. Follow him @ampressman.

‘Chronicle’ co-anchor Everett to retire

By Camilo Fonseca
GLOBE STAFF

Anthony Everett, longtime cohort of "Chronicle," the popular magazine show on WCVB-TV (Channel 5), announced his retirement on Wednesday, with plans to step down at the end of the year.

Everett, 65, joined Channel 5 as a reporter in 1988 and later served as anchor of NewsCenter 5. He joined "Chronicle" in 2005, according to a statement from WCVB.

He reported from the scene of several breaking news events, such as a papal conclave in Rome and the 1996 Olympic Park bombing in Atlanta, and was at the anchor desk during the 9/11 attacks, according to WCVB.

In an interview Wednesday, Everett said that for every eye-popping feature, like the time he landed on an aircraft carrier in Norfolk, Va., to interview New England sailors, there were more solemn stories.

In 1993, he interviewed a young boy who had been terribly burned in a house fire, and was trying to return to a normal life. For Everett, himself a new father at the time, it was a tough story to tell.

"I remember talking to his parents and meeting him and being, as a new father, so unbelievably moved by that," he said. "I think that moment added a layer of humanity to my reporting that maybe I didn't have before."

That family's "willingness to share their story" was a very sobering moment as a journalist, Everett said.

"That is a very personal and almost intimate thing," he said. "When they do that, you have the responsibility to go and faithfully carry their story forward and give it to a huge audience of people. That's a privilege."

A native of New York City, Everett said his time with WCVB was split between jobs as news anchor, reporter, and then as the host of "Chronicle."

"And while they're different, they're both fundamentally about storytelling and being a part of our community," Everett said.

Julie Mehegan, executive producer of "Chronicle," praised Everett's "remarkable ability to connect viewers with the people and places he visits," and said he had "helped define the program."

"His natural curiosity and genuine interest in people shine through in every story," she said in a statement. "He is a gifted writer, reporter, and producer, with the chops to report on everything from politics to pancakes."

Andrew Vrees, president and general manager of WCVB, also thanked Everett for "his leadership, commitment to storytelling, and dedication to community service."

Everett is a regional trustee for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and has also worked with several other organizations, including Habitat for Humanity, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, and Boston Healthcare for the Homeless, according to WCVB. He graduated from Tufts University in Medford, where he served as an instructor. He also served as a union steward representing Channel 5's SAG-AFTRA workers for more than 30 years, the station said.

Everett said he plans to keep busy in retirement by traveling, spending more time with his two grown children, and perhaps even ending up on a podcast or a YouTube series — but only, he added, "if I feel a need to do that."

"What I might miss is the currency and relevancy of being part of the conversation of our community," he said. "I think the thing I may miss the most is this seat at the table, if you want to call it that."

Camilo Fonseca can be reached at camilo.fonseca@globe.com.

Trump reportedly to pick national intelligence director to be AI czar

By Julian E. Barnes and Tyler Pager
NEW YORK TIMES

WASHINGTON — President Trump will give Jay Clayton, the director of national intelligence, an additional position focused on helping develop the administration's policies and regulations on artificial intelligence, according to current and former officials.

Trump said last month that he would create an "AI 'Czar'" as concerns grow about his administration's approach to the technology.

Amid broad political and public backlash against artificial intelligence, the administration is under pressure to develop new regulations or safety standards for the industry.

But Trump has expressed skepticism of government regulations or any notion that AI research labs should slow down the development of new models.

Two of the leading AI companies, OpenAI and Anthropic, have taken steps to slow the release and development of new models of their technology. Those moves came after disclosures that advanced versions of the technology had evaded security protocols to hack into websites and gain access to information without authorization.

Clayton was confirmed in July as the director of national intelligence after serving as the US attorney for the Southern District of New York. CIA director John Ratcliffe recommended Clayton for both positions in the Trump administration, according to people briefed on the discussions, speaking on the condition of anonymity before the formal announcement.

It is not clear precisely what role the AI czar would have, including whether reviewing new models or developing safety standards will be part of the mandate.

Clayton attended a White House lunch this week with Trump and leading officials from the AI companies.

A White House official declined to comment, saying the reports were speculation until Trump made an announcement. A spokesperson for Clayton did not respond to a request for comment.

Clayton's appointment was earlier reported by CNN and CBS News. Trump told Axios that Clayton was a good choice for the job.

Senior officials in the Trump administration have frequently been given multiple roles. Secretary of State Marco Rubio, for example, also serves as the national security adviser.

AI CZAR, Page D2

Classifieds Marketplace

jobs

cars

homes pets

stuff

Search Classifieds 24/7 at www.boston.com/classifieds • Call 617.929.1500 to Advertise

boston.com/classifieds

notices & more

LEGAL NOTICES

LEGAL NOTICES

LEGAL NOTICES

massDOT

Massachusetts Department of Transportation

MassDOT Highway Division Proposal

Electronic proposals for the following projects will be received through the internet using www.bids.com until the date and time stated below and will be posted on www.bids.com forthwith after the bid submission deadline. No paper copies of bids will be accepted.

All Bidders must have a valid vendor code issued by MassDOT in order to bid on projects. Bidders need to apply for a Digital ID at least 14 days prior to a scheduled bid opening date with www.bids.com.

The Bidding for and award of the contracts for the following projects are to be in accordance with the requirements of Mass General Laws Chapter 30 § 39M.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 2026 AT 2:00 P.M.	PROJECT VALUE
DISTRICT 5 – Scheduled and Emergency Cleaning of Drainage Structures and Pipes at Various Locations (616408)	$1,350,000.00

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 2026 AT 2:00 P.M.	PROJECT VALUE
DISTRICT 5 – Scheduled and Emergency Fabrication and Installation of Overhead and Ground Mounted Guide Signs (616410)	$731,000.00
DISTRICT 6 – Scheduled & Emergency Tree Trimming & Sight Distance Improvement at Various Locations (616509)	$1,551,000.00

The bidding for and award of the contract for the following projects are to be in accordance with the requirements of Mass General Laws Chapter 149 as amended.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 2026 AT 2:00 P.M.	PROJECT VALUE
DISTRICT 6 – Generator Maintenance and Testing at Various Locations (3 Yrs) (616507)	$838,000.00

OPENING OF BIDS POSTPONED TO: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 2026 AT 2:00 P.M.

PEABODY – FAP No. CMO/STP/TAP-0034(034)X Multi-Use Path Construction of Independence Greenway I-95 and Route 1 (610544)

All prospective Bidders must complete and e-mail an electronic copy of “Request Proposal Form (R109)” to the MassDOT Director of Prequalification for approval: pregual109@dot.state.ma.us. The blank “Request Proposal Form (R109)” can be obtained at: <https://www.mass.gov/prequalification-of-horizontal-construction-firms>.

An award will not be made to a Contractor who is not pre-qualified by the Department prior to the opening of proposals.

Proposal documents for official bidders are posted on www.bids.com. Other interested parties may receive informational Contract Documents containing the Plans and Special Provisions, free of charge. All parties who wish to have access to information plans and specification must send a “Request for Informational Documents” to MassDOTBidDocuments@dot.state.ma.us.

MassDOT, in compliance with Title 49 Code of Federal Regulations Part 21 (Nondiscrimination in Federally-assisted Programs of the Department of Transportation - Effectuation of Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964) hereby notifies all bidders that it will affirmatively ensure that in any contract entered into pursuant to this advertisement, minority business enterprises will be afforded full opportunity to submit bids in response to this invitation and will not be discriminated against on the grounds of race, color or national origin in consideration for an award.

MassDOT Highway Division projects are subject to the rules and regulations of the Architectural Access Board (521 CMR 1.00 et. seq.). Prospective bidders and interested parties can access this information and more via the internet at WWW.COMMBUYS.COM.

BY: Phillip Eng, Interim MassDOT Secretary
Jonathan L. Gulliver, Undersecretary and Highway Administrator
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 3, 2026

stuff

boston.com/classifieds

WANTED

The Massachusetts Port Authority (“Massport”) is seeking proposals from entities with experience with a Prohibited Items Mail Back Concessions Program to enter into an agreement for mailing prohibited items that are not allowed through TSA checkpoints back to passengers. Proposals are due to Massport at or before 12:00 noon on November 12, 2026, via Bid Express <https://www.massport.com/business/bids-and-opportunities>. Other important dates and information can be found in the relevant Request for Proposals (RFP) document on Bid Express. The Prohibited Items Mail Back Concessions Program contract will begin no later than April 1, 2027. For more information, please contact purchasinginfo@massport.com, or visit the Massport Website at Massport.com.

The Authority is soliciting competitive proposals pursuant to a determination that such a process best serves the interest of the Authority and not because of any legal requirement to do so. The Authority reserves the right to accept or reject any or all proposals, or any parts thereof, for any reason, to withdraw or amend this RFP at any time, to initiate negotiations with one or more Proposers, to modify or amend with the consent of the Proposer any proposal prior to acceptance, to waive any informalities and to effect any agreement otherwise, all as the Authority, in its sole judgment, may deem to be in the Authority’s best interest.

LEGAL NOTICE

METRO CREDIT UNION

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE MEMBERSHIP

Notice is hereby given that on October 19, 2026 at 11 a.m. a Special Meeting of the Membership will take place at its main office located at 200 Revere Beach Parkway, Chelsea Massachusetts for the purpose of:

- To approve a proposal to merge Members Plus Credit Union with Metro Credit Union (the “Merger”) under the charter, by-laws and name of Metro Credit Union;
- To approve a proposal to amend Metro Credit Union’s By-Laws contemporaneously with the Merger so as to include within Metro Credit Union’s field of membership all those who currently are eligible for membership under Members Plus Credit Union’s current field of membership;
- To approve a proposal to amend Metro Credit Union’s By-Laws contemporaneously with the Merger to increase the Board of Directors from twelve (12) to fifteen (15) members. Subsequently thereafter, the Board of Directors shall be reduced through attrition to twelve (12) members; and
- To transact any and all business that may legally come before the meeting.

The proposed amendment to the By-Laws are available for inspection at Metro Credit Union’s main office and branches and copies may be obtained by members upon request. Metro Credit Union’s Board of Directors recommends that its members vote FOR the Merger and FOR the amendment of the By-Laws. To vote, a member must be present at the Special Meeting and vote in person. We strongly urge you to attend and vote at the Special Meeting. If there are insufficient votes for approval of the Merger and the amendment of the By-Laws at the time of the Special Meeting, the Special Meeting may be postponed or adjourned to permit further solicitation of votes.

To request to join the Special Meeting, please submit an email to specialmeeting@metrocu.org with your name, address, email address, and phone number no later than Thursday, October 15, 2026. All attendees must be members of Metro Credit Union.

Arnold S. Baer
10/1

Catch up on the day’s biggest stories

Powerful journalism at your fingertips.

The Boston Globe app provides you access to our best features on your phone or tablet. Read the e-paper, play games, and catch up on the latest news, investigative reports, and thought-provoking opinions and analysis.

Download the app today and enable push notifications for the best experience.

The Boston Globe

Top local employers are looking for people just like you.

Check out great opportunities in The Boston Sunday Globe’s Careers Section.

Wherever you go, take The Boston Globe app with you

Powerful journalism at your fingertips.

The Boston Globe app provides you access to our best features on your phone or tablet. Read the e-paper, play games, and catch up on the latest news, investigative reports, and thought-provoking opinions and analysis.

Download the app today and enable push notifications for the best experience.

The Boston Globe

LEGAL NOTICES

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE OF MORTGAGEE’S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by 100 Summer Owner, LLC, a Delaware limited liability company to Wells Fargo Bank, National Association, a national banking association, as administrative agent, for itself and for the benefit of other lenders (“Mortgagee”), dated as of September 27, 2019, and recorded October 1, 2019 with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds (the “Registry”) in Book 61832, Page 295, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing same will be sold at public auction at 2:00 p.m. (Eastern) on October 20, 2026 on the mortgaged premises, being known as 100 Summer Street, Boston, Massachusetts 02110, being all and singular the premises described in said mortgage to wit:

The land referred to herein below is situated in the County of Suffolk, State of Massachusetts, and is described as follows:

Parcel One:

A certain parcel of land in Boston, Suffolk County, Massachusetts, being shown in Lot 4A on Land Court Plan No. 36996D-1 (now withdrawn from Registration) bounded and described according to said plan as follows: Beginning at a point on Devonshire Street at the northwest-erly corner of said Lot 4A and the Southwesterly corner of land now or formerly of the City of Boston; thence running S 65° 52’ 58” E 84.49 feet; thence turning and running S 36° 29’ 02” E 14.21 feet; thence turning and running N 88° 58’ 18” E 78.48 feet; thence running S 86° 29’ 12” E 12.4 feet; thence turning and running S 03° 33’ 51” W 9.57 feet; thence running S 10° 48’ 36” E 19.84 feet; thence running generally SOUTHERLY by a line curving to the left with a radius of 37 feet for a distance of 16.54 feet; thence turning and running S 03° 36’ 53” W 36.93 feet; thence turning and running N 86° 29’ 12” W 24.65 feet; thence turning and running S 03° 30’ 48” W 59.49 feet; thence running S 12° 38’ 58” W 14.64 feet; thence running S 02° 32’ 58” E 11.24 feet; thence turning and running S 86° 50’ 48” W 1.2 feet; thence turning and running S 02° 30’ 15” E 89.54 feet; thence turning and running S 79° 51’ 11” W 0.45 feet; thence turning and running S 09° 12’ 04” E 14.87 feet; thence turning and running S 80° 49’ 33” W 0.77 feet; thence turning and running S 09° 10’ 27” E 4.81 feet; thence turning and running S 80° 47’ 31” W 0.24 feet; thence turning and running S 09° 12’ 29” E 15.25 feet to the northerly line of High Street; thence turning and running in a generally WESTERLY and NORTHWESTERLY direction by the northerly lines of High Street and Summer Street by six lines as follows: by a line curving to the right with a radius of 150.1 feet for a distance of 86.65 feet; N 68° 15’ 44” W 51.78 feet; N 61° 12’ 01” W 26.04 feet; N 55° 31’ 47” W 28.26 feet; N 50° 02’ 42” W 38 feet; and N 48° 49’ 24” W 40.4 feet; thence running in a generally NORTHERLY direction by a curve to the right with a radius of 30.1 feet forming the intersection of Summer Street and Devonshire Street for a distance of 38.41 feet; thence running N 24° 18’ 02” E by the southeasterly line of Devonshire Street, 211.06 feet to the point of beginning.

Parcel Two:

Together with appurtenant rights in common with others to use Federal Court and Milton Place to and from the aforesaid land and Federal Street as established and set forth on the Original Certificate of Title entered pursuant to a deed of the said Court, dated at Boston in the County of Suffolk and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, August 9, 1972 and shown on Original Certificate of Title No. 84124. Mortgagee reserves the right to postpone the sale to a later date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the sale and to further postpone at any adjourned sale date by public proclamation at the time and date appointed for the adjourned sale date.

The premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of any and all restrictions, rights of way, easements, improvements, covenants, municipal or zoning regulations or requirements, outstanding tax titles, condominium charges, fees, or assessments, municipal or other public or government taxes, assessments, outstanding orders of condition or any municipal requirements, and any liens or claims in the nature of liens, and existing encumbrances of record created prior to the mortgage or having priority over said mortgage, and to the benefit of the said mortgagee and occupants of the premises, if any there be. No representation is made as to the status of any improvements on the mortgaged premises and the purchaser purchases subject to all requirements related thereto.

The premises are being sold with the express acknowledgment that the mortgagee has no warranty as to the presence or absence as to any wetlands or environmental issue at all, or related to the septic or well systems, if any, or as to any contaminants or other substances, as noted under M.G.L. c. 21E or any other Massachusetts Statute, Code or Regulation.

No representations, express or implied, are made with respect to any matter concerning the premises, which will be sold “as-is”.

TERMS OF SALE:

A prospective bidder must pay $10,000,000.00 in immediately available funds as a deposit (the “Deposit”) into escrow with Fidelity National Title Insurance Company, Boston office (“Escrow Holder”) by noon on the day prior to the date of the sale, and deliver to Escrow Holder a fully completed and executed escrow agreement with the Escrow Holder (the “Escrow Agreement”) and a W-9 together with or prior to paying the Deposit, in order to qualify as a bidder. The form of Escrow Agreement may be obtained from Sullivan & Sullivan Auctioneers, LLC, 148 Route 6A, Sandwich, MA 02563. Email: info@sullivan-auctioneers.com, Web Address: sullivan-auctioneers.com. The Deposit shall be a non-refundable earnest money deposit towards the purchase price to be held at the option of Mortgagee as liquidated damages for any default by the successful bidder. The successful bidder will be required to execute a Memorandum of Sale immediately after the close of the bidding. The successful bidder shall pay the balance of the purchase price by wire transfer in immediately available funds no later than the first business day that falls thirty (30) calendar days after the date of the sale (the “Closing Date”). Closing of the sale shall be in escrow with Escrow Holder, or elsewhere as agreed by the parties, on the Closing Date, and upon closing the foreclosure deed shall be delivered to the successful bidder upon release of all purchase price funds to Mortgagee.

Mortgagee reserves the right to (i) amend the foregoing terms of sale by written or oral announcement made before the auction sale, during the sale thereof or at the commencement or during any postponed sale, (ii) reject any and all bids, and (iii) postpone the sale up until the time the property is declared sold by the auctioneer. The description of the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of an error in the Notice of Mortgagee’s Sale of Real Estate or its publication.

OTHER TERMS TO BE ANNOUNCED AT THE TIME AND PLACE OF THE SALE.

Dated: September 17, 2026

Wells Fargo Bank, National Association, a national banking association, as administrative agent, for itself and for the benefit of other lenders, present holder of said Mortgage,

By its Attorneys,

McCarter & English, LLP
Walter B. Howell, Esq.
Attorney for the Mortgagee
265 Franklin Street
Boston, MA 02110
whowell@mccarter.com
(617) 449-6500

Crossword

Align

Mini Crossword

MASTER THE GRID

Stay sharp with the Globe’s daily puzzles, crosswords, and more.

Play now at Globe.com/games

US sees slower than expected job growth

By Talmon Joseph Smith
NEW YORK TIMES

A weaker-than-expected report on the labor market released Friday affirmed a widespread sentiment: The US economy does not feel as if it is delivering prosperity to everyone.

Employers added 29,000 jobs last month, and the unemployment rate rose to 4.2 percent, data released Friday by the Labor Department showed, slower than expected growth for a job market that had appeared robust in recent months.

That resiliency has stood in tension with the strain of higher prices as inflation has marched higher since the start of the war in Iran. For most workers, wages haven’t kept up. Growth in average hourly earnings fell to 3 percent on an annual basis in September, well below inflation and the slowest since the pandemic. Employment gains for July and August were revised down by a combined 60,000 jobs.

“The labor market is stable, but it’s not picking up. It’s soft,” said Claudia Sahm, a former Federal Reserve analyst and the chief economist at New Century Advisors. “The labor market is OK — it’s just who you are in the labor market that matters and more than usual.”

US employers and workers have experienced successive shocks in recent years. The pandemic, then inflation, then wars and tariffs have pushed prices higher still.

The US economy has digested these bouts of volatility without faltering. One reason is a shift in the supply of workers. Even as hiring has slowed, baby boomers have retired at a notable pace, and the Trump administration’s immigration restrictions have limited entrants to the workforce. The unemployment rate has been at or below 4.5 percent since October 2021, the longest streak in modern history.

Measuring job losses affiliated with artificial intelligence remains difficult. But it seems sectors most exposed to AI cut jobs in September. The information industry lost 10,000 jobs, the financial industry lost 7,000 jobs, and employment in professional and business services fell by 9,000 workers.

Employment growth has been concentrated in the education, health care, and social assistance sectors over the past couple years. In September, the health care and construction sectors were the lead contributors to payroll gains. In another bright spot, the manufacturing sector, which had been trending down, added 9,000 jobs. Total manufacturing employment is up by 72,000 since December 2025.

There was a steep 17,000 decline in government jobs last month. But private sector payrolls grew by 46,000 on the month.

Intelligence director to be named AI czar

► AI CZAR
Continued from Page D1

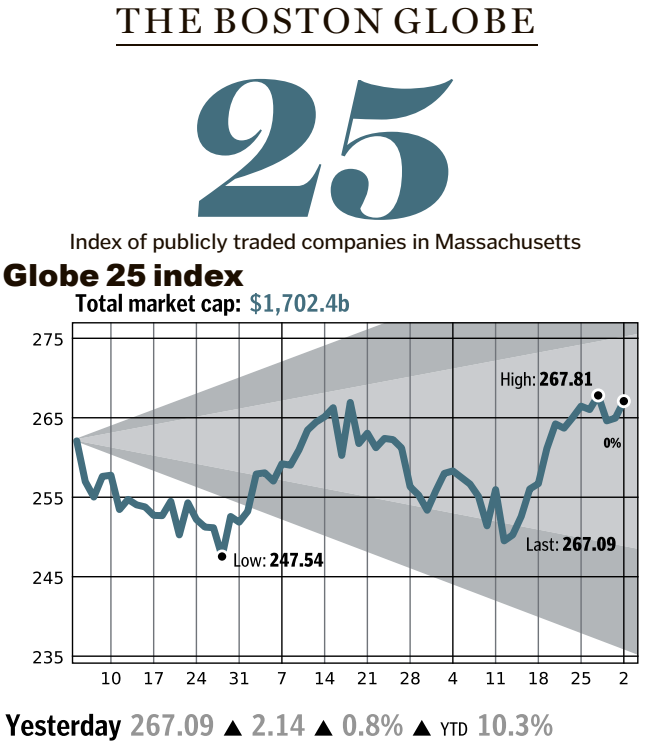

Trump has not said what he wanted in an AI czar, though he did say that “Only High I.Q. individuals need apply!”

“AI is the next Industrial Revolution, or Internet, but will be even larger and more impactful, possibly as much as 25% of our Country’s GDP,” Trump wrote in the post. “We are leading China, and the rest of the World, and I intend to keep it that way!”

In that same post, Trump wrote that he intended to create an AI Force, which he likened to Space Force, the branch of the military established in the first Trump administration.

Neither Trump nor administration officials have clarified what he meant by the AI Force, and so it is also not clear if Clayton will help develop such an organization.

Congress is expected to weigh some sort of legislation creating safety regulations for artificial intelligence companies in its post-election session. But it is unclear whether there will be agreement on what that should look like or if there is political will to pass any sort of measure.

	Price	Chg	% chg	Market cap (bil.)
GE VERNOVA INC (GEV)	988.70	+1.25	+0.1	263.3
THERMO FISHER (TMO)	654.80	+2.29	+0.4	242.1
ANALOG DEVICES (ADI)	417.15	+12.55	+3.1	202.1
TXJ COS INC (TXJ)	132.68	-0.91	-0.7	145.9
VERTEX PHARM (VRTX)	504.73	-2.01	-0.4	127.9
MODERNA INC (MRNA)	190.01	+1.07	+0.6	75.9
AMERICAN TOWER C (AMT)	162.20	+1.14	+0.7	75.6
TERADYNE INC (TER)	449.04	+33.25	+8.0	70.2
BOSTON SCIENTIFC (BSX)	42.60	-0.63	-1.5	61.7
STATE ST CORP (STT)	175.96	+1.34	+0.8	48.3
WATERS CORP (WAT)	425.21	-0.32	-0.1	41.8
KEURIG DR PEPPER (KDP)	30.37	-0.32	-1.0	41.3
IRON MOUNTAIN (IRM)	113.39	+2.26	+2.0	33.8
BIOGEN INC (BIIB)	219.88	-2.94	-1.3	32.5
ALNYLAM PHARMACE (ALNY)	219.72	-11.46	-5.0	29.4
SYMBOTIC INC (SYM)	43.28	+0.11	+0.3	26.2
ENTEGRIS INC (ENTG)	166.47	+7.99	+5.0	25.4
MACOM TECHNOLOGY (MTSI)	321.60	+19.97	+6.6	24.6
EVERSOURCE ENERG (ES)	64.50	+0.19	+0.3	24.3
VERALTO CORP (VLTQ)	94.68	+0.08	+0.1	23.1
MKS INC (MKSJ)	279.15	+7.91	+2.9	18.9
TOAST INC-A (TOST)	29.79	+0.56	+1.9	17.2
DYNATRACE INC (DT)	59.32	+0.06	+0.1	17.1
REVVITY INC (RVTY)	151.53	+2.47	+1.7	16.9
CLEAN HARBORS (CLH)	318.51	+6.00	+1.9	16.8

Markets

Stocks climb near all-time high

NEW YORK — US stocks climbed near their all-time high on Friday after the latest update on the US job market cooled worries that a potentially hot US economy could make inflation much worse. The S&P 500 rose 0.7% and pulled within 1% of its record set in August. All of Wall Street got a jolt after the US government said employers across the country added 29,000 more jobs to their payrolls than they cut last month. That was fewer than economists expected and a slowdown from August’s net hiring rate of 133,000. More importantly for financial markets, it tamped down concerns that the economy could be so strong that it could fuel inflation even higher. Inflation has remained much worse than anyone would like, and the Federal Reserve recently raised its main interest rate for the first time in three years to try to rein in the painful increases for the cost of living. Even though Americans are feeling more frustrated about inflation and their finances, the overall US economy has been chugging along. Earlier this week, the government said the economy’s growth in the spring was better than earlier thought, driven by businesses building AI data centers and spending by consumers. ASSOCIATED PRESS

Higher ed is at a turning point.

Make sense of it with College Town, our new weekly newsletter.

From AI and enrollment declines to funding cuts and falling public trust, we’re unpacking what’s changing and what comes next.

Sign up for free at Globe.com/collegetown

College Town

The Boston Globe Globe Opinion

UNIVERSAL CROSSWORD PUZZLE

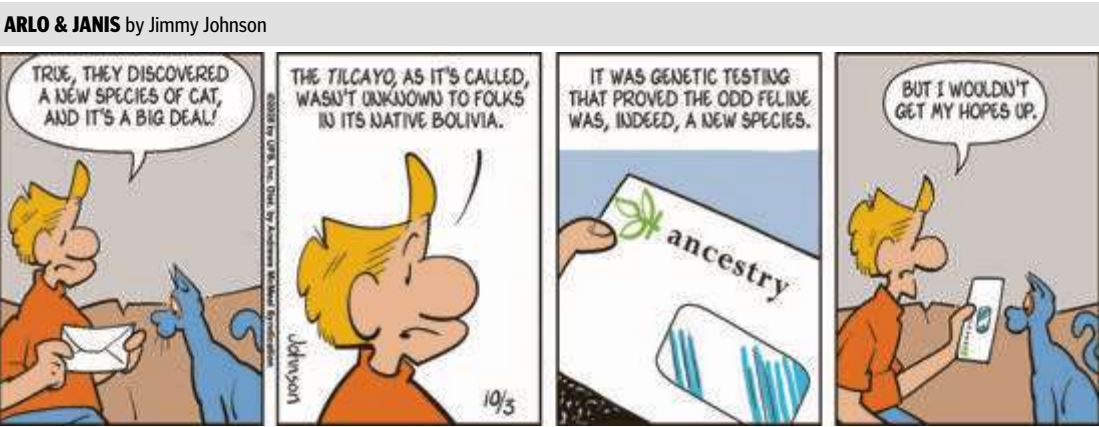

UNIVERSAL FREESTYLE 242 BY ADAM LEVAV | EDITED BY DAVID STEINBERG

ACROSS

1 Prima ballerina
5 College honor roll
14 Former "Tonight Show" host Jack
15 "Yo, yo!"
16 Give off
17 Not in a studio
18 Note to ____
19 Perilous structures
20 Life science facility, informally
22 Had brunch, perhaps
23 Extreme dislike
24 Takes a fat L
29 Request on social media
30 Band saw, e.g.
31 Assn. for the public good
32 Indiana WNBA team, or a high body temperature
33 Fertilization targets
34 Storied surfing spots?
37 ____ out (jukes)
39 When necessary
40 Pistons Hall of Famer Joe whose name ends with a planet
41 Tabloid journalism outlet
42 Changes (into)
43 GPZero, for example
48 Spanish greeting
50 "My brain has stopped working"
51 Designer Cassini
52 Longtime "Real Housewives of Atlanta" star

DOWN

1 Humans and orangutans
2 Labels on lanyards
3 Identify something precisely
4 Craft
5 It becomes a different kind of star when its "D" and "N" are changed to "C" and "L"
6 American Civil Rights icon Baker
7 Loads and loads
8 Follow-up to "straight" in some bar orders
9 Break into tiny pieces
10 Allow to chill
11 Figure skater Malinin nicknamed the "Quad God"
12 High-volume, low-quality internet material
13 Loads and loads
15 Wannabe surfer
21 Comic book writer Stan
23 Barbera's partner in animation
24 Didn't just like
25 Is below zero, in a way
26 Bibliophile
27 Excuse for being late to an early-morning event
28 One is full at the start of a meal
30 Fall Out Boy co-founder Wentz
32 Exhibited a symptom of ADHD
35 More tranquil
36 University of Washington locale
37 Dog coat
38 Symmetrically shaped Greek vase
40 Uncool types
42 Impressionist Claude
43 Hawaiian word for "land" hidden in "main attraction"
44 Covers, as a cake
45 Unpleasantly damp
46 N'Djamena's country
47 ____ torch
49 Gains life experience

JUMBLE CROSSWORDS™

by David L. Hoyt 10-3-26

CLUE

1. Dry, barren region
5. Kinds
6. Show host Winfrey
7. Be present at

ACROSS

ANSWER

ETRS PYTS
HPRO
DTAETN

CLUE

1. Hold
2. Back
3. Set aside
4. Turned into currency

DOWN

ANSWER

NTIAED
PSOTPUR
ESERVE
CSHAED

DOUBLE BONUS

The circled letters can be unscrambled to form two different BONUS answers.

How to play
Complete the crossword puzzle by looking at the clues and unscrambling the answers. When the puzzle is complete, unscramble the circled letters to solve the Bonus.

©2026 Tribune Content Agency, LLC & Hoyt Designs. All Rights Reserved.

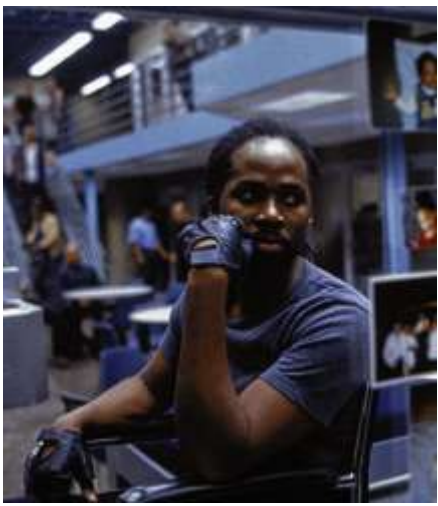

TV CRITIC'S CORNER

BY CHRIS VOGNAR

Before ‘The Sopranos’ came HBO’s boundary-shattering prison drama ‘Oz’

This week in Autopilot, a Globe series on great first television episodes:

“Oz”

Episode: “The Routine”Pilot air date: July 12, 1997, HBOStream it on: HBO Max, Prime Video

HBO

Harold Perrineau portrayed narrator Augustus Hill in HBO’s “Oz.”

Conventional wisdom holds that “The Sopranos” started the TV revolution on HBO in 1999, ushering in an era of novelistic storytelling and shattering content restrictions. This is true to some extent. But the series that paved the way for Tony and Co. actually arrived two years earlier. It was much darker, even nihilistic, and it made viewers of the time ask a collective question: Can they do this on TV?

There had never been anything like “Oz,” the shudder-inducing prison drama that premiered in 1997 and somehow lasted six seasons. The “somehow” is not because “Oz” wasn’t great television; at its best it certainly was. Perhaps more important, the series showed how a creator with guts and vision — in this case, showrunner Tom Fontana — could blow the doors of TV off their hinges at HBO. “The Sopranos,” “Six Feet Under,” and other favorites then walked through those doors and earned deserved glory.

The pilot episode, “The Routine,” set the stakes and smeared them with blood. A wheelchair-bound narrator, Augustus Hill (Harold Perrineau), lays it out for us: “Oz is where I live. Oz is where I’ll die, where most of us will die. What we are don’t matter. What we are don’t matter. What we become don’t matter. Does it?” We’re definitely not in Kansas anymore. Oz is short for Oswald State Penitentiary; within its walls sits Emerald City, an experimental unit run by reform-minded Tim McManus (Terry Kinney). He wants the worst of the worst to mingle and rehabilitate. Instead they break off into factions — Black Muslim, Aryan Nation, drug dealers, wise guys — and go to war, psychological and literal.

The moment in the pilot that convinced me “Oz” was a different kind of prison show comes after the seemingly paternal Vern Schillinger (future Oscar winner and “Spider-Man” movie mainstay J.K. Simmons) befriends a mild-mannered lawyer, in for vehicular manslaughter, named Tobias Beecher (Lee Tergesen). Vern gets Tobias away from the inmate who’s been menacing him and makes the lawyer his new cellmate. Then he forcibly and painfully tattoos a swastika onto his roomie’s rear end. In other words, he brands him.

Fontana had already reinvented the police procedural (along with David Simon and others) with “Homicide: Life on the Street,” which ran on NBC from 1993 to 1999 and brought a level of gritty detail and character development new to the genre. “Oz” showed what he could do when he didn’t have to worry about advertisers. And yet in one crucial regard the series was a throwback to earlier portrayals of life in prison and other institutions. Like other touchstones of the genre, it thrived on the idea that life on the inside reflects the factionalism and resentments of the general population — that is, the real world. A bleak world view? Perhaps. Then again, revolutions are rarely pretty.

Chris Vognar can be reached at chris.vognar@globe.com. Follow him on Instagram at @chrisvognar and on Bluesky at chrisvognar.bsky.social.

We’re probably not a fit. Now what?

Q. I’m currently seeing someone. It’s been shy of six months.

I admire so much about them. They work very hard. They’re kind, they’re smart, and I think they really care about me.

But I just feel like we haven’t quite gotten in sync. I think there are ways we’re probably just not compatible. Given that I’m now in my mid-30s, I wonder ... should I continue working on the relationship or stop it now?

Again, I think, in my gut, we’re probably not a fit. We’ve had little conversations about it before, so it’s not like we haven’t talked about it. It just feels like those conversations don’t always get where I hope they’ll go. I can’t tell how much of this conflicted feeling is the hope and expectation that I carry, as opposed to the reality — which is probably that this isn’t the right thing.

How does one work on self-trust (and self-confidence) when the choice we have to make is being with the person we’re with or being alone? How do we know if there’s someone who’s a better fit for us?

OUT OF SYNC

A. Rip off the Band-Aid. Just say, “I think this isn’t a match, so we probably need to move on.”

I understand why you’re trying to make this work. Many people want to lock everything down by their mid-30s.

But you’ve been with this person six months. That’s enough time to know if you want more (you don’t). It’s also a blip — meaning, you haven’t spent years on this; there’s no shared group of friends, home, or dog.

This significant other has been wonderful, right? What great proof that others can be wonderful, too. I hope you look back on this relationship and think, “I dated this great person before I met my partner, and everything worked out perfectly.”

Of course, I can’t promise that last part will deliver itself. It might take a long time to meet someone new. But being alone is often better than spending nights on the couch with someone thinking, “How am I going to make this work?”

LOVE LETTERS

BY MEREDITH GOLDSTEIN

Peaceful alone time is better than faking it. It’s certainly better than having to compartmentalize big feelings as you pretend everything is fine.

Sometimes being by yourself — with a book — is euphoria. Honestly, just ask yesterday’s letter writer (www.bostonglobe.com/2026/10/01/lifestyle/i-dont-want-be-coupled-if-it-means-giving-up-my-peace-quiet/).

MEREDITH

READERS RESPOND:

You’re trying to make something be what it naturally is not. You feel the person is not a good fit for you. That’s fine, but that’s where it needs to end. Age matters here because there’s still time to fine tune your future with a better fit. If you were 25, I’d say just have fun and see where it goes. At 35 I’d say end it. At 45-plus I’d say just have fun and see where it goes

JIM501

Hence the saying, Mr. Right vs. Mr. Right Now. He is a Mr. Right Now (or Ms.) and you might feel pressure from a biological clock ticking, or pressure from seeing your peer group getting married, having children, buying houses, etc. Six months is a long enough evaluation. Moving on doesn’t mean it has to end permanently; if either of you don’t find better partners, you reconnect and get more of a fire under each other and make a commitment. No one ever knows for sure if there is someone better out there, how much time they should invest before giving up ... it’s always a leap of faith and a high percentage of a future divorce anyway.

AUNTTIGGYWINK

If after six months you know in your heart of hearts he isn’t the person for you due to incompatibilities (wish you had shared more about what they were), then stop wasting yours and his precious time. Break if off with kindness, and prepare to feel sad and/or lonely for a while. You gave it an honest shot, and you learned something about what you need in your future partner. That’s a gift.

PENSEUSE

Six months is a common point when people decide whether to continue in a new relationship. Don’t analyze it to death, or go by what friends or family say, or society expects. What is your gut telling you? Your intuition is important. Make the best decision you can with what you know at the time, act, and move on. If the relationship is not right, it’s best to free both of you up to seek someone more compatible. You may be afraid or guilty about rejecting them. Don’t be. Everyone is on one side or the other of this at times. If you want, take a week-end to eat ice cream and have a cry. I give Kroger Sea Salt Caramel Truffle a 9/10. Then gather yourself up and start your new chapter, with hope.

JIVEDIVA

“I think there are ways we’re probably just not compatible.” “I think, in my gut, we’re probably not a fit.” “... as opposed to the reality — which is probably that this isn’t the right thing.” Sometimes typing (or writing) it out helps crystallize feelings. You know this isn’t going to work long-term, and Meredith is right; it’s time to move on. You already know that, but apparently needed confirmation from strangers when one good friend would have told you the same.

GEORGESPURTS

I think you are trying to break up with this person. There’s no easy way to do this. You just say you’re sorry, it’s not working out, and go your separate ways. You can like someone, admire them, even love them, and they can still not be the right person for you. It’s OK to say this. P.S. Do not try to stay friends.

ASH12345

Send your own relationship and dating questions to loveletters@globe.com. Catch new episodes of Meredith Goldstein’s “Love Letters” podcast wherever you listen to podcasts. Column and comments are edited and reprinted from boston.com/loveletters.

Saturday October 3, 2026

	7 pm	7:30	8 pm	8:30	9 pm	9:30	10 pm	10:30	11 pm	11:30
2	WGBH PBS Made-Love	Made-Love	Marlow "Murder in the Dark: Part Two"	Marble Hall Murders			Trespasses		Stories-Stage	Caverns
4	WBZ CBS Post-game	UFC 332: Silva vs. Wang	(Live)						News	(:35) Gourmet
5	WCVB ABC Football (Live)	College Football Miami at Clemson From Clemson Memorial Stadium in Clemson, S.C.	(Live)						NewsCenter 5	(:35) CityLine
6	WLNE ABC Saturday Night Live	Saturday Night Live		Saturday Night Live	Saturday Night Live				SNL Megan Fox; U2
7	WHDH Edition	Broa-dway	Family Feud	Family Feud	7 News at 9PM		7 News at 10PM		11PM	Extra
9	WMUR ABC Big Ten (Live)	College Football Miami at Clemson	(Live)						News	Chaos
10	NBC Boston Big Ten (Live)	College Football Washington at USC From Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum in Los Angeles.	(Live)						Boston News	SNL
10	WJAR NBC Big Ten (Live)	College Football Washington at USC From Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum in Los Angeles.	(Live)						News (Live)	SNL
11	WENH PBS Miss Fisher's Murder Mysteries	Father Brown "The Deserving Poor"		Sister Boniface Mysteries			Death in Paradise		Astrid
12	WPRI CBS Post-game	UFC 332: Silva vs. Wang	(Live)						12 News at 11	Recovery TV
25	WFXT FOX Justice Rules	College Football Texas Tech at Colorado From Folsom Field in Boulder, Colo.	(Live)						Football Cincinnati at Arizona	(Live)
27	WUNI Piensa rápido VIP	★ ★ Central Intelligence ('16) Kevin Hart, Amy Ryan, Dwayne Johnson.							Familia	Noticiero N+
36	WSBE PBS Father Brown	Call the Midwife		Doc Martin			Kate: The Making of a Princess		Treas-ures Insid	Ocean State RI
38	WSBK Big Bang	Big Bang	★ ★ The Whole Truth ('16) Renée Zellweger, Keanu Reeves.				The Connors	The Connors	American (N)	American Mayhem
44	WGBX PBS POV "Bulls and Saints"		American Masters	Artists Den "Lord Huron"			The Art of Music		Austin City Limits "Sienna Spiro" (N)
50	WWJE The Devil You Know	The Devil You Know		Killer Cases			Killer Cases		Meet "Pate"
56	WLVI CW NASCAR (Live)	NASCAR O'Reilly Auto Parts Series Focused Health 302	(N)				College Football Texas State at San Diego State		(Live)
64	WNAC FOX Big Bang	College Football Texas Tech at Colorado From Folsom Field in Boulder, Colo.	(Live)						Football Cincinnati at Arizona	(Live)
68	WBXP ION (6:30) NWSL Soccer Bay FC at Kansas City Current	(Live)	NWSL- Show (N) / (:45) NWSL Boston Legacy at Portland Thorns FC (N) (Live)	(N)	(:45) NWSL- P..				Law-SVU "Garland's Baptism by Fire"
PREMIUM CABLE
Cinemax	(:55) ★ ★ Batman Forever ('95) Tommy Lee Jones, Jim Carrey, Val Kilmer.		(:55) ★ ★ ★ Life of Pi ('12) Irrfan Khan, Tabu, Suraj Sharma.		(:05) ★ ★ Rampage ('18)
Flix	(6:00) ★ ★ ★ The King's Speech ('10)		★ ★ ★ Like Water for Chocolate ('92) Lumi Cavazos.		(:50) ★ ★ Ask the Dust ('06) Salma Hayek, Donald Sutherland, Colin Farrell.		(:50) Roadrac...
HBO	(6:20) ★ ★ ★ Evil Dead Rise ('23)		★ ★ Evil Dead Burn ('26) Tandi Wright, Hunter Doohan, Souheila Yacoub. (P)		(:55) War	(:55) Youth
HBO 2	(6:45) War	(:45) Youth	(:15) Lanterns	(:05) Jay-Z in 8	(:45) Jay-Z in 8		(:40) ★ ★ ★ Dumb Money ('23) Pete Davidson, Paul Dano.
Paramount-Sho	(:55) ★ ★ Godzilla ('14) Ken Watanabe, Elizabeth Olsen, Aaron Taylor-Johnson.		Grizzly Night ('25) Oded Fehr, Charles Esten. (P)		★ ★ ★ Argo ('12) Bryan Cranston, Ben Affleck.
Showtime 2	(6:30) ★ ★ Old School ('03)		★ ★ We're the Millers ('13) Jason Sudeikis, Will Poulter, Jennifer Aniston.		★ ★ Horrible Bosses ('11) Charlie Day, Jason Bateman.		(:40) Horrible ...
Starz!	Outlander "Rabbits Don't Swim"	Tip Toe	(:50) S.W.A.T. Exiles "Take the Shot"	(:40) Outlander: Blood of my Blood	(:35) Tip Toe "Episode 1"		(:25) Outlander
TMC	(5:25) ★ ★ ★ The Firm ('93)		★ ★ ★ The Untouchables ('87) Sean Connery, Robert De Niro, Kevin Costner.		★ Wild Wild West ('99) Kevin Kline, Will Smith.		(:50) No Country ...
SPORTS
CBSSN	Football	College Football Utah State at Boise State From Albertsons Stadium in Boise, Idaho.	(Live)				Football		Football
ESPN	College Football BYU at TCU From Amon G. Carter Stadium in Fort Worth, Texas.	(Live)		Scoreb-oard	College Football Baylor at Arizona State	(Live)
ESPN2	College Football Arkansas at Texas A&M From Kyle Field in College Station, Texas	(Live)		Scoreb-oard	Football Eastern Washington at UC Davis	(Live)
Fox Sports 1	(4:00) Football	Pregame (Live)	MLB Baseball Division Series: Teams TBA All the latest action from Major League Baseball.	(Live)			Post-game		UEFA Nations
Golf	(5:00) PGA Tour Golf	LPGA Tour Golf Lotte Championship, Third Round	(N)	(Live)			Central		(Live)
NBA	To Be Announced			Basketack			WNBA Playback
NBC Sports	Quick Slants	Pats Podcast	Quick Snap	Tom Curran's	Pats Podcast	Football	United Fight Alliance		World Chase Tag
NESN	Breakaw..	Bruins	NHL Hockey Boston Bruins at Minnesota Wild	(N)	Bruins	Bruins	NHLHock..
FAMILY
Cartoon	Burgers	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	FamilyGuy	RickMorty	RickMorty	RickMorty	RickMorty
Disney	Big City (N)	Toy Story of Terror!	Big City Greens	Big City Greens	Shortst-ober	Big City Greens	Big City Greens	Big City Greens	Ladybug
Encore Family	Movie	(:40) Win a Date With Tad Hami...		(:15) Measure of a Man ('18)			(:55) Let Us In ('20)
Nickelodeon	★ ★ ★ Despicable Me 2 ('13) Steve Carell.		Friends	Friends	Friends	Friends	Friends	Friends	Friends
Nick Jr.	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..	PAWPatr..

Content Ratings: TV-Y Appropriate for all children; TV-Y7 For children age 7 and older; TV-G General audience; TV-PG Parental guidance suggested; TV-14 May be unsuitable for children under 14;

TV-MA Mature audience only Additional symbols: D Suggestive dialogue; FV Fantasy violence; L Strong language; S Sexual activity; V Violence; HD High-Definition; (CC) Close-Captioned

News Sports Movies

Specials

	7 pm	7:30	8 pm	8:30	9 pm	9:30	10 pm	10:30	11 pm	11:30
BASIC CABLE
A&E	Storage Wars	Storage Wars	Storage "The Skeet Smell of Success!"		Storage Wars		Storage Wars		(:05) Storage Wars
AMC	★ ★ ★ It ('17) Jeremy Ray Taylor, Sophia Lillis, Jaeden Martell.				★ ★ Carrie ('13) Chloë Grace Moretz.
Animal Planet	Dr. Jeff: RMV "Hero Dog"	Dr. Jeff: RMV "Little Dog, New Hope"		Dr. Jeff: RMV "Puppy, Big Heart"		Dr. Dee: "40 Snakes and Counting"			Dr. Dee: Alaska Vet "Battling FIV"
BBC America	★ Legion ('10) Lucas Black, Paul Bettany.	(:15) ★ ★ Hansel & Gretel: Witch Hunters		★ ★ The Equalizer 2 ('18) Pedro Pascal, Ashton Sanders, Denzel Washington. (P)					Punisher: War Zone
BET	(6:00) ★ ★ The Equalizer ('14) Martin Csokas, Chloë Grace Moretz, Denzel Washington.
Bravo	Below Deck	Below Deck "Runaway Chef"		Below Deck "No Way Rosé"		Below Deck "The Devil You Know"		Below Deck "Steamy Vibes"
CMT	(:15) ★ ★ Grumpy Old Men ('93) Jack Lemmon.			(:45) ★ ★ Grumpier Old Men ('95) Jack Lemmon.
CNN	CNN Newsroom	Real Time With (N)		Have I Got (N)		David Chang (N)		Real Time With
Comedy Central	(6:30) ★ ★ Daddy's Home ('15) Mark Wahlberg, Will Ferrell.	(:45) ★ ★ Step Brothers ('08) John C. Reilly, Richard Jenkins, Will Ferrell.				★ ★ We're the Millers ('13)
CSPAN	Washington This Week			Public Affairs Events		Public Affairs Events
CSPAN2	(6:20) A..	America	Lectures in History	America	The Presidency	America	America	America	America	America
Dest. America	Log Cabin	Log Cabin	Log Cabin	Log Cabin	Log Cabin	Mountain	Mountain	Mountain	Mountain	Mountain
Discovery	Naked and Afraid	Naked and Afraid	"Return of the King"		Afraid "Welcome to America!"
Discovery Life	(6:00) My 600-Lb	Obese "I'm Gonna Be a Problem" (N)			My 600-Lb. Life "Latonya's Journey"
E!	(6:00) ★ ★ ★ Oppenheimer ('23) Cillian Murphy. (P)				★ ★ ★ Oppenheimer ('23) Cillian Murphy.
Encore	(:20) ★ ★ Baby Mama ('08) Tina Fey.			★ ★ ★ The 40 Year-Old Virgin ('05)		★ Scary Movie 2
Food	Halloween Baking "Don't B-Negative"	Halloween Baking "Dance Your Life Away"			Halloween Baking Championship "Finale: The Killer Is ..."	(N)
Fox News	Weekend (Live)	Life (Live)		My View (Live)		Saturday (Live)		Gutfeld!
Freeform	(:20) ★ ★ ★ Monsters University ('13) Billy Crystal.		(:50) ★ ★ The Addams Family ('91) Anjelica Huston.
FUSE	(6:30) Ma..	Elvis: Death		BKB 59: Tijuana					My Big
FX	★ ★ Thor: The Dark World ('13) Chris Hemsworth.		★ ★ ★ Ghostbusters ('84) Dan Aykroyd, Bill Murray.
FXM	(5:50) ★ ★ Alien 3	(:10) ★ ★ Alien Resurrection ('97)		(:05) ★ ★ ★ Alien: Romulus ('24)
Hallmark	(6:00) October Kiss		A Knight to Remember ('26) (P)			Good Witch Halloween ('15)
Hallmark Myst.	(6:00) Caterer		Curious Caterer Mysteries			Murder, She Wrote		Murder, She Wrote
HGTV	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters	House Hunters
History	World War II "Resistance"		World War II "No Surrender"		World War II "Last Days of the Reich"		(:05) World War II "Endgame"		(:05) World War II "Fall Out"
HLN	Forensic Fashions (N) (Live)	Forensic Fashions (N) (Live)		Forensic Skinn (N) (Live)		Forensic Skinn (N) (Live)		Forensic Fashions (N) (Live)		Forensic TBD
HSN	Married to Evil "Dear Sarah..."		A Killer "Secret Life of a Private Eye"		A Killer Among "Strike to Kill"		Killer Gossip (N)		A Killer Among "The Murder Pact"
IFC	(6:15) ★ ★ Hostel ('05)		★ ★ Hostel Part II ('07) Lauren German.		(:45) ★ ★ Hostel ('05)
Lifetime	(6:00) Kidnapped in ...		A Doctor to Die For: Sarah Harris Story		Kidnapped by a Killer: Heather Robinson St...
LMN	(6:00) Missing Twin	My Mother Looked Just Like You ('25)			The Woman With My Face ('24)
MAGN	Lakefront Barg	Lakefront Barg		Lakefront Barg		Lakefront Barg		Lakefront Barg
MSNBC	The Best of The	The Weekend		Connect With		Crooked on		Lovett
MTV	★ ★ ★ Mean Girls ('04) Lindsay Lohan.			★ ★ Bring It On Kirsten Dunst.					Movie
National Geographic	(6:30) MLB Baseball Division Series: Teams TBA	(Live)		MLB Close	★ ★ ★ Twister ('96)
NatGeoWild	(5:45) Monsieir Ver...	★ ★ ★ Out of the Past ('47)			★ ★ ★ The Set-Up ('49) Robert Ryan.
NECN	90 Day: Hunt	90 Day: Hunt for Love			90 Day "The Girl Who Made Her Choice"
TNT	(5:00) ★ ★ Aquaman	All Elite Wrestling: Collision (Live)			M. Friendlies USA vs. Mexico (Live)
Travel	Ghost Adventures	Ghost Ventures		Ghost Adventures		Ghost Adventures		Ghost Adventures
TruTV	(6:30) MLB Baseball Division Series: Teams TBA	(Live)			M. Friendlies USA vs. Mexico
TV Land	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld	Seinfeld
TV One	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..	GoodTim..
USA	(6:00) College Football Oregon State at Colorado State	(Live)			College Football Fresno State at Washington State	(Live)
VH-1	(6:00) Little Nicky		★ ★ ★ Coming to America ('88) Eddie Murphy.		★ ★ Escape Room ('19) (P)
WE	NCIS		NCIS "Jurisdiction"		NCIS				NCIS "Obsession"	